Q&A

Piedmont Newton's CEO, Lindsey Petrini

By EMILY ROSE HAMBY
Staff Writer

NEWTON COUNTY - In mid-July, Lindsey Petrini became Piedmont Newton Hospital's CEO - the fourth female CEO appointed by Piedmont Healthcare since the start of 2023.

An Arkansas native, Petrini attended the University of Central Arkansas and studied mass communication before obtaining her master's degree in journalism at the University of Arkansas. In May, Petrini will receive her master's in business administration from the University of Georgia.

Prior to her employment with Piedmont Newton, Petrini fulfilled leadership roles at Wellstar North Fulton Medical Center. There, she provided leadership oversight for multiple accreditation initiatives and executed several projects, including the expansion of cardiac catheterization and vascular services, hospital bed expansion, a cancer center and multiple off-campus outpatient departments.

Her decision to move to the area was both "professional and personal." Along with the opportunity to assume the position of hospital CEO, which is one of Petrini's dreams, she and her family were also looking to move outside of Atlanta.

The hospital's newly appointed CEO provided insight on her career, hobbies and passions in the health-care industry with The Covington News.

What was your childhood like?

LP: I am originally from Hot Springs, Arkansas. It's about an hour southwest of Little Rock. My parents and both sets of grandparents are from Arkansas. My mom was an elementary school teacher and my dad was a certified public accountant. I have one older brother who lives in Franklin, Tenn., with his wife and twin girls.

I had a great childhood. Hot Springs is a city that is also a national park, so there are lots of things to do outside. It is nestled in the Ouachita Mountains and surrounded by four lakes. The city has some really inter-

COUNTY COMMUNICATION

Hays gives update on notification system

By EMILY ROSE HAMBY
Staff Writer

NEWTON COUNTY - In January, the Newton County Superior Court Clerk's office introduced the Filing Activity Notification System (FANS) in conjunction with the Georgia Superior Court Clerks' Cooperative Authority (GSC-CCA).

Through FANS, residents throughout the state of Georgia can monitor anything filed in Georgia in connection to certain real estate and personal properties records. Citizens can opt-in for the free, voluntary program, which can be used to send electronic notifications of filing activity to individuals who create notifications in the system.

Linda Hays, Clerk of Superior Court, gave an update on the public's reception of the system since its introduction to The Covington News.

"I believe a lot of people are using it, and we have not had anybody call and say that they were not able to use the system or get on the system," Hays said. "But it's been a big help to people and I think it's given a lot of people peace of mind to be able to go on the system and to know that they will be notified if they put in their phone number or if they put in, an email address or, any way that they want to be notified if something is filed in their name."

Hays noted that FANS combats the rampant scams being advertised by companies offering to monitor property for a fee by providing a platform for citizens to monitor their assets themselves - free of charge.

The user-friendly system allows for several names to be inputted, to take into account the different ways people may sign their name or be referred to as.

"A lot of people have called us worried that maybe something has been filed against their property, that someone is trying to take their property," Hays said. "On occasion, something has happened where a person's property could have been sold and they are not even aware of that. They could have filed a false deed. When someone brings the data in, or they e-file a deed, if it's in recordable form, we, by law, have to file that. We do not do title searches. By law, we cannot do title searches. It's just our

Southern Heartland Art Gallery seeks temporary space following Aug. 25's fire

news@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. - Southern Heartland Art Gallery (SHA) is in search of a temporary space after Aug. 25's fire in the Covington Square area affected its location.

Susan Wahl, a member of SHA's board, shared the latest on their status in an email to The Covington News.

"Sadly, we have to report to you that SHA's visual art center has not been totally spared. While the gallery is not as damaged as the classrooms, the building requires smoke and water mitigation. Walls in our classrooms are covered with smoke, and our basement had water close to four feet deep," Wahl said. "A fire and water remediation company is at work, as this is written, and frankly, we do not know how soon we will be able to occupy the building."

For "remediation to be expedited," all artwork has to be removed from SHA and anything remaining will be "carted off and disposed of." Each piece will be treated thoroughly to remove all traces of smoke, too.

But Wahl and other members of the SHA executive board don't plan to let that slow them down. They want to find a place to "continue our mission advocating for the visual arts."

SHA hosts art instruction and non-profit outreach programs - like Community Paint Party - weekly free artist instructional program, photography club meetings, art guild meetings, workshops and more. SHA also hopes that they will find a space for the gallery's artists to display and sell their work.

For now, SHA has suspended, postponed or canceled all guild and gallery activities in September 2023. September activities include SHA's annual Artful Harvest Regional Art Show and Sponsor Appreciation Party.

"We certainly still appreciate your support, now more than ever, but our acknowledgement to you will necessarily have to be postponed for a different time in the future," Wahl said. "We will update you as we get more answers as to our temporary new location, and when we will be able to reopen."

For people who may have an idea for a temporary venue, they are asked to use the following contact information:

Jackie Kelly, skel621@aol.com, Elise Hammond, elisehammond@bellsouth.net, Cindy Murphy, thingmaker@bellsouth.net or Susan Wahl at thewahlnut@aol.com.

job to file what comes into the office. So we would not know that that was not you trying to sell your property. So [FANS] is just a help for the citizens. They can go to the service, this gives them all the information. It will alert you if anything has been filed in your name.”

So far, FANS has given users “peace of mind,” according to Hays. Because it is still considered a new service, no updates have been made to the system yet, however, Hays hopes the tool will be expanded in the future.

“It’s very positive feedback... It’s been a big help to people and I think it’s given a lot of people peace of mind to be able to go on the system and to know that they will be notified if they put in their phone number or if they put in an email address or any way that they want to be notified if something is filed in their name,” Hays said.

To get started, visit <https://fans.gscca.org> and follow the prompts. For questions or concerns regarding the FANS, please contact the Georgia Superior Court Clerks’ Cooperative Authority customer support at 1-800-304-5174 or help@gscca.org.

OUR THOUGHTS

August 25 fire in downtown Covington

Brian C. Worton
Advertising Representative

What every affected soul of this tragedy must be feeling at this moment is incomprehensible. Grief is so often felt in life, but to witness the loss of dreams being embodied by flames and ash on that Friday night was devastating. As has always been the case in this town, the grief and mourning of this tumultuous event has coincided with an inspiring display of unity, love and hospitality. Citizens, businesses, former officials, current officials and entire families extended their hands to help without a moment of hesitation not only in the days that followed, but as well, the night that our town was towered by a pillar of black smoke. While painful, I thank God that we have all been handed a reminder that throughout all of its changes, growth, new places and new faces, Covington will always be Covington.

Cynthia Blackshear-Warren
Advertising Director

I was sitting on an airplane when I started getting text messages regarding the fire. While looking at the photos I began to tear up and the lady sitting next to me asked if I was ok. I replied no. I shared with her what I just received and she said “let’s pray”. At that moment we held hands and prayed. To this day I am still praying for the businesses and friends affected by the devastating fire. My heart goes out to them.

Lee Ann Avery
Circulation Director

I generally go to bed early, so I didn’t hear about the fire until Saturday morning. Of course I had to head over there to see for myself what exactly had happened. Firefighters were still on the scene and it was devastating. The look of shock on others’ faces was daunting. My heart goes out to all those businesses. Many of them, I knew personally. I wish I had stopped by more frequently to chat. I pray they are well and I hope they all will be able to return. I think we take for granted just how wonderful the square is. It’s the hub of our small town. It is a grim reminder that we are not promised tomorrow, so love and appreciate the things around you today.

Alicia Goolsby
Legals Clerk

When I received the news about the fire on the square my heart immediately went out to all of the businesses and staff members who were affected by this sudden loss. I’ve lived in Covington all of my life and have had the pleasure of eating or shopping at these locations at one time or another. But I’ve known Covington to be a place of resilience and willing to support their own in times like this. With time and the help of the community I have no doubt that these businesses will re-open and come back stronger than before.

Emily Rose Hamby
Staff Writer

To those affected by the fire, smoke and water damage, my thoughts have been with you all since last Friday. I cannot fathom what you are going through at this time. Local businesses are the foundation of Covington and the heart of the Square. Though navigating the path of rebuilding and reopening may take time and the future remains unclear, know that you have an entire community on the sidelines cheering you on. One thing is for certain — this town rallies and supports its own — and as a Covington native, I can attest to that.

Phillip B. Hubbard
Managing Editor

My thoughts since last Friday have mainly been prayers. Prayers, first, for the firefighters responding to Aug. 25’s fire. Then prayers for the affected businesses, business owners and employees. When I think back to what I witnessed that night, it feels like a bad dream. I can’t even fathom how the people directly affected by this tragedy must feel. But I’m also encouraged by the amount of support shown by numerous people to the affected businesses in their recovery. It really displays that Covington-Newton County is still a close, tight-knit community.

esting history to it and a lot of fun things to do, so growing up there was fun. Most of my time as a kid was outside on the lakes, at the local mall as a teenager and running around making up things to do like you do in most smaller towns. I also enjoyed playing tennis and ended up going to college on a tennis scholarship.

Tell me about your family – Are you married? Do you have children? Pets?

LP: My husband, John, and I have been married for over eight years. He works for Dickey Broadcasting Company, which is best known for the radio station 680 The Fan, as the director of Digital Media. He LOVES baseball so working for 680 was right up his alley. Up until recently, he had been a season ticket holder to the Braves for over 20 years and we went all the time to games before we had our daughter.

He and I have a blended family that includes three children, two dogs and a grand-kitty. John and I are pet-lovers and have Sadie and Ginger, our two rescue dogs. We also presently have our grand-kitty, Rocky, who my stepdaughter left with us when she went off to her new job. This is Rocky’s second time living with her grandparents, so she feels a bit like our cat. At one point, we had five pets, but lost two last year. We loved them all, but five was too many.

One of the reasons that John and I decided to move out this way was because of the nearby lakes. We enjoy being on the water, so having Lake Oconee nearby was great. We also like music and sports. He and I both pull for the Georgia Bulldogs, although I am an Arkansas Razorback fan at heart.

What sparked your interest in health care/health care administration?

LP: When I was in my senior year of college, I connected with a person at Arkansas Children’s Hospital and interned there. I found that a hospital setting and the people who work there [were] really fascinating. After I watched people of all walks of life and backgrounds come together and work toward such a remarkable common goal, I really wanted to be a part of it. I came out of school and sought out a job in a hospital marketing department and that was how I got my start.

But it really wasn’t until about a decade later, when I had to seek health care services for a family member that I really found my purpose and wanted to move into administration. I got married to my first husband in my early 30s. Unfortunately, in the second year of our marriage he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and within a year, he was gone. That whole year of being in and out of hospitals was eye-opening. I had a really unique opportunity at a relatively young age to see how the health care system operated from a patient and caregiver perspective. We interacted with almost every type of physician, nurse, tech, lab, imaging centers, a home health agency, and finally, hospice. I had so many observations and experienced so much emotion through that experience, but one that really surfaced was my desire to give back and wanting to work towards continuously improving the health care system. I went into my leader’s office not long after my husband had died and told her that I wanted to make a difference and be a hospital CEO one day. That goal never changed.

What are you most passionate about in the health-care industry?

LP: There are so many things that I enjoy about the healthcare industry that it is hard to pick just one. I think that I am most passionate about meeting the community’s needs when it comes to access to care. Going through my own personal experiences with caring for a cancer patient, I realized how important it was to have access to care close to home. When my husband was most sick, he didn’t want to travel too far, walk too much or deal with a lot of hassle. I think most everyone is that way when they aren’t feeling well. We live near a really big city that has a lot of resources but also has a lot of traffic, so if we can increase access to care in our local community, I think most people want that.

That leads into my second area of passion, which is ensuring that the patient experience we provide to every patient is exceptional. Hospitals and healthcare services are large operations and making sure we give every patient the personal attention they deserve is important. As we grow and improve access, making sure the service we provide to each person is positive is really important to me.

What have you enjoyed most about being the CEO at Piedmont Newton so far?

LP: The people at Piedmont Newton and in Covington are absolutely incredible. The hard-working team members at our hospital believe in the mission and believe that what they’re doing is making a difference in the lives of others. Everyone is committed to making Newton County and Covington a great place to live and work, both inside the hospital and those I have met in the community. That’s really important and something I’ve really enjoyed since I got here.

What are some of your ideas/initiatives you plan to contribute to Piedmont Newton?

LP: Newton County has grown tremendously over the past year. Piedmont Newton will have to continue to grow to meet the needs of our community. We’ve worked hard to increase the number of providers in the area to serve a growing community. We will continue to recruit new physicians to the area and increase access to care here locally. Services such as our medical oncology program are just scratching the surface of our potential at Piedmont Newton, so we will continue to take services like these and build upon them. We have found that our community and patients are so appreciative of what we’ve done to serve them locally that we will continue to heavily focus efforts in the area over the next year.

Kemp nixes call by Trump supporters for special legislative session

CAPITOL BEAT
News Service

ATLANTA - Gov. Brian Kemp pushed back Thursday against a call by ultra-conservative Republicans for a special legislative session to punish Fulton County District Attorney Fani Willis for seeking to indict former President Donald Trump.

Kemp he disagrees with Democrat Willis' strategy politically but doesn't see that she's done anything illegal.

"We are now seeing what happens when prosecutors move forward with a highly charged indictment during an election," the governor told reporters during a news conference at the Georgia Capitol. "[But] a special session of the General Assembly to end-around this law is not feasible and may ultimately prove unconstitutional."

Kemp's comments were aimed at calls for a special legislative session targeting Willis from freshman state Sen. Colton Moore, R-Trenton, and other members of the Georgia Freedom Caucus. The group plans to hold a news conference next week to air their grievances against Willis.

Another freshman Georgia senator, Republican Shawn Still of Norcross, is among 18 defendants a Fulton County grand jury indicted in mid-August along with Trump on racketeering charges in connection with alleged attempts to overturn the results of the 2020 presidential election in Georgia.

Trump has called the indictment a politically motivated effort to stop his 2024 presidential bid. The former president waived arraignment Thursday and entered a plea of not guilty.

Kemp compared the current call for a special session to similar efforts by some legislative Republicans in the aftermath of the 2020 election. He refused to do so at that time based on the same argument that he lacked the legal authority.

"As long as I am governor, we're going to follow the law and the Constitution," Kemp said.

Kemp called efforts to punish Willis by impeachment or some other means a political loser for Republicans.

"We're going to focus on the issues that affect all Georgians," he said. "That's what wins elections."

Hurricane Idalia cleanup underway in South Georgia

CAPITOL BEAT
News Service

ATLANTA - Utility and highway crews fanned out across South Georgia Thursday restoring power and clearing roads in the aftermath of Hurricane Idalia, which tore across the region for hours on Wednesday.

"We are fortunate the storm was narrow and fast-moving," Gov. Brian Kemp told reporters Thursday during a news conference at the Georgia Capitol. "But if you were in the path, it was devastating."

One fatality was reported during the storm when a tree fell on a vehicle in Lowndes County, one of the areas hardest hit by Idalia, while minor injuries were reported across the region.

At the height of the storm Wednesday afternoon, 277,000 electric customers had lost power, said James Stallings, director of the state Emergency Management/Homeland Security Agency. By Thursday morning, that number had been reduced to 107,000, he said.

The storm also damaged 32 cellphone towers, Stallings said. Most had been restored by Thursday morning, he said.

"There's nowhere that we don't have overlapping service," he said. Stallings said the Georgia Ports Authority, which closed both the ports of Savannah and Brunswick during the storm, was expected to reopen Savannah by late Thursday morning and the Port of Brunswick by mid-afternoon.

Two major bridges in Coastal Georgia that were closed to traffic on Wednesday, the Talmadge Bridge in Savannah and the Sidney Lanier Bridge in Brunswick, had been reopened by Thursday morning.

Nine state highways remained closed on Thursday, as crews from the Georgia Department of Transportation worked to clear storm debris.

While the Biden administration has approved federal disaster declarations for Florida and South Carolina, Stallings said his agency is continuing to assess the damage in Georgia.

"We had the storm in our state a lot longer than Florida or South Carolina," he said. "We've got a long track of damage to look into."

Kemp said some areas have reported significant crop damage, including downed pecan trees and damage to expensive center-pivot irrigation equipment.

"Hopefully, the peanuts will be all right because they're still in the ground," he said.

Kemp said he and Georgia First Lady Marty Kemp plan to tour storm damage on Friday.

Wellstar, Augusta University partnership up and running

CAPITOL BEAT
News Service

ATLANTA - The partnership the Wellstar and Augusta University health systems (AUHS) announced last December went into operation Wednesday.

Under a 40-year agreement the two parties announced in March, Wellstar plans to invest nearly $800 million over the next decade in AUHS facilities and infrastructure, including more than $200 million that will go to Augusta University Medical Center, a more than 600-bed safety net and teaching hospital. Capital for a new hospital, medical office building and ambulatory surgery center in Columbia County also is included in the funding.

"We're excited this day has come," said Sonny Perdue, chancellor of the University System of Georgia. "It's an opportunity ... to make health care better than ever in Georgia."

Augusta University President Brooks Keel said the partnership will allow AUHS to expand its telemedicine program, which will particularly benefit rural Georgia, where residents frequently have to drive 45 minutes to an hour to see a doctor.

"The wealth of experience Wellstar brings to the table and the experience we already have will let us expand what we're already doing," Keel said. "Wellstar fit the bill because they share our mission and our vision."

Wellstar President and CEO Candace Saunders said the training opportunities the partnership will provide will help address a chronic shortage of physicians and nurses in Georgia.

"We need more doctors, more nurses," she said. "[The partnership] is going to help bring care to everyone who needs it."

The partnership has drawn criticism from state lawmakers representing districts in metro Atlanta, who complained Wellstar's decision to close the 460-bed Atlanta Medical Center (AMC) last fall combined with the closing of a smaller Wellstar hospital in East Point earlier in 2022 has left a "health-care desert" in majority Black areas of central and southern Fulton County.

But Wellstar officials said closing the hospitals was unavoidable due to aging infrastructure, low patient volumes, skyrocketing labor costs and the loss of coronavirus relief funds that had been available earlier in the COVID pandemic.

Saunders dismissed comparisons between the new partnership and the two closings.

"They're two independent and separate situations," she said.

The new unified system will be known as Wellstar MCG Health.

GENE LYONS COLUMNIST

¿Que? What's a university without a foreign language?

Reading about West Virginia University's plan to solve a budgetary shortfall by eliminating the study of foreign languages, it occurred to me that the entire purpose of a college education has been turned inside out since my undergraduate days.

Back when I enrolled as a freshman at my friendly neighborhood land grant college — Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey — most of us worried about whether we had what it took to be recognized as educated citizens.

I recall a mandatory convocation in which newly enrolled students were advised to look to the left and right. One of the three of us, the speaker warned, wouldn't make it to our sophomore year unless we took our studies seriously. As I was already in receipt of a curt letter from the admissions office informing me that given the contrast between my SAT scores and mediocre high school grades, I'd be well advised to get on the stick, this warning got my attention.

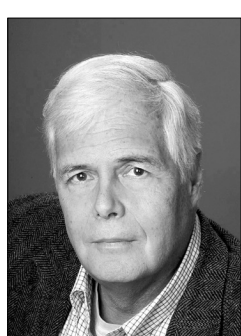

Mainly interested in baseball, basketball and girls during high school, I'd been an indolent slacker who read everything I could get my hands on except my textbooks. Some of my classes may as well have been conducted in Swahili for all I knew about what was going on. But if I flunked out of Rutgers — or Jersey State, as we sometimes called it to annoy slumming preppies — I'd never be able to look my hardworking father in the eye. So I got busy.

Most of my fellow students came from blue-collar backgrounds like mine and were the first from their families to go to college. Many heard languages other than English spoken at home — Italian, Polish and Yiddish, mainly. My roommate's parents spoke Russian. Foreign language requirements struck most of us as burdensome, perhaps, but an essential part of becoming an educated individual.

So when I read that WVU plans to cancel the study of foreign languages altogether and lay off the faculty ... Well, I'll spare you the hillbilly jokes. I've been a fan of the school since the days when the great Jerry West — “Zeke from Cabin Creek,” they called him — played for the Mountaineers. I also had several friends at Rutgers who'd grown up there, football jocks all. But here's the deal, as explained to The New York Times by Lisa DiBartolomeo, a professor of Russian, Slavic and East European studies: “Other universities have closed particular languages,” she said. “But nobody has closed an entire department of world languages that we know of. The word that we're hearing over and over again is ‘unprecedented.’”

The phrase “third-rate trade school” also comes to mind.

Altogether, WVU plans to drop 32 of the university's 338 majors and lay off 169 faculty members, or 7% of the Morgantown faculty. Needless to say, the campus is in an uproar, with many blaming the school's high-flying celebrity president, E. Gordon Gee, an academic controversialist who has earned upward of a million bucks a year while serving as chief executive of seven different universities during his career. Gee sparks controversy everywhere he goes, partly due to his lavish lifestyle at public expense.

“We simply have lost the support of the American public,” Gee explained to the Times. His critics contend that elaborate capital building plans and swollen administrative costs are largely responsible for the budget shortfall, very much including WVU's athletics department. Suffice it to say that the basketball coach is the highest-paid individual on campus.

But back to that freshman dorm at Rutgers. It never occurred to me then that what I was being offered was a gentleman's education. We all took two semesters of composition, taught mainly as a literature course. Everybody read Dostoevsky's “Crime and Punishment” at the same time, a powerful experience. We'd sit up late debating its meaning. You can't begin to understand Russia without reading Dostoevsky. Also Hemingway's “A Farewell to Arms,” the first adult book that ever made me cry.

Everybody was also enrolled in a history of civilization course that was team-taught by the school's excellent history department, with senior professors lecturing on their specialties. World War II veteran professor Henry R. Winkler's annual lecture on Nazi Germany drew standing ovations. Many Rutgers students returned to hear it again.

Twelve hours of science were required, with labs. Eager to know how the world worked, I took biology and physical geography. I've never forgotten Melvin G. Marcus — a charismatic one-time naval aviator — showing us aerial photos of New Jersey beaches to warn against the folly of building on sandbars, later dramatized during Hurricane Sandy.

A gentleman's education, indeed. Learning to read, write and think. Understanding something about the world outside our windows. We naively believed that was the whole purpose of education in that benighted era before anybody imagined it was possible to omit the study of foreign languages and call the institution a university.

DAVID CARROLL COLUMNIST

Enjoy Your Brake

As you may read elsewhere, I have just published a new humor book. It's called, “I Won't Be Your Escape Goat: David Carroll's Ho Made Social Media Blunders.” Personally signed copies are available for $19.95 plus $5.00 shipping at ChattanoogaRadioTV.com, or at my mailing address at the end of this column. This is the story that started it all:

There are many things I don't do well. For starters, there's swimming, car repair, and working with any technology introduced after the Bush administration (the first one).

But instead of burdening you with my shortcomings, I will focus on something in which I take pride: spelling.

I'm always shaking my head at misspelled church signs (“Don't give in to Satan”), and resisting the temptation to correct my Facebook friends (“All the Falcons do is loose”).

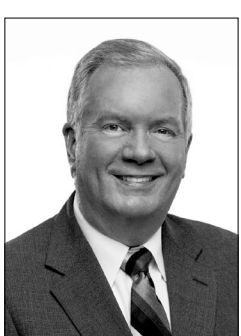

I don't know whether to laugh or cry when I drive by a school sign that reads, “Enjoy Your Spring Brake” or a store that invites you to “Transfur Your Prescriptions.”

I often think about the guy in the highway sign department who had one job, and ended up putting this sign on the road: “Yeild to Oncoming Traffic.”

Before Facebook and texting, we didn't know if our friends were good spellers. Now we know. “You're” becomes “Your,” especially in my all-time favorite Facebook post, “Your a idiot.” That dude just lost his argument.

Spell check, which didn't exist back in the day, is both a blessing and a curse. It's a blessing when you just don't have time to look up commonly misspelled words like criticize, accidentally, or embarrass. As in, “That know-it-all David Carroll sure likes to criticize and embarrass me when I accidentally misspell a word!”

But spell check can be a curse when it substitutes a correctly spelled word for the word you actually intend to use. If you're complaining about the head of the school, spell check can't help you if you write, “That mean principle kept my son after school.” It also didn't help the person who offered this opinion about a superintendent search: “I hope they get a good one this time, because the steaks are really high.” (It was hard to argue with that one, because steaks really are expensive.) Or the

Sometimes we know how to spell, but we get in a hurry. One of the most important jobs in a TV newsroom is the graphics operator, the person who puts the words on the screen. It could be a statement from an elected official, or merely the name of the person who is on screen. We once had a guest who called himself “The Singing Cowboy.” Unfortunately, the graphics person made one little mistake. He typed in, “The Sinning Cowboy.” Come to think of it, that may have encouraged some viewers to pay closer attention.

There are words we just make up, because we didn't quite hear them right. That would explain why some people think that the small cart with one wheel and two handles is a “wheel barrel.” It almost makes sense.

It's not all the fault of spell check, of course. I can't blame anyone but the author when I read that Uncle Fred is about to undergo a quadroople bypass. Or when a teenage girl brags about the pleasing scent her boyfriend is wearing: “I just love his colon.”

I've stopped rolling my eyes when someone excitedly invites me to enjoy the fall colors: “Hurry and enjoy the scenery, it's peek season!” I must admit, I do want to take a peek. Same goes when our weather forecaster gets asked about winter temperatures. “How low is the windshield factor?” Well, that may determine how long it will take to scrape off the ice in the morning.

And, there's this. I saw a sign directed at employees behind a customer service counter. “No Talking Aloud On Cell Phones, or You Will Be Wrote Up.” Where do I even begin?

So kids, study hard, and become a proficient speller. Maybe you'll end up as the top student of your senior class. And I don't mean the “valid Victorian.”

David Carroll is a Chattanooga news anchor, and his new book “I Won't Be Your Escape Goat” is available on his website, ChattanoogaRadioTV.com. You may contact him at 900 Whitehall Road, Chattanooga, TN 37405, or at RadioTV2020@yahoo.com.

NEWTON NIA BARRETT

Barrett storms out of the gate

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
Sports Editor

COVINGTON, Ga. — Nia Barrett has stormed out of the gate to begin her sophomore season. Two meets in and Barrett has separated herself as the top Newton Lady Ram runner.

In the inaugural meet of 2023, Barrett placed first at the Into the Trail Invitational on Aug. 19 at Locust Grove High School. She recorded a 24:04.80 final time in the junior varsity 5,000-meter run to accomplish that.

Barrett shared what that moment was like for her. “It felt really good,” Barrett said. “It was mind blowing because I’ve never got first place.”

A week later, the sophomore stepped up to the varsity competition and had a solid showing.

At the Champions Chase on Aug. 26, Barrett’s 23:49.69 final time paved the way for her sixth place finish in the 5,000-meter run.

Winning meets is just one of the things Barrett likes about cross country.

“I like meeting new people,” Barrett said. “I also like the competitiveness of the sport. I like to win.”

This year is just the second season Barrett has run cross country. Her first sport was track where she ran long distances.

When asked what separates cross country and track, Barrett stressed that cross country is more of a “mind challenge.” However, being “strong minded” is something she considers to be one of her strengths as a runner.

Barrett plans to take that mindset to the rest of Newton’s remaining cross country schedule.

Next up for the Rams is competing at the Morgan County home meet in Madison on Sept. 13. Newton will take part in the North Georgia Invitational three days later followed by the South Metro Classic in Fairburn, Georgia.

As for Barrett, she wants to continue progress toward her personal goals.

“I’m just trying to work on beating my time and just getting stronger,” Barrett said. “I’m trying to get down to 20 minutes flat and I want to get more medals and more recognition.”

HOY CONTINUED FROM A8

“I’ve been on teams where it’s been cliquish. A team is so much better when it’s like a big family,” Hoy said. “I feel like everything just goes and we all mesh. And when you mesh, you play your best.”

Hoy began playing softball at 3 years old with the Newton County Recreation Department. She started hitting off a tee then transitioned to fast pitch.

In the early stages of her playing is when her “love for the game started.”

Seven years later, Hoy entered the travel ball circuit and “started real softball.”

From there, Hoy became an Indian Creek Middle School player for the Lady Panthers. She couldn’t play her sixth grade year due to middle school rules. However, she played her seventh and eighth grade seasons.

Hoy and the Lady Panthers brought home a victory that she won’t soon forget.

“We won the championship,” Hoy said. “Indian Creek hadn’t beaten Cousins in years and we beat them my eighth grade year. My coach cried, because he was so happy. So, we broke a curse.”

Hoy has been a part of historical year after historical year during her Lady Tigers career.

As a sophomore, Hoy helped Alcovy back to the Class AAAAAA playoffs for the first time in five seasons. Last season, the Lady Tigers won the Region 3-AAAAAA championship, which was their first since 2015 and hosted Super Regionals.

So far this season, Alcovy has gone up against some stiff non-region competition. It has faced teams like Flowery Branch, Apalachee, Heritage and Prince Avenue, just to name a few.

The Lady Tigers won their previous two non-region games with a 5-3 win over Duluth on Aug. 23 and downed Newton on Aug. 26 7-2 as part of Diamond Day.

In the Region 3-AAAAAA games, Alcovy has dominated. The Lady Tigers have defeated Forest Park, Mundy’s Mill and Morrow by a combined 72-0.

As a result, Alcovy (6-7, 3-0) is tied with Woodward Academy (6-2, 4-0) for first place in the standings. The two teams have yet to meet this season due to a rainout on Aug. 29.

Similar to the entire Lady Tigers, Hoy has seen individual progression over the past few years.

Hoy batted .227, had two RBIs and five stolen bases during her sophomore year. In her junior season, she recorded a .343 batting average, 11 RBIs, one home run and 51 stolen bases.

Hoy’s stolen base total placed her sixth in Class AAAAAA.

Currently, Hoy has a .286 batting average, seven RBIs, one homer, 13 stolen bases and a .432 on-base percentage.

But, like Hoy has been for most of her career, she is primarily concerned with the team’s main objective. For this season, that is advancing to the state softball tournament in Columbus.

Hoy has full confidence the Lady Tigers can do just that.

“We’re using our emotions, with it being our senior year, to fuel our want for this season,” Hoy said. “It’s pushing us more. We’re going to make it to Columbus this year.”

“We’re going

this year.”

VICTORIOUS MEETING

AT THE STRONG ROCK PATRIOT INVITATIONAL, THE EAGLES BROUGHT HOME FIRST PLACE HONORS WITH A TEAM SCORE OF 53.

Eagles win Strong Rock Invitational

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
Managing Editor

LOCUST GROVE, Ga. — Numerous individual runners assisted in Eastside's meet victory on Saturday, Aug. 26. At the Strong Rock Patriot Invitational — hosted by Strong Rock Christian School — the Eagles brought home first place honors with a team score of 53.

They won the meet in a field of 11 teams. A part of the team's preparation has been running at 6 a.m. one to three times per week as well as afternoon practice sessions.

Head coach Caleb Watson said the players have embraced the practice from day one.

"It's a direct correlation to the hard work they've put in," Watson said. "Beginning of the year the upperclassmen were on board with morning practices, knowing we'd have to do something different this year to be competitive in our tough region. Proud of this team as well as the parents dealing with our crazy schedule. I'm excited to see where this year goes this year."

Senior Grayson Poynter led all Eagles runners with a third place, 17:49.05 finish in the boys 5,000-meter run. Malachi Scharf placed sixth with a 18:58.33 final time in addition to Levi Kingsley's ninth place (19:23.90) finish.

For the Lady Eagles, Destiny Carter was the top finisher. She recorded a 23:41.38 final time to place third in the 5,000-meter run.

Next up for the Eagles are four remaining meets.

On Sept. 13, Eastside will compete in the Morgan County Home Meet in Madison, Georgia. A week later, the Eagles will travel to Social Circle for the Redskins Cross Country Invitational.

To close out the month of September, Eastside will take part in the Mountain Invitational on Sept. 28 in Helen, Georgia hosted by White County High School at Unicoi State Park.

Closing out the meet schedule for Eastside will be the Jefferson Invitational on Oct. 10. The meet will be held at Jackson County Airport with Jefferson High School hosting the event.

Hoy embodies being a team player

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
Managing Editor

COVINGTON, Ga. — Whether it's playing shortstop as a freshman or being a senior leader this year, Ashlyn Hoy has always focused on doing what's best for her team.

As one of two seniors for the Alcovy Lady Tigers, that doesn't change. Her fellow senior Makinzie Johnson even stated, "that's her."

Hoy emphasized how she's always maintained a team player mentality.

"Growing up, I've always had an attitude that I get along with everybody and be friends with everybody," Hoy said. "No one likes someone that's going to stand off and not talk to you. Also being a senior, it's easier for the newer girls to come in and me to be welcoming."

Ultimately, Hoy's motivation behind her personal mission is to assist the Lady Tigers in their goals.

Learn to make a great late-summer vinaigrette without hitting the bottle

KATIE WORKMAN

Making salad dressing can feel daunting for many of us. We either fear it a little, and keep hitting the bottle (bottled dressing, of course), or if we do make our own, we get stuck in that one-dressing rut.

But if you take a couple of minutes to play with some different oils and vinegars, you'll quickly see how easy it is to make a homemade vinaigrette, and to keep changing it up so your salads sparkle all year long.

The word vinaigrette may sound a bit fancy pants, but it's just French for oil and vinegar. OK, no, that's not quite true, but it certainly is partly true, and helpful in making things much less scary.

At its most basic, you can make a vinaigrette in two minutes. Then the sky's the limit, and becoming a salad dressing master is one of the easiest and most consistently useful skills to have conquered in the kitchen.

The most common ratio of oil to vinegar is 3:1.

The Oil

For most vinaigrettes, I lean toward extra virgin olive oil, first press or cold press if possible. Olive oils range widely in flavor from spicy to fruity, mild to robust. You'll find yourself leaning toward certain flavor profiles, but it's a nice reason to actually taste your olive oil. It's also a good reason to treat yourself to a good one.

For some oil and vinegar dressings, you might want a more neutrally flavored oil, like safflower or grapeseed. This may be the case when making a dressing with Asian ingredients, or anything not in the Mediterranean family.

The Vinegar

There are also so many vinegars to choose from — a nice reason to linger in the vinegar aisle of your market. Consider white wine vinegar, red wine vinegar, sherry vinegar, balsamic vinegar, rice vinegar (unseasoned is best for dressings), black rice vinegar, Champagne vinegar and apple cider vinegar.

And if you are in a well-stocked market, specialty store or farmers market, keep your eyes open for fruit vinegars (such as raspberry, citrus or fig) or other flavors, like herbed vinegars or spiced vinegars.

You might also come upon a store that features olive oils and vinegars. Sometimes they are available in bulk, stored in large canisters, with bottles filled to order. This is a good place to explore a lot of different varieties. Directions for making the vinaigrette Here's my favorite very basic vinaigrette tip: Use two different vinegars in your dressing. This creates a nice layering of flavors and takes it all to a slightly higher level, all for the extra 30 seconds it took to open a second bottle of vinegar.

Some favorite combos: red wine and sherry vinegars; balsamic and red wine vinegars; white wine and unseasoned rice wine vinegars. I also love a blend of fresh lemon juice and a vinegar.

My family likes their dressing on the vinegary side. We favor more of a 2:1 balance, and my older son is a 1:1 type of guy, balsamic being the vinegar of choice. Play with the balance until you get to the level of acidity you like.

Additions

So, now you have a blend of oil and vinegar. Two additional ingredients that I think make a dressing a vinaigrette are minced shallot (or another member of the onion family) and some Dijon mustard. You can play around with different types of mustard, from German mustard to whole grain.

And you definitely need to season with salt (I prefer kosher or flaky sea salt) and pepper (go for freshly ground if possible). Use a light hand with salt when making the vinaigrette, add a sprinkle of kosher or coarse salt to the dressed salad, and give it a final toss before serving. It adds a little burst of taste and texture to salt a dressed salad at the very end.

Other great add-ins for vinaigrettes are fresh herbs, minced garlic, minced sun-dried tomatoes or olives, or a few tablespoons of crumbled or shredded cheese, such as goat cheese, feta, blue cheese or Parmesan. In the herb family, I lean towards tarragon, parsley, thyme, oregano and basil.

Finally, vinaigrette is so forgiving. Too oily? Add more vinegar. Too tart? Add more oil. Too bland? Add more salt, or maybe a bit of mustard. Too salty? Add more oil, and maybe some vinegar.

Additions like that mean you'll just have a bigger stash of vinaigrette to tuck in the fridge when you get your perfect balance. And since vinaigrette keeps happily for a week or two (I usually make a big batch for that reason), nothing will be wasted. Also, beyond lettuce salads, think about other uses for your vinaigrette. Drizzle some on simply cooked vegetables like grilled asparagus, or use it in a mayo-free potato salad, for instance.

Vinaigrettes are a really nice way to have some fun in the kitchen with your kids that doesn't involve baking. Mine grew up experimenting with vinaigrettes — it's like a chemistry project that you can eat.

I once taught a cooking class for kids where we put about 10 different kinds of vinegars in little bowls and they dipped cubes of plain bread in them to taste the differences. They chose their favorites to make their own vinaigrette to take home.

Here's a basic recipe to get you started — enjoy the remaining salad days of summer.

Recipe

1/2 cup extra virgin olive oil

1/4 cup vinegar(s) of your choice (see above)

1/2 teaspoon kosher flaky sea salt, or to taste

Freshly ground pepper to taste

2 teaspoons Dijon mustard, or more to taste

1 tablespoon finely minced shallot (optional)

Directions: Put everything into a container with a lid. Cover and shake. Don't you feel great? Use immediately, or store in the refrigerator. Give it a good shake before using.

Louis Puech Scigliuzzi and Norman Reedus in "The Walking Dead: Daryl Dixon"

Dixon days: Daryl dominates new 'Walking Dead' series

Premiering Sunday, Sept. 10, on AMC and AMC+, "The Walking Dead: Daryl Dixon" sees the return of Norman Reedus ("The Boondock Saints," 1999) as on-screen anti-hero Daryl Dixon.

Created by David Zabel ("ER"), "The Walking Dead: Daryl Dixon" is the fifth spinoff from the flagship series, hereafter referred to as TWD, and takes place after TWD's 11 seasons of horror. And while viewers have already gathered their fair share of Daryl details since his first appearance in TWD's Season 1 episode "Tell It to the Frogs," audiences have never seen the troubled "walker"-fighting hero quite like this.

"Daryl Dixon" follows the titular character as he "washes ashore in France and struggles to piece together how he got there and why" (per AMC). According to the official synopsis, "[T]he series tracks his journey across a broken but resilient France as he hopes to find a way back home," noting that as "he makes the journey ... the connections he forms along the way complicate his ultimate plan."

The title of this latest TWD spinoff was announced in October 2022, which is also when filming began in Paris. Despite AMC's initial desire to produce a series that followed another TWD character, Carol Peletier (Melissa McBride, "The Mist," 2007), the network eventually landed on "Daryl Dixon" as a result of scheduling conflicts with McBride. That said, McBride is expected to reprise her role as Carol in at least one of the premiere season's six episodes.

In fact, as mentioned by Vanity Fair writer Derek Lawrence in his November 2022 article titled "Norman Reedus Unpacks the Walking Dead Finale and His 'F---ing Great' Spin-Off," Daryl himself made a nod toward his own future series in the final episodes of the flagship series' finale.

"It's not like we're never gonna see each other again," Daryl tells Carol in an intimate scene toward the end of "Rest in Peace," Lawrence writes, noting Carol's response: "I'm allowed to be a little sad. You're my best friend."

And while we have no idea what may be in store for Carol, fans can certainly expect more "Daryl Dixon" beyond the first six episodes. Just last month, AMC announced that the series had already been renewed for a second season.

Also joining the cast for Season 1 is French actress Clémence Poésy, known for her roles in films such as the Harry Potter franchise (beginning in 2005), "In Bruges" (2008) and "Tener" (2020), among others. Poésy plays Isabelle, a French woman with a dark Parisian past and a connection to a "progressive religious group." She joins forces with Daryl on his journey.

Scored by an ethereal rendition of Claude Debussy's "Clair de Lune," the trailer juxtaposes the violence TWD fans have come to expect with the peace and serenity that accompanies a French monastery garden. It just so happens that in this very monastery is where Daryl learns of his next adventure. And without giving anything away, suffice it to say that "The Last of Us" fans may wish to tune in.

When discussing the dawn of "Daryl Dixon" with Lawrence during an interview that occurred pre-WGA/SAG-AFTRA strike, Reedus shared some of his excitement for the spinoff.

"It's so beautiful, it's so moving," Reedus began, "but it's like [Daryl] got swept away in a tornado and woke up in this foreign land and doesn't understand anything. There's French people speaking French, obviously, and part of the story is being confused with what's around him, trying to figure out what they're saying, is this going to be a fight, are we going to get along?"

Despite the "epic" nature of the new series (and, of course, the Walkers), Reedus insists that the entire experience will feel very different from "The Walking Dead."

"It's a different story, it sounds different, it feels different, it looks different," Reedus mused three weeks into filming in late 2022. "It's exactly what I was hoping to do. Like, I could not be more happy with what we're getting."

"Sex Education" - Season 4 (Netflix — Sept. 21, Season Premiere)

Following the closure of Moordale Secondary, Otis (Asa Butterfield) and Eric (Ncuti Gatwa) now face a new frontier - their first day at Cavendish Sixth Form College. Otis is nervous about setting up his new clinic, whilst Eric is praying they won't be losers again. But Cavendish is a culture shock for all the Moordale students — they thought they were progressive, but this new college is another level. With daily yoga, a strong sustainability vibe and kindness reigning king, the new year and new school is an adjustment for all. Gillian Anderson, Emma Mackey, Connor Swindells and Chinenye Ezeudu also star.

BEST SYDNEY POLLACK MOVIES

"The Slender Thread" (1965): In his feature directing debut, episodic television veteran Pollack keeps tension high as a crisis-line volunteer (Sidney Poitier) counsels a suicidal woman (Anne Bancroft) via telephone.

"They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" (1969): Gig Young earned an Academy Award for the Pollack-directed 1930s dance-marathon drama.

"Jeremiah Johnson" (1972): Frequent Pollack colleague Robert Redford is a believable mountain man under the filmmaker's direction. Turner Classic Movies shows the film Saturday, Sept. 16.

"The Way We Were" (1973): "Streisand! Redford! Together!" So said the ads, and with Pollack directing them, the recipe was perfect.

"The Yakuza" (1974): Robert Mitchum is terrific in Pollack's melodrama about a detective's infiltration of the title Japanese crime syndicate.

"Three Days of the Condor" (1975): For all the government-paranoia thrillers of the mid-1970s, this Redford-starring CIA saga stands out. The excellent cast also includes Faye Dunaway, Cliff Robertson, Max von Sydow and John Houseman.

"The Electric Horseman" (1979): A fun reunion of Redford and Jane Fonda revolves around a reporter who sees a story in a washed-up rodeo star.

"Absence of Malice" (1981): In a superb journalism drama, Pollack directs Sally Field as a reporter who bends rules to get the goods on a businessman and supposed criminal (Paul Newman).

"Tootsie" (1982): Leave it to someone steeped in directing dramas to come up with one of the best comedies ever. Pollack doubles as a co-star here, as the flummoxed agent of an actor (Dustin Hoffman) who dresses as a woman to get work.

"Out of Africa" (1985): Pairing Redford with Meryl Streep, Pollack won an Oscar for directing this scenic, true tale.

"The Firm" (1993): Pollack confidently directs Tom Cruise and a sterling supporting cast — ranging from Gene Hackman, Holly Hunter and Paul Sorvino to Hal Holbrook, Wilford Brimley and Steven Hill — through the long but compelling John Grisham law drama.

"Random Hearts" (1999): Critics were lukewarm about the movie overall, but Pollack (also the director here) gives a terrific performance as a political-campaign adviser who has his hands full with a candidate (Kristin Scott Thomas) whose plane-crash-victim husband was caught cheating on her.

"Michael Clayton" (2007): As an actor, Pollack hit one of his career highs as the head of the law firm for which Clayton (George Clooney) fixes troublesome situations.

Dreaming Whilst Black

SHOW 10 p.m.

Kwabena (Adjan Salmon) is an aspiring Jamaican/British filmmaker mired in a thankless job in recruitment when he gets the opportunity of a lifetime thanks to an old friend. But his interest in Vanessa (Babirye Bukilwa) means he might have to sacrifice.

Ride With Norman Reedus

AMC 10:25 p.m.

In this season premiere Norman joins actor Keanu Reeves for a journey through the mind-blowing landscapes of the Utah desert — from the Bonneville Salt Flats to Canyonlands National Park — and even a motorcycle bash in the canyons of Moab. It's epic.

Lifetime movies dawned at just the right time for Brec Bassinger

BY JAY BOBBIN

Weblinks

Q: I was impressed by Brec Bassinger in the "V.C. Andrews' Dawn" movies. Did she make those while she was still doing "DC's Stargirl"? – April Kay, via e-mail

A: She landed the "Dawn" job shortly after "Stargirl" wrapped filming, and she told us that she felt fortunate to be available for the Lifetime set of four films, with her reporting to the set within days of having her first conversation about the opportunity. She also said that she appreciated the timing of that production, since she felt that diving right into it right after parting company with her "Stargirl" colleagues gave her something else to focus on ... rather than only experiencing sadness over the end of her three seasons of work on that show.

Q: I read somewhere that Dr. Joyce Brothers was a big game-show winner before she became a psychologist. Is that true? – Ken Winter, Elkhart, Ind.

A: She proved to be hugely knowledgeable about the subject of boxing when she was a contestant on the classic show "The $64,000 Question," ultimately winning the top prize of ... well, $64,000. Her husband was a boxing fan, inspiring her to choose that subject, and she did a huge amount of research on the topic – helped by the photographic memory she had. Later, Brothers appeared on the related series "The $64,000 Challenge," and she again claimed the maximum prize amount. Part of the appeal clearly was her being such an unlikely expert on boxing, and her fame from the games earned her a spot as co-host of the series "Sports Showcase" in the mid-1950s, making her one of TV's first female commentators on sports. That led to many other television appearances in which Brothers largely focused on the psychological information she wanted to dispense to viewers.

Q: How old would Sean Giambrone have been when he started playing Adam on "The Goldbergs"? – Paul Sweet, Fairfield, Calif.

A: The show went on the air in 2013, so he would have been 14 at that time. He spent a good portion of his adolescence playing the part, which ended this past May with the ABC sitcom's series finale. At this writing, it wasn't clear what Giambrone's next acting project would be, though repeats of "The Goldbergs" continue in syndication and on the cable networks TV Land and Pop.

Video may have killed the radio star, but nothing can stop these stars from shining on screen. The best in the music video game are celebrated in this yearly event, where the industry and fans at home recognize the talents of musical geniuses like Taylor Swift and SZA. A groundbreaking year for the awards (as for the first time, all nominees for Artist of the Year are women), 2023's "MTV Video Music Awards" air Tuesday, Sept. 12, on MTV.
