Get to know new interim superintendent of Newton County Schools

EDUCATION BENJAMIN ROUNDTREE

By EMILY ROSE HAMBY
Staff Writer

NEWTON COUNTY – Following the retirement of former superintendent Samantha Fuhrey, the Newton County Board of Education appointed Benjamin Roundtree as interim superintendent of Newton County Schools on June 20, 2023.

Roundtree’s educational experience is vast, holding various positions such as an English teacher, school-level administrator, Title I School Improvement Specialist, Federal Programs Director, Director of Assessment and Accountability and Director of Elementary Schools.

Despite assuming the role of interim superintendent, Roundtree will continue to maintain his most recent title of Chief Academic Officer for Newton County, which he has served for the past four years.

Roundtree obtained his undergraduate degree in journalism from the University of Georgia before going on to complete his master’s in education from Fort Valley State University and an educational specialist’s degree from Georgia College & State University. To further his knowledge in the field, Roundtree received an endorsement in gifted education and certification in education administration and supervision.

As the 2023-2024 school year is about to be in full swing, Roundtree sat down with The Covington News to provide insight on his approach with in his new role.

What sparked your interest in education?
BR: I think in my heart, I always wanted to be a teacher and that’s really how far I wanted to go. I had no desire to go into any form of administration. I enjoy teaching. In my other life, I was also a professional actor, but I still wanted something a little more solid to land on.

I never worked a day after I graduated in the field of journalism. Because I never worked in education and it was still in my heart, I started working in education for a federal program called Upward Bound and it was for students who would become first generation college students. We did all kinds of prep things for them for college.

NEWTON COUNTY – Newton County Sheriff Ezell Brown was sworn in as the Georgia Sheriffs’ Association President on July 26, 2023, during the GSA’s Annual Awards Banquet in Jekyll Island, Ga.

“I am humbled and honored to accept the responsibility of serving as the President of the Georgia Sheriffs’ Association, a significant milestone in my journey. First and foremost, I want to express my gratitude to all of my citizens who live within my community who have supported me and elected me for four different terms,” Brown said. “This prestigious honor would not have been possible without the late Douglas Digby, who hired me as a Patrol Officer in 1973. He saw something in me – the little boy from South Georgia – and accepted me as a Patrol Officer. I also cannot forget retired Sheriff Gerald B. Malcom, who also saw something in me and allowed me to advance through his leadership; and my predecessor, the late Sheriff Joe Nichols, for continuing to elevate my success.

“I send my deepest appreciation to the members of the Georgia Sheriffs’ Association for entrusting me with the responsibilities of President. I am thankful for my wife, children, siblings, and other family members who have supported my career throughout the years. Additionally, I am thankful for my staff who stand beside me and work hard every day to uphold the mission and values of the Newton County

“The Bridge Grant helps us continue our mission of providing opportunities for our community to participate in the arts. Through this grant, we can provide financial assistance to students in our programs who may not otherwise be able to participate. It also helps support free concerts in our community. tions Officer, Abigail Coggin said.

The FY23 first-round funding includes Bridge, Project, and Arts Education grants. The Bridge Grant will provide funding for operating support to 162 nonprofit arts organizations, many of which may have been negatively affected by COVID-19. The Project Grant will help fund 44 single art projects, which may include an art exhibit, a theatre production, a series of children's workshops, an artist residency, or may be used for capacity building projects, such as developing a strategic plan, creating a development plan, or providing professional development. The Arts Education Program Grant will be distributed to 63 organizations to support the arts in K-12 education, and may include a variety of disciplines, from visual art to music or theatre, to dance and creative writing.

Funds awarded by Georgia Council for the Arts include appropriations from the Georgia General Assembly and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Georgia Council for the Arts (GCA) uses Peer Review Panels to judge and review applications following standard practices set by the National Endowment for the Arts. Panelists are GCA Council members and fellow professionals who are experienced in the arts discipline or type of grant being reviewed, or are citizens with a record of arts activities, experience, and knowledge. Grant recipients include theaters, dance companies, museums, cities, colleges, and multi-discipline arts entities.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis, arts and cultural production in Georgia account for $29.2 billion in the state, totaling 4.2 percent of Georgia's economy, and accounting for more than 149,000 jobs.

ROUNDTREE CONTINUED FROM A1

We accepted them in ninth grade and they went all the way through with us. From doing school visits because we have to do school visits as part of my work as an education specialist, I just enjoyed sitting in the classes and watching the teachers and watching the children. One of the counties that we served had an opening for a teacher. I was not certified. I had not taken any classes, any of that. But they hired me on a provisional certificate and I started teaching and the rest is history.

What has kept you driven in the education field to advance from being a teacher to fulfilling roles at the board level?

BR: People saw things in me that I wasn't necessarily paying attention to. I was happy in my classroom teaching gifted English all day long. But I worked with principals at every school where I've worked, who would give me leadership opportunities in buildings, whether it was to serve as the department chair or the chair of some event or some initiative in the building. Both my master's and my specialist's are not in administration. They both are in teaching. They're both in middle grades education. I just had the opportunity from people recognizing things in me and using my innate leadership ability, to put me strategically in places. I've always been like a sponge who wants to learn and know everything. So, as I started with the opportunities in leadership, I just started reading and practicing and decided that I would go back to college and get an add on in administration.

How do you think your previous experience has prepared you for this role of interim superintendent?

BR: I always go back to my days as a school improvement specialist for the federal Title I program and then ultimately a Title I coordinator and then a federal programs director. In that, I've been able to still have my hand in education as it relates to teaching children because I was a school improvement specialist, so I would go into schools, assess what was going on, provide feedback, model if need be, but then the administrative part of being a federal programs director has taken me eons higher than it I probably would have gone, as it relates to understanding things pretty quickly, because there are a bunch of federal rules and regulations and laws that you have to follow. There is no wiggle room, so I learned the respect for rules and regulations particularly in the area of finance. I learned the various function and object codes, as it relates to budgeting. I learned a whole plethora of things and applied a whole plethora of skills and those skills have catapulted me to success in other roles beyond being a federal programs director.

What's your overarching goal for this upcoming school year?

BR: It is to keep the calm. I realize that I am only serving as interim superintendent. I did not apply for the permanent position. Change is hard, whether we realize it consciously or not, it is. Mrs. Fuhrey was the superintendent for 10 years. I can't speak for everyone, but I know just for me personally, that has done something to my psyche. I'm not one to come in and make a whole bunch of changes or do this thing or do that thing. Now there are some things I'm going to have to address and I will, but generally speaking, it is to just keep everything as steady and as calm as I can as we prepare to greet and welcome our new leader.

What are some more specific things that you're looking to target and improve? Why?

BR: I want to begin with safety first. We have a very tight safety plan across the district and it's on par with the academic achievement, because we must keep the children and all of the other stakeholders who work in the district safe. That's priority. We have a lot of different initiatives that we're implementing. One of them, of course, is putting school officers in all of our elementary schools. That's a big, big deal.

I'll spend the bulk of my time with academic achievement, because that is very important to me. We are preparing students to be well rounded for the future. We have a series of adjectives that we use to describe what we want a graduate from our school district to look like when he or she leaves us. We have to make sure that students are academically prepared. You still have to have some academic foundation no matter what you decide to do. To beef up our academic offerings and then our approach to teachers teaching and children learning is paramount to me. I have done a very, very, very deep dive into the data, because we now have trends and not all of those trends are positive trends. We do have a lot of positive trends, but in the data, I also see some trends that continue to present challenges for us. There are some areas where we should perform better.

Part of that is the Milestones, and I know that's very unpopular because so much hinges on that one test. But that is what the accountability paradigm is basically built on for the most part and so we have to change our thinking about the test. [It] has all kinds of ramifications for us as a district, for our students, for our teachers, for our administrators [and] even the district office staff. So I want us to change the narrative as it relates to success. No, it's not the end all be all. But it is extremely important, because the state's accountability paradigm with federal approval rests largely on that test. We had children finishing testing in 10, 15, 20 minutes. It bothers me because I know the children weren't able in that length of time to show what they really knew. Our children are bright, bright children. All the greatness in them, I want that to come out, and it doesn't come out if you're not taking the test seriously.

And again, I want to say this over and over, I don't agree about how much rides on it but I'm also a realist and I have to deal with the cards for which we have to play. So, I'm trying to just change the thought about what the test means alongside the other things that we look for as we look to the portrait of a graduate. I think there needs to be balance. It's stressful on them and that's why we tell the teachers, 'Don't focus so much on the test or tell them to, but do other things that will get them ready without them even knowing that you're preparing for the test.' We have a higher percentage of levels three and four than what we'll be reporting in the next few days by our state department. Did our children show that? No, but I don't think they didn't show it because they didn't know. It's frustrating. It's a long test. So no, it's not the best option in the world for anybody. But again, it's the set of cards that we have right now.

Your research interests include sociocultural factors in education, Title I, Part A policy and efficacy and the identification of underserved populations in gifted education. How do you plan on utilizing these interests as well as your student-centered approach within your tenure?

BR: I think the operative word in all of those things, even though I only said this word with one of the things, efficacy. Efficacy measures, 'Did we get the desired outcome for our implementation?' We have a lot of different things that we offer to children. I'm amazed at all of the nuances that are part of that Ag and and and STEM and Robotics and all those things. I'm also amazed at our athletics and I'm amazed at our fine arts and the various programs that we put in the schools as it relates to a lot of our technology based programs purchased with their federal dollars. But are we getting the desired effect from those things? I am going to be looking. That's one of the things that the boat will probably be rocked a little bit because I am, as I'm going through the data, looking at what have we done to mitigate what the data says. If we have programs in place to mitigate those things, have those programs been effective in raising the student's performance bar? I want to marry all of those things and look at efficacy and the effect of the implementation of what we did.

What do you think sets the Newton County School System apart from surrounding counties?

BR: I say this all the time. Newton County sits in a very unique location. We are still continuing to tap into this, but it's the diversity in the community. I think it's just a rich community with diverse thoughts. A lot of times when people talk about diversity, we think they're talking about ethnicities and things of that nature, but I'm talking about diversity in thought and diversity in approach. The passion that people have for the community here, the passion that the leaders have for the community here is second to none. The support that these same people have for the school system. I've worked in a lot of different places. You don't get that everywhere. There's a tug of war between your education system and other entities, but I don't see that here. And I think that's a great positive for this community.

Is there anything you would like to say to teachers, students, parents, anyone? How are you feeling?

BR: I am very excited for this school year. Every year, it's a new beginning. No matter what happened behaviorally, academically, [or] socially this past year, it's all in the past. You have a brand new slate. I encourage everyone to just have a good year. That looks different to everyone, but seize the opportunities that we provide in the school district, because we provide a lot of dynamic opportunities for everyone, for all of our stakeholders, parents, teachers, students. I will leave with my quote that I always use from Aristotle. He said, 'We are what we repeatedly do. Excellence, then, is not an act, it's a habit.' So, I just encourage people to make excellence your habit.

Georgia Milestones test scores show student progress toward pre-pandemic results

CAPITOL BEAT
News Service

ATLANTA – Georgia students have yet to fully recover from the disruptions of the pandemic, but they’re making steady progress, according to the latest results from the Georgia Milestones tests. This year’s results, released Friday, showed increases on 13 of 21 assessments. Most of the gains came in English/Language arts and math, and at the elementary and middle-school levels. Most declines occurred in science and social studies and at the high school level. Third-grade students scored some of the largest increases, gaining on average three points in English/Language arts over 2022 scores. three points in math, and three points in reading. However, third-grade scores were still three points below the pre-pandemic year of 2019 in English/Language Arts, while scores fell seven points in reading and six points in math.

Also, fewer than half of third graders scored at a proficient level in either English/Language arts or math. On the plus side, the third-grade students did better at reading, with 66% scoring proficient or above. “Even for this year’s third graders, whose entire academic career has been impacted by the pandemic, we can see evidence of growth,” State School Superintendent Richard Woods said Friday. “It’s particularly encouraging to see increases in English/Language arts and literacy, especially in the early grades – given all we know about the importance of learning to read and then reading to learn by third grade.” On the other hand, Georgia Milestones scores continued to drop for eighth grade students in science and social studies. Only 26 percent of eighth graders scored as proficient or above in science, down three points from last year and six points from 2019. Proficiency in social studies among eighth-graders fell to 36 percent this year, down one point from 2022 and five points from 2019. The state Department of Education (DOE) is launching several initiatives aimed at addressing those poor results. The agency is hiring 100 certified teachers to serve as virtual tutors in a program set to start with the upcoming 2023-24 school year. The DOE will partner with AmeriCorps to provide tutoring for up to 5,000 students at schools identified as in need of tutors and expand the availability of BEACON, which measures students’ progress throughout the school year to allow educators to target instruction. “There is still work to do,” Woods said. “We will continue to invest in strategies to address lost learning opportunities.”

State Attorney General signs off on Wellstar, Augusta University partnership

CAPITOL BEAT
News Service

ATLANTA – The Georgia Attorney General’s office has approved a planned partnership between the Wellstar and Augusta University health systems first announced late last year. A Report of Findings released Thursday evening gave the plan regulatory approval to move forward, as is required by a state law governing hospital acquisitions. The boards of Wellstar and the Augusta University Health System (AUHS) signed off on a 40-year agreement in March. The partnership will expand the university’s health sciences training and research across the state and build a broader affiliation between Wellstar and Augusta University’s Medical College of Georgia.

“The report concluded the pending transaction is consistent with the purposes set out in the law, including that the community will receive an enforceable commitment for fair and reason community benefits, there are no impermissible conflicts of interest and that there are sufficient safeguards to assure access to affordable care moving forward,” University System of Georgia Chancellor Sonny Perdue, Wellstar President and CEO Candice Saunders, and Augusta University President Brooks Keel wrote in a joint statement. “While work remains to be done before the transaction is complete, we are working diligently toward the goal of completing the deal this summer.” In the agreement, Wellstar has committed to investing nearly $800 million over 10 years in AUHS facilities and infrastructure, including more than $200 million allocated to Augusta University Medical Center, a more than 600-bed safety net and teaching hospital. Additionally, capital for a new hospital, medical office building and ambulatory surgery center in Columbia County will be included in the funding. The plan has gotten some pushback from state lawmakers representing districts in metro Atlanta, who complained Wellstar’s decision to close the 460-bed Atlanta Medical Center (AMC) last fall combined with the closing of a smaller Wellstar hospital in East Point earlier in 2022 has left a “health-care desert” in majority Black areas of central and southern Fulton County. The NAACP has filed two federal complaints over the decision. Wellstar officials countered that they were forced to close the two hospitals due to aging infrastructure, low patient volumes, skyrocketing labor costs and the loss of coronavirus relief funds that had been available earlier in the COVID pandemic. According to the joint statement from Perdue, Saunders, and Keel, all patients at both Wellstar and AUHS will be able to continue receiving health care at the same sites and through their current insurance plans. “We look forward to combining the best of community health care and academic medicine to improve quality and safety while driving world-class care advances where Georgians need them most,” the administrators wrote.

Thomasville showing the way to rural workforce development

CAPITOL BEAT
News Service

TIFTON, Ga. --- Rural Georgia has benefited disproportionately from a wave of unprecedented economic development across the state during the last four years, with more than three-quarters of projects going outside metro Atlanta. But there’s a downside to the progress: With a statewide unemployment rate of just 3.2 percent, there aren’t enough workers to fill the 400,000 job openings expected in the next decade. The small city of Thomasville in Southwest Georgia is doing something about it with an initiative launched in 2019 aimed at a lack of preparedness among students for holding good-paying jobs in today’s workforce and at barriers to work including inadequate child-care options, lack of transportation and a shortage of affordable housing. The key to Imagine Thomasville has been local political, business, and education leaders connecting with each other rather than staying inside their respective silos, Shelley Zorn, president and CEO of the Thomasville Payroll Development Authority, said July 26 during the Georgia Chamber of Commerce’s annual Rural Prosperity Summit on the campus of Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College. “What I like about this is we weren’t creating a lot of new programs and services,” Zorn said. “It just helped being in a room and knowing what’s out there. ... A lot of good work is going on because we coordinate with each other.” Zorn’s organization partnered with the Thomasville & Thomas County Chamber of Commerce to start Imagine Thomasville four years ago only to be sidetracked by the pandemic. The work got underway in earnest in 2021 when the organizations hired the Atlanta-based Georgia Partnership for Excellence in Education (GPÉE) – a Georgia Chamber affiliate – to conduct a year-long survey of hundreds of local residents. The results revealed several challenges including the need for better communication among local leaders. Lauren Radford, a local health-insurance broker, was put to work at the head of a committee tasked with improving those relationships. Radford brought together a diverse cross-section of Thomasville residents in terms of race and socioeconomic status to talk in honest terms about inequality. “These are uncomfortable conversations, but it’s necessary,” she said. “We are having to establish trust that never existed before. We’re getting there.” To get at the workforce preparedness issue, it was necessary to focus on education, and the challenges are daunting. Forty percent of Georgians 25 and older have no credential or degree beyond high school, said Dana Rickman, the GPÉE’s president. However, 65 percent of Georgia adults will need some form of post-secondary credential “of value” by 2033, Rickman said. Closing that gap between workforce needs and educational achievement will be difficult given the shortage of qualified students. Currently, of every 100 Georgians who enter high school, 81 will graduate on time, 62 will enroll in some form of higher education within two years of graduating high school, while only 43 will make it through the second year of post-secondary education. “We’re losing 57 percent of the pipeline,” Rickman said. Rickman said early learning is a key to improving those discouraging numbers. But in Thomasville, there’s a shortage of early-care and early-learning opportunities for kids. Zorn said a survey reported 2,750 children up to the age of 5 in Thomasville but only 1,333 child care spots. Lisa Billups, executive director of the Thomasville Community Resource Center, is tackling the child-care shortage with a program that involves teaching 2- and 3-year-olds to read at home. Center employees visit families for 30 minutes twice a week for 26 weeks bringing books. The program started with five families but has grown its capacity to 40. However, 60 families have expressed interest, Billups said. “We can’t keep up with the demand,” she said. Billups said one side benefit to the program is it gives the center an opportunity to encourage parents to sign up for GED classes so they can earn at least a high school diploma. “I believe education is the great equalizer,” she said. Thomasville City Councilman Mike Chastain said the city is taking on two barriers to employment. A newly founded nonprofit is focusing on housing by providing land and funding, he said. The city also recently landed a grant of $175,000 to pursue a variety of transportation improvements, Chastain said. “Government is not the solution, but there are things we can do to have a positive impact,” he said. Georgia Chamber President and CEO Chris Clark said the good news is not as many young people are leaving rural Georgia for jobs in urban areas as in past years. Members of Generation Z, the latest cohort to begin joining the workforce, tend to be more risk averse than their Millennial elders and, thus, less likely to leave home, he said. “There’s a light out there,” Clark said. “These workforce issues will be better.”

Teachers, I appreciate you

As Newton County’s 2023-2024 school year is about to be in full swing, I now approach education with a brand new set of eyes. Though I have always considered educators as one of the most crucial puzzle pieces of our society, that sentiment has amplified tenfold after my temporary experience in the classroom.

After I graduated from the University of Georgia in December 2022, I made the decision to fill in as a substitute teacher to earn money while applying for careers in the field I earned my undergraduate degree in (journalism).

My mother is a fifth grade teacher at Oak Hill Elementary. Therefore, I chose to exclusively sub at Oak Hill as I was only planning on subbing for a couple months and felt the most familiar with the faculty there.

While subbing at the elementary level, I encountered unfathomable classroom behavior and a mental and physical exhaustion like no other. I was appalled at the vast lack of respect throughout each grade level and indifference to completing schoolwork.

What teachers have been dealing with in the classroom recently is unprecedented. I realize there are other factors in a child’s life that have the potential to affect the way they behave and sometimes those children need the most attention, but what I witnessed as a substitute was blatant disrespect and disregard from students for their actions.

With that being said, I want to acknowledge that not every child displays such behaviors. However, from what I experienced as a substitute teacher, a large chunk of class time is routinely dedicated to addressing poor behavior and, as a result, the well-behaved kids are often overlooked.

Recently, Bishop Clarence Harris, a preacher and teacher, echoed similar thoughts as a public participant at the Board of Education meeting on July 18.

“Respect, honor, obedience have been replaced with profanity, violence, murder, assault of teachers,” Harris said. “And it’s not just in our country, it’s seen globally. The airways have been filled with these such nuances and have put the profession of education at risk. It’s an at risk profession because beginning teachers right now only last about a tenure, about three years, because of being the accountant in the classroom.

“Respect and authority is right now out the window and it’s critical we understand that the baby boomers [and] my generation have done a poor job in addressing their children and most importantly, the COVID babies who right now feel a sense of entitlement in education, not doing their work. [Teachers] have put our hands to the plow. Many teachers are really working feverishly, and they’re working to make our country better, and our county as well.”

Although I am simply a journalist who did not pursue the field of education, I am very passionate about advocating for teachers. Educating the future generations of our society is not an easy task to tackle. I say it all the time – it takes a special person to teach.

I can remember every teacher I’ve ever had. I can remember specific lessons and activities certain teachers implemented into the classroom, like the nature walk we went on during AP Language and Composition junior year of high school while learning about Transcendentalism, or the song my elementary school music teacher made up about Floyd Street that we would sing along to.

Teachers leave lasting impressions on all of us. They are our leaders, our role models and our mentors. A teacher does not clock out whenever the dismissal bell rings. Their jobs extend into their personal time, after hours at home, when they make sacrifices in their free time in order to better their classroom for the next day.

Though my time as a substitute teacher was short and challenging, I am grateful to have had that opportunity. My experience in the classroom allowed me to walk in the shoes of an educator each day (with way less responsibility than a normal teacher has) and catch a glimpse of what they endure daily. After doing so, I now think every week should be “Teacher Appreciation Week.”

To all teachers in the community, know that I, along with so many others, am rooting for you and wishing you all the best as this new school year unfolds.

DICK YARBROUGH COLUMNIST

No winners in media coverage of UGA football program

There are no winners here. I am talking about an article that appeared recently in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution concerning allegations of misconduct by members of the University of Georgia football team.

UGA’s general counsel, Michael Raeber, sent the AJC a nine-page letter demanding a retraction, claiming a number of errors and fabrications and that the lead reporter, Alan Judd, took quotes out of context.

The paper reviewed the claims with a team of editors and attorneys, according to a statement from The Atlanta Journal-Constitution’s editor-in-chief, Leroy Chapman, but did not retract the article as Raeber’s letter demanded. However, the AJC did correct and remove several paragraphs that focused on the assertion of sexual misconduct. They also changed a headline which originally read “UGA football program rallies when players accused of abusing women” to “UGA football program rallied in two incidents when players were accused of abusing women.”

The paper also acknowledged a second error when Judd improperly joined two quotes from a taped interview between Jamaal Jarrett, one of the accused players, and the Athens-Clarke County Police. The quotes, which occurred several minutes apart, were presented as if they had been said together. The result was that Alan Judd, an investigative reporter who had worked for the AJC for over 24 years, was summarily dismissed.

It seems this wasn’t Judd’s first rodeo involving questionable reporting. In 1988, he resigned from the Louisville Courier-Journal after the paper was forced to issue a number of corrections and clarifications and deal with a statement from a schoolteacher challenging a reference to him in a story on high school football, of which Judd had been an assigned reporter.

Sadly, this gives those who rail about fake news another “I told you so.” What happened at the AJC was an anomaly and one they corrected quickly. Chapman said, “Our editorial integrity and the trust our community has in us is at the core of who we are.” That is true for all of us in this profession. I have been around the business long enough to know that reporters and editors strive diligently to produce accurate accounts of their stories and leave the personal opinions to wiseacres like me.

One former AJC staffer harrumphed that the paper, “caved to pressure from perhaps the most powerful institution in the state. Who would want to be an investigative reporter at the AJC or anywhere when lawyers can get you fired?” He totally misses the point. Judd’s reporting was found to be lacking and he has paid the price. Twice. This isn’t about pressure. It’s about accuracy. It’s about journalistic integrity.

No doubt the corrections and the dismissal of the reporter responsible produced gleeful high-fives from many Dawg fans. It pains me to remind them that much of the reporting was correct. Two people did die after too much alcohol and they were racing at high speeds (104 mph) after having celebrated the team’s second consecutive national championship. Yet, it doesn’t seemed to made much of an impression on a number of our scholar-athletes.

When freshman linebacker Samuel M’Pemba was ticketed for driving 88 miles per hour in a 55 mph zone in Oconee County a couple of weeks ago, his citation was at least the 11th traffic-related violation involving UGA football players since the Jan. 15 fatal crash.

Many of the Richard Petty wannabes seem to have been driving Dodge Chargers, which can go from zero to 60 mph in 7 seconds or less and which I suspect they got as a result of the NIL (Name, Image and Likeness) financial support program available to college athletes. Tom Ritch, a reader in Brunswick, suggested that instead of a Dodge Charger, the players be issued a Toyota Prius. He says that would

MIKE COLLINS U.S. REPRESENTATIVE (GA-10)

I Went to Taiwan, Here’s What I Learned

I recently had the honor of joining Representative Kevin Hern and a group of distinguished colleagues for a visit to America’s friends in Taiwan. My first trip abroad as a member of Congress was educational and eye-opening.

After hearing concerns from Taiwan’s leadership regarding Chinese aggression, the importance of trade between our two countries, and the island’s energy strategy, I now have a deeper appreciation for this key U.S. partner—but also a degree of unease about the path it has taken.

In just two years, Taiwan will completely phase out nuclear power to create a “nuclear-free homeland.” Alternative energy sources, such as wind and solar, will replace nuclear energy and constitute 20 percent of Taiwanese energy by 2025.

This shift could spell both short and long-term complications for Taiwan, and here’s why.

The country’s aging power grid already faces immense challenges, including regular brownouts and blackouts. I spoke to industry leaders who quipped about the high frequency of power outages. Taiwan Power Company reported thousands of blackout incidents in the first half of 2022 alone. Island-wide power outages affecting up to five million residents are not uncommon.

An increased reliance on off-shore wind and solar energy may only exacerbate the threat to Taiwan’s power grid. The head of renewable energy at KPMG Taiwan admitted the risk of incorporating additional “green” energy sources, stating that without a “more resilient power grid,” blackouts “could happen over and over again.”

This as China continues flexing its muscles by conducting military exercises in what Taiwan’s Defense Ministry calls a “blockade.” Dependence on off-shore wind farms instead of on-shore nuclear power plants gives the Chinese Navy more opportunity to destabilize the island. Taiwan already relies on maritime imports for up to 97 percent of its energy.

The Biden administration must get serious about offering support to our ally. Hardly a day passes without the Chinese Air Force or Navy violating Taiwanese airspace. Rest assured, when it comes to countering China, our interests align.

A significant aspect of U.S.-Taiwan security policy is arms sales, but these

COMMUNITY GIVING BACK

Blackstock hosts first ever back to school giveaway

STAFF REPORT
news@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — On Sunday, July 23, Newton High School alumnus Keyshawn Blackstock hosted his first ever “Back to School” giveaway.

The giveaway was held in Conyers as the current Michigan State Spartan wanted to give back to his hometown.

“Showing some positivity to the kids and letting them enjoy themselves before going back to school was good,” Blackstock said. “I want to do everything with a purpose and a reason behind everything. A lot of people who don’t have it right now with everything expensive, I had the urge to give back and I gave back to the community.

“God put me in a position to give back.”

There were book bags given away, free haircuts, a bouncy house, hula hooping, face painting, girls could get their nails done, game trucks, grilled hamburgers and more.

Blackstock cannot exactly pinpoint the exact number of attendees, but he estimates 300-plus were there. He even ran out of book bags to give away.

Amid all of the events, there was something that stood out to Blackstock the most.

“Putting a smile on a kid’s face,” Blackstock said. “That was one of the biggest things is seeing the kids smiling. Giving back to the community and making everybody happy was tremendous to me.”

Blackstock gave shout outs to Newton High’s football program, too. In particular, head coach Josh Skelton and the players who assisted with the day.

Additionally, Mackenzy Jordan, Kristian Phillips, Reginald Kelly, Sanlanta Jugg and others were among the people who helped make the day possible.

This year’s event might be just a few days removed, but Blackstock stressed there are already plans to bring this event back and then some. He aspires to give back at Thanksgiving, Christmas and any other opportunities made available.

“We’re going to keep building off of that,” Blackstock said. “This just wasn’t a one time thing.”

purchases are experiencing significant delivery delays. The delays are primarily a result of a U.S. manufacturing backlog and a distracted Biden administration with arms deliveries to Ukraine taking preference over Taiwan. Unfortunately, the White House has focused more on the war in Ukraine, where U.S. interests are yet to be sufficiently defined.

Currently, Taiwan is waiting on $19 billion in unfulfilled arms sales for delivery from the United States. The Biden administration should fulfill its statutory obligation under the Taiwan Enhanced Resiliency Act and provide Congress with its plans to supply Taiwan with the allotted $2 billion in loans under the Foreign Military Financing program. This step puts America on track to clear the backlog and properly equip Taiwan to deter Chinese aggression.

In the meantime, Congress is playing an active role in U.S.-Taiwan relations. House Republicans have strengthened our economic relationship by affirming the United States-Taiwan Initiative on 21st-Century Trade. Additionally, under H.R. 1159, the State Department would be required to issue reviews and updates related to our relations with Taiwan, giving us an up-to-date understanding of how we ought to cooperate further.

Despite the Biden administration’s preoccupation with Ukraine, countering the growing Chinese threat is our top foreign policy priority. Taiwan shares our interests in the Indo-Pacific region. If we want a strong, independent Taiwan that can stand up to China, the White House and Congress alike need to utilize all available means to equip Taiwan and encourage the use of the least vulnerable sources of energy. U.S. security in the region depends on it.

solve the speeding issue. I love my readers.

Given the ease of changing schools in today’s world of college football, coaches have to be careful what they say to players lest they up and transfer to a rival school. It takes a team leader like Sedrick Van Pran, UGA’s starting center and a likely high pick in next year’s NFL draft, who is said to have discussed with potential miscreants what will happen if they don’t behave. Hopefully, that will make a difference.

The bottom line is the news media have sustained a black eye for not accurately reporting on a football program that badly needed the scrutiny before it tarnished the reputation of an excellent academic institution. Alas, there are no winners here.

BOOST CONTINUED FROM A8

Johnson began channeling her positivity through softball at 4 years old.

For the first six years of her childhood playing days, Johnson’s dad was her coach. Her earliest softball memories are at Earl O’Neal Complex in Conyers.

Then, Marcus Smith — who is currently an assistant coach for the Lady Tigers — was Johnson’s travel ball coach. So, she was playing recreation league softball in addition to playing on the travel ball circuit.

Johnson accentuated her desire to first come into the sport that has also fueled her career to this point.

“You come to a point when you’re younger where you develop a love for the game,” Johnson said. “You develop relationships with the coaches, families and friends. That’s where you grow as a person.”

Johnson continued her softball career as a Veterans Middle School Lady General. When she was coming through, sixth graders couldn’t play sports, so Johnson served as a manager for the softball team. The next two years, Johnson helped the team on the field.

In Johnson’s eighth grade year, the Lady Generals advanced to the championship game and finished second.

Johnson enjoys more aspects of the game than just the wins and losses, though.

“This game is so much more than just a game. Developing your character, your mental toughness and, not only physically, but you’re out here going through so much,” Johnson said. “You’re coming out here when you don’t want to be out here. It’s so much more than the sport is. Every girl that has played to the standard that we’re playing here, you’re not going to hear somebody say, ‘I’m just out here to be out here.’ You have to have some love for the game.”

Johnson has played all over the field to help her team. Her first position was shortstop, but she has also been a first and second baseman.

Her middle school days is when Johnson stepped into her primary role at third base.

Head coach Miranda Lamb called Johnson’s defensive play in that position as being a “vacuum.” Evidence of that can be found in Johnson’s .933 fielding percentage in her junior year.

Johnson mentioned how supportive her head coach has been in her high school career.

“To hear that Lamb had played third and she was with me. She was texting me when I made the team and made a comment like, ‘I know a few things about third. I got you,’” Johnson said. “So I was like, ‘This is it. This is my spot. That’s where I’m supposed to be.’”

Throughout Johnson’s four-year Lady Tiger career, the program has experienced great success. They ended a seven-year playoff drought and captured the first region title since 2015 a season ago.

Johnson has played a pivotal role on the team. In fact, Johnson recorded a .351 batting average, had four home runs and 34 RBIs in addition to her defensive play.

Now, Johnson and her teammates aspire to do more in 2023. The Lady Tigers enter the new season on Aug. 4 at Apalachee. Then, Region 3-AAAAAA play commences on Aug. 17 at Forest Park.

When the games begin, the Lady Tigers are aiming for a run in Columbus. And, coming up short in the Super Regionals last year has only fueled that desire more.

“At the end of that game last year, I wanted more,” Johnson said. “I knew that this upcoming season we were going to push harder. We’re going to move forward. We’re not losing.

“We’re not only going to make it. We’re going to compete.”

side and Newton on Aug. 26 for the Newton County Diamond Day.

Lamb has just one expectation of her players in those games.

“I want to see them compete in tougher games. I don’t want them to be scared to mess up in games like that. Even if they do make a mistake, learn that it’s OK even in that setting,” Lamb said. “If we’re playing the region schedule, if they mess up in that game because it’s not a big deal overall. Whereas if it’s the Apalachee and the Flowery Branch like we’re opening up with, I want them to be able to see, ‘Hey, I can make an error, but I can make up for it.’”

Last season’s region championship game was a grind, too, for the Lady Tigers. They edged out the Woodward Academy Lady War Eagles 8-7 in eight innings. That was after Alcovy won the two regular season matchups 4-3 and 6-3, respectively.

Another way Alcovy has been working on getting better in the offseason has been putting in time in the weight room.

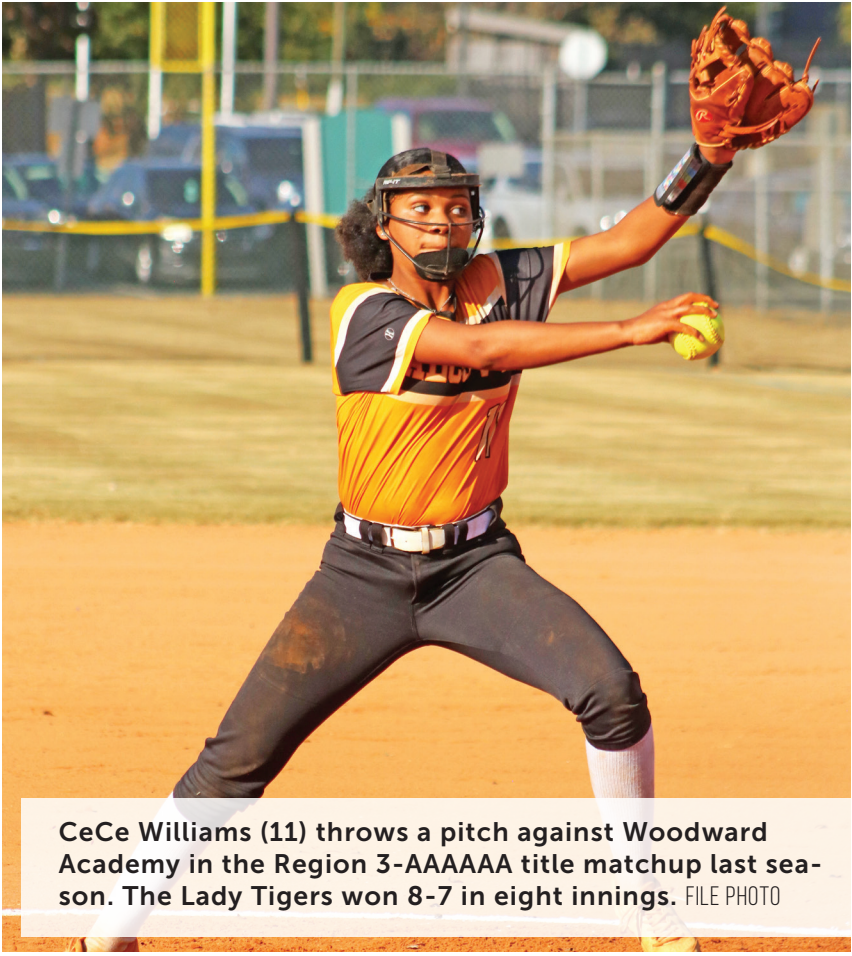

Before the players go down to the field to work on drills and such, they begin their workout period investing time lifting weights.

This has been implemented in the program for the past few years, but Lamb believes the players are embracing the significance of it.

“I have a handful of girls that, even though we are working out today, I know at least two of them went to the gym this morning,” Lamb said. “They enjoy what the weight room provides for them. It could be the mental but also the physical.”

Alcovy returns the majority of last year’s production.

the squad with a .481 batting average, 42 RBIs and tied with senior Makinzie Johnson for the second-most home runs with four. Senior Mackenzie Parrott led the way with five homers.

Meanwhile, senior Ashlyn Hoy made the biggest impact as a base runner. She had a team-high .602 on-base percentage and recorded 51 stolen bases, which placed her sixth in Class AAAAAA.

Williams also contributed in the pitcher’s circle by finishing with a 7-3 record in 59.1 innings pitched. She recorded a 2.71 ERA and 76 strikeouts.

All of these competitors return with their eyes set on making a run in Columbus.

Lamb pointed to the classes before, beginning with the class of 2020 players, as crucial to the groundwork being laid.

Now, Lamb and her squad want to close the deal.

“Having [the class of 2020 players] buy in and not give up on the program and see it come to fruition. I know we had goals for them that they didn’t make. Last year, we had goals that weren’t where we wanted them to be,” Lamb said.

“Hopefully, it’ll be another historical year and that unfinished business will get finished.”

ALCOVY SOFTBALL SEASON PREVIEW

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Lady Tigers are Columbus minded in 2023

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
Sports Editor

COVINGTON, Ga. — Similar to the Ray Charles song, “Georgia on My Mind,” the Alcovy Lady Tigers begin 2023 with one thing on their minds: Columbus.

Playing at the South Commons Complex this season would be the first time Alcovy has done so in a while.

It came close to accomplishing that feat last season, but came up short losing to Effingham County 5-4 in the Super Regionals.

Immediately after the game, head coach Miranda Lamb shared two words with her team – Unfinished business.

“When it didn’t happen, that night in right field I told them, ‘We have unfinished business,’” Lamb said. “We had very high hopes last year of making it to Columbus. That’s been a goal for the last couple of years.”

Resetting the program’s history books is nothing foreign for this group.

Two seasons ago, Alcovy ended a seven-year postseason drought. And last season, it captured its first region championship since 2015.

Lamb has full faith that this team can get over the hump to play in Columbus come October.

“This is a group that has the talent to make it and they have the heart to do it. We’ve been instilling in them to work for each other, because you’re going to quit on yourself,” Lamb said. “I’m hoping that trickles down from spring workouts to summer workouts into the fall.”

One of Lamb’s emphases has been the schedule, specifically the non-region part.

In last year’s 14 region games, the Lady Tigers averaged a 16-1 victory. They also played 14 non-region games, had a 8-6 record and the average margin of victory was 7-5, which featured two extra inning matches.

This go round, Lamb and her staff have upped the ante.

The Lady Tigers begin the season by competing against Flowery Branch and Apalachee on Aug. 4’s Apalachee Diamond Day. They will travel to places like Social Circle, George Walton Academy, Duluth, Prince Avenue, Grovetown and Grayson as well.

Alcovy will also host in-county rivals East-

Johnson provides positive boost

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD

COVINGTON, Ga. — A glass half full. That seems to describe senior Makinzie Johnson’s personality on and off the softball field at Alcovy High School.

Whether it’s at a practice or at a game, Johnson always seems to don a smile or share laughs with her teammates. In fact, fellow senior Ashlyn Hoy summed up Johnson as a “ray of sunshine.”

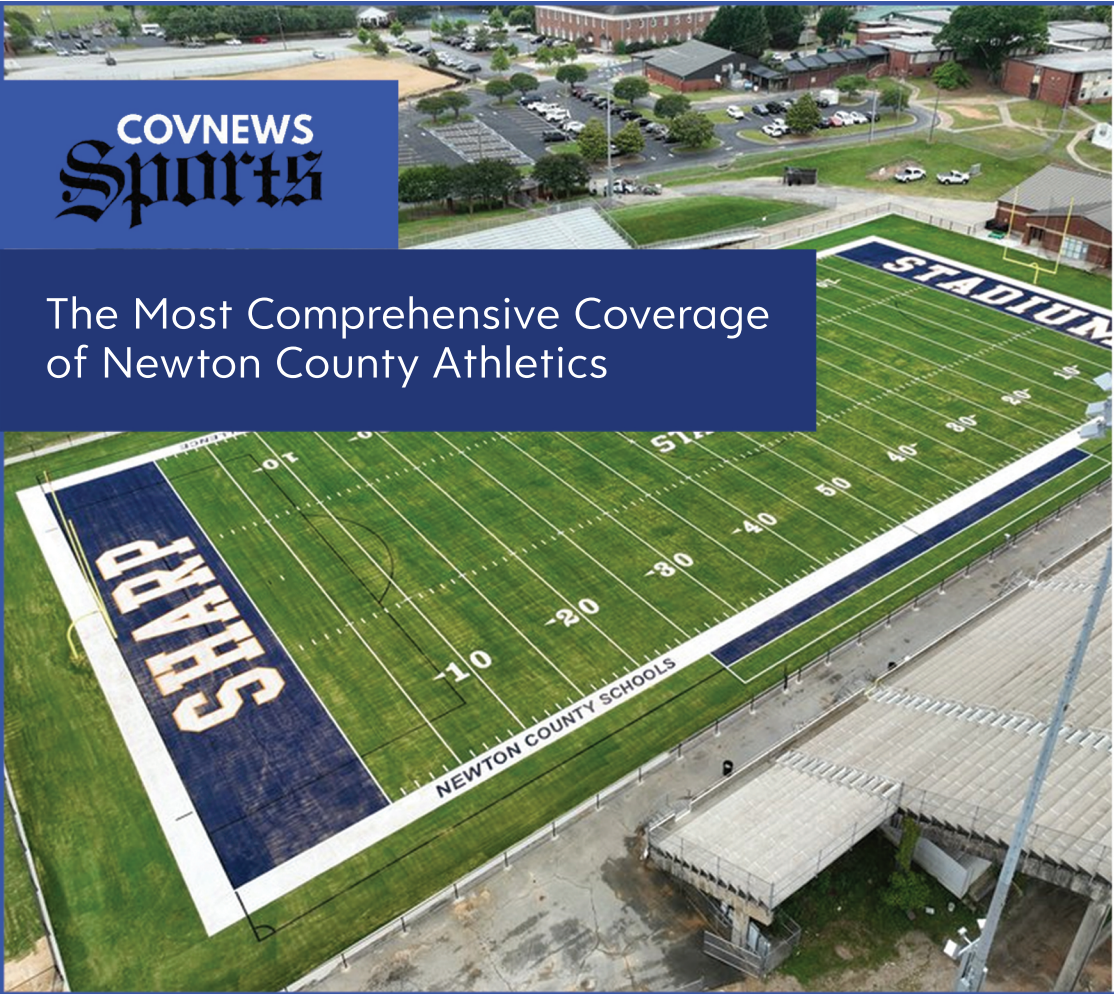

Having such a personality is a no brainer for Johnson.

“Would you rather have a sucky attitude or would you rather be happy?” Johnson said. “I’d rather be happy and make mistakes than be mad and make mistakes.”

Johnson highlighted that, despite the look, there are instances where it’s difficult to maintain such a persona.

“There have been so many times I have been like, ‘You know what, I can’t do this anymore.’ Then just taking a deep breath most of the time and knowing that, even if something were to go wrong, I’m not perfect,” Johnson said. “I make a lot of mistakes. But knowing the Lord’s here with me and I have this family and great friends around me is the best thing you can ask for.”

Zoëy Deschanel
in "Physical"

'Physical' evidence: Zoëy Deschanel joins Apple TV+ series for final season

For her latest return to series work, Zoëy Deschanel is getting "Physical."

Television's former "New Girl" joins the cast of Apple TV+'s fitness-themed comedy as it starts its third and final season, Wednesday, Aug. 2. Her character, Kelly, is an ex-sitcom star who becomes a new threat to Sheila Rubin (returnee Rose Byrne, "Platonic") as the latter continues to grow along with the getting-into-shape business in 1980s San Diego. Sheila has had plenty of challenges along the way already, including building her own identity in the face of her husband's (Rory Scovel, "Babylon," 2022) political aspirations.

Geoffrey Arend ("Madam Secretary"), Paul Sparks ("Boardwalk Empire"), Deirdre Friel ("New Amsterdam") and Lou Taylor Pucci ("American Horror Story") also continue their roles in the Annie Weisman ("Desperate Housewives")-created show's final round, which Deschanel was pleased to sport a different look for — going blond for her role.

"It was so much fun," the actress confirms. "The hair, makeup and costume team on that show was absolutely amazing? and she's a complex character, very multifaceted. I kind of got to play two different versions of the character that made sense within one character, so that was cool. It's really clever storytelling." Deschanel also appreciated working with Byrne: "I love Rose. She's a really kind person, very easy to work with? and so generous. She has no ego or vanity; she's just a good actress who's really lovely. I can't say enough good things about her."

Though she went into "Physical" knowing her role would last only so long, due to it being the last season, Deschanel maintains, "I would have been happy to come back if it was going for more seasons, but I like that the character has a beginning, middle and end. I get to play it all out, as opposed to when you're on a show and you're unsure of whether it's ending or not. We had a number of seasons like that on 'New Girl,' so it was nice to know ahead of time what I would be leaving people with. I could really be intentional about all of that."

Being able to concentrate just on acting without other responsibilities on "Physical" also was pleasant for Deschanel, though she admits, "It's hard for me to take off my 'producer' hat. I want everything to be efficient and make sense from a production standpoint, so I always bring that with me. I always think that if you're on a set, you're a filmmaker, even if you have different jobs. You need to make sure you're collaborating in a way that everyone is helping you do your best, so knowing about all the other jobs like camera and sound is really important, I think."

As for her own relationship with the main subject of "Physical," Deschanel reports, "I work out every day. I always have, pretty much, and I pumped up my fitness routine for this show. And I danced growing up, so I've always been into fitness."

The sister of fellow actress Emily Deschanel ("Bones"), Zoëy is quite visible on the home screen these days, also in her Max culinary reality series "What Am I Eating?" and commercials that cast her as a "Fairy Hotel Mother" who soothes guests. She reflects: "All the stuff I did over time has all come out. When 'New Girl' ended, I took some time off to be with my kids, because that was such a massive and all-encompassing project. (Deschanel was also an executive producer of that show.) Then there was the pandemic year, and then I just went right back to work and did a bunch of stuff."

Additionally, "New Girl" has gotten a rebirth in the streaming world, having relocated recently to Hulu and Peacock. "It's kind of incredible," Deschanel says of viewers finding that show again. "I think that with the way we made it, it kind of ended up being evergreen in its content. There aren't many things that date it, so I think it feels comforting to people."

"The way that TV content is now, there are fewer episodes and fewer seasons, and we don't get to spend all that much time with the characters. It's also more serialized than it is episodic, and I think 'Friends' has similar kinds of things that keep bringing people to it. Lots of people tell me that 'New Girl' is their comfort show."

As those who keep up on celebrity relationships know, Deschanel presently is in one with Jonathan Scott, one of TV's renovation-minded "Property Brothers." She deems herself "very lucky to have the best boyfriend in the world, and that's really all I care about, having someone great to share my time with. I think we understand each other on the level of what the other person is going through, being public people, so that's helpful. It's a nice point of connection."

Catch Zoëy Deschanel alongside Rose Byrne in the third and final season of "Physical," premiering on Apple TV+ Wednesday, Aug. 2.

Myles Garrett of the Cleveland Browns

The Basketball Tournament ESPN 7 p.m.

Not to be confused with March Madness, The Basketball Tournament is a 64-team, single elimination tournament that gives $1 million to the last team standing. Just which team will be cashing that check? From Daskalakis Athletic Center in Philadelphia.

NFL Football

WXIA 8 p.m. NFL 12 a.m.

It's a battle in the Rust Belt as the New York Jets and the Cleveland Browns open the 2023 NFL season with the Hall of Fame Game live from Tom Benson Hall of Fame Stadium in Canton, Ohio. Will Aaron Rodgers make this trip worthwhile for Gang Green?

Beat Bobby Flay

FOOD 9 p.m.

It's "tasteful design" when hip-hop icon Lil Jon and Anne Burrell get Bobby Flay's kitchen glammed up with lights, beats and bottle service before Chefs Eva Pesantez and Robert Butts put Bobby on the VIP list. But will things taste as good as they look?

Help! My House Is Haunted

TRAV 10 p.m.

Chief Terry McConky (Kevin Heffernan), Capt. Eddie Penisi (Steve Lemme) and the crew welcome Mickleberry (Chris Avila), a new probie, to the shift. But it turns out that a funny name is not a good enough reason for picking a new firefighter.

"Documentary: Mark Cavendish: Never Enough"

With exclusive access to Mark, his wife Peta, his team-mates, and his coaches, the film charts the rise, fall and resurrection of a genuine sporting great and the wildest, most effective, and most exciting cyclist ever as he works to break the record for most stage wins ever in the history of the Tour de France.

"Untold: Johnny Football"

This critically acclaimed docuseries returns with Volume 3, a four-week summer event that pulls back the curtain on tales from the wide (and wild) world of sports. This installment looks at Johnny Manziel, who, in 2012, was the brightest star in all of sports as an undersized freshman quarterback at unheralded Texas A&M. Dubbed "Johnny Football," the magnetic football player captured the nation's attention and initially relished his alter ego, but eventually Manziel rejected his newfound fame and suddenly lost his way. With astonishing candor, Manziel and those closest to him details what happened behind the scenes.

"Painkiller"

A fictionalized retelling of events, this scripted limited series explores some of the origins and aftermath of the opioid crisis in America, highlighting the stories of the perpetrators, victims, and truth-seekers whose lives are forever altered by the invention of OxyContin. An examination of crime, accountability, and the systems that have repeatedly failed hundreds of thousands of Americans, the series is based on the book "Pain Killer" by Barry Meier and the New Yorker Magazine article "The Family That Built the Empire of Pain" by Patrick Radden Keefe. Uzo Aduba, Matthew Broderick, Taylor Kitsch, Dina Shihabi, West Duchovny and John Rothman star.

"Movie: Heart of Stone"

Secret Agent Rachel Stone (Gal Gadot) is not your average operative — Stone is a member of an elusive and mysterious group of elite spies known as the Charter. The most highly trained agents of all, with no political leanings and no national allegiances, the Charter work together to keep peace in a turbulent world. To achieve their lofty aims, those agents rely on a one-of-a-kind asset called the Heart, the world's most advanced and powerful AI. When a hacker sets out to take control of the Heart and take over the world, it's up to Agent Stone to stop them before it's too late. Jamie Dornan, Alia Bhatt, Sophie Okonedo, Jing Lusi and Paul Ready also star.

bestof ... BY JAY BOBBIN

"The Jerk" (1979): Under Carl Reiner's direction, Martin — who returns in the third season of "Only Murders in the Building" Tuesday, Aug. 8, on Prime Video — broke into movie stardom in a big way as a homebound simpleton who inadvertently becomes a worldly tycoon.

"Pennies From Heaven" (1981): Many Martin fans were surprised by the relative darkness of this musical, based in a BBC drama and casting him as a Depression-era peddler of tunes, but it's grown a devoted following.

"Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid" (1982): Though it's mainly notable for director Reiner's technical expertise, which involves matching scenes from earlier movies, this film-noir tribute offers a fine Martin as a 1940s-vintage private eye.

"All of Me" (1984): Reteaming with director Reiner, Martin does complicated and hilarious work — in tandem with Lily Tomlin — as an attorney who inherits a deceased client's spirit, literally.

"Three Amigos!" (1986): Martin, Chevy Chase and Steve Martin play actors who become a cut-rate "Magnificent Seven" to save oppressed Mexican villagers.

STEVE MARTIN MOVIES

"Roxanne" (1987): This clever update of "Cyrano de Bergerac" casts Martin (who also wrote the screenplay) as a long-nosed fire chief who courts a woman (Daryl Hannah) via one of his team members (Rick Rossovich).

"Planes, Trains and Automobiles" (1987): Few Thanksgiving movies are classics, but John Hughes' comedy pairing Martin and John Candy is one of them.

"Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" (1988): Martin and Michael Caine make a great team as con men who compete over an heiress (Glenn Headly) and her money.

"Parenthood" (1989): Less serious than the most recent television series that was based on it, director Ron Howard's tale of family relations features Martin as the head of the clan.

"L.A. Story" (1991): A TV weatherman tries to win a reporter's (Victoria Tennant) heart — with help from a talking billboard — in this fanciful comedy.

"Father of the Bride" (1991): In a well-moderated performance, Martin makes a delightful successor to the original version's Spencer Tracy as a dad who has a hard time embracing his daughter's (Kimberly Williams) impending marriage ... and her fiancé (George Newbern).

"Grand Canyon" (1991): Martin fares well in a change of pace as a deep-thinking Hollywood director whose ruminations on where society is headed prove unfortunately, and quite personally, well-founded.

"HouseSitter" (1992): Martin's facial reactions are everything as he plays a homeowner whose dwelling is invaded secretly by a crasher (Goldie Hawn).

"Bowfinger" (1999): A terrific Martin plays the calculating title filmmaker, who decides to shoot a movie without its star's (Eddie Murphy) knowledge.

"Bringing Down the House" (2003): Martin and Queen Latifah exude great teamwork as Internet pen pals whose eventual meeting yields big surprises.

"Cheaper by the Dozen" (2003): Very much in "Father of the Bride" mode, Martin still makes a warm father figure in this remake of the true tale of a large family.

"Shopgirl" (2005): In an adaptation of his novel, Martin is affecting as the wealthy older man who vies for the heart of said shopgirl (Claire Danes).

"It's Complicated" (2009): A charming Martin makes a real option for a divorcee's (Meryl Streep) affections while her ex-husband (Alec Baldwin) also courts her.

TCM's hosts should be staying in place

Q: Will the current Turner Classic Movies hosts be continuing on the channel? – James Flanagan, Terre Haute, Ind.

A: As of the time this column was written, that is the plan. In fact, TCM's Ben Mankiewicz assured fans in a tweet that "we're not going anywhere" (in reference to himself and the other four regular hosts) while public pushback against personnel changes at the classic movie channel was at its peak recently.

The concern voiced by TCM devotees – and by prominent filmmakers such as Steven Spielberg, Martin Scorsese and Paul Thomas Anderson – inspired the reinstatement of one of the pivotal staff members who had been scheduled to leave, programming chief Charles "Charlie" Tabesh. Some changes were evident in the immediate wake of the initial cuts, such as the sudden absence of the hosted "outros" that followed many of the movies by TCM, but those are slated to be reinstated over the coming weeks.

Q: Will "Single Drunk Female" be coming back? – Kim Wade, via e-mail

A: It won't. Freeform has canceled the show after two seasons, and its episodes have been taken off Hulu (though they remain available for purchase from other streaming services). Sofia Black-D'Elia starred in the show as a recovering alcoholic who had to move back in with her mother (Ally Sheedy) after her drinking led to a huge professional setback for her. Freeform now is run by a different regime than the one that ordered the series.

Q: I recently saw a mention of a series called "Where the Action Is." What was that, and when was it on? – Charlie Bates, Gallup, N.M.

A: It wasn't what the title might suggest. It was a mid-1960s, weekday-afternoon ABC music show created by Dick Clark as a companion to "American Bandstand," and though he did voice-overs introducing performers and sometimes interviewed them on camera, the hosts were Linda Scott (who had some hits of her own, including "I've Told Every Little Star") and fellow singer Steve Alaimo.

Singer-songwriter Laura Nyro and Paul Revere and the Raiders member Keith Allison also were regulars on the program, on which that latter group appeared frequently. The guest lineup overall was pretty impressive, ranging from The Beatles, Aretha Franklin and The Everly Brothers to Cher, Stevie Wonder and Ike & Tina Turner. Freddy Cannon of "Palisades Park" fame, who was another guest, performed the series' theme song.
