City of Social Circle

Former mill set ablaze

Investigators rule Sunday fire to be arson

By DAVID CLEMONS
The Walton Tribune

SOCIAL CIRCLE, Ga. — State investigators ruled a fire at a building in the city's old cotton mill to be arson.

The Social Circle Fire Department and the Walton and Newton county departments were dispatched to a structure fire off Cannon Drive at about 2 p.m. Sunday.

The city's fire chief, Ken Zaydel, said the building was already in bad shape before Easter.

"It's gutted more than it was," he said. "I don't know that there was a lot salvageable to begin with."

The city's first textile mill opened in 1901 and went bankrupt after a few years, but a second mill — the Social Circle Cotton Mill Co. — was chartered in December 1913. It became part of Cannon Mills Co. of North Carolina in 1978.

The Social Circle Fire Department responds to a fire at the city's old cotton mill Sunday around 2 p.m.

The company employed about 400 people at its peak and still had about 250 workers in the mid-1970s, making wide cotton-blend bed sheeting.

Eventually known as Cannon Mills, the Social Circle plant closed in 1983 and a fire damaged more than half of the main building in April 1994.

Carter Jackson Inc. of Augusta owns the 3.84-acre site.

Although the site is vacant, it's an important part of the city's past, and its future.

Jury trials to resume after year-long delay

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — The first jury trials in more than a year in Newton County are set to begin next week.

Juries are set to be chosen under COVID-19 protocols for social distancing and mask-wearing beginning Monday, April 12, in the Alcovy Judicial Circuit.

District Attorney Randy McGinley said cases awaiting jury trials in Newton County courts will be allowed to proceed after being postponed since March 2020.

Georgia Supreme Court Chief Justice Harold Melton issued an order March 9 allowing jury trials to resume in Georgia.

McGinley served as a member of a Jury Trial Committee the State Supreme Court mandated to meet in the Alcovy Judicial Circuit, which includes Newton and Walton counties.

He said he and members of his office met with judges, private attorneys, and representatives from the sheriff's and public defender offices, Clerks of Court, county IT and facilities departments, and local health officials.

"This committee was charged with coming up with written plans and guidelines to safely and effectively resume jury trials," McGinley said.

Newton lawmakers talk 'productive,' polarizing legislative session

By TAYLOR BECK
tbeck@covnews.com

Election reform has remained at the center of attention ever since the Georgia General Assembly 2021 session came to a close last week, but while polarizing, the session was also quite productive in the eyes of two of Newton County's delegates.

Sen. Brian Strickland, R-McDonough, said he was proud to see the final passage of his bills including those on probation reform, a tuition waiver for foster children and a bill that "makes certain that affordable health insurance plans that cover pre-existing conditions will always be available for Georgians."

However, he said the election bill that eliminated the signature match process for absentee ballots and replaced it with the state-issued identification numbers was the "most important bill of this session."

"There were many other bills that didn't make it across the finish line," Strickland said, "but this just gives us more time to make sure these measures are per-fectured in the final year of this two-year process."

The election bill also limits the placement of drop boxes for absentee ballots to inside election offices and early voting locations, and gives state election officials the authority to take over poor-performing local election boards. In addition, the bill expands early voting to two Saturdays and gives counties the option to hold poll hours on two Sundays. An earlier version of the legislation had proposed shrinking early voting on Sundays.

The measure codifies drop boxes for absentee ballots for the first time in Georgia. Drop boxes were allowed during the last election cycle as part of the public health emergency Gov. Brian Kemp declared because of the coronavirus pandemic.

The bill bans non-poll workers handing out food and drinks within 150 feet of voters waiting in line outside polling places as a way to prevent illegal electioneering.

Kemp's signing the legislation into law sparked several lawsuits from a host of groups including the NAACP, American Civil Liberties Union, the Southern Poverty Law Center and the New Georgia Project, which argue the election changes violate the federal Voting Rights Act and

Family celebrates Newton native's 100th birthday

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — A lifelong Newton County resident saw dozens of friends and family members wish her a happy 100th birthday recently. Hazel Stowe received in-person birthday wishes from people in 49 private vehicles and officers in two Covington Police cars during a drive-by birthday parade March 21 outside the National Guard armory, said her daughter, Ilene Slaughter.

A total of 117 family and friends gave her birthday wishes and 102 birthday cards, Slaughter said.

She said her mother has survived medical problems that required a total of 13 pacemakers.

Stowe also raised four children by working at a shirt factory, taking in extra sewing work and “pinching pennies” after being widowed in 1962, Slaughter said.

She was born Hazel Doris Dobbs on March 19, 1921, and spent her childhood at a residence on Almon Road two doors away from her grandparents, according to a special color brochure her family prepared for the birthday milestone. The house was about a mile west of Shiloh United Methodist Church, where her family had deep roots.

“Her grandfather, John Robert Dobbs, is listed as one of the trustees on the 1908 deed. Her father was a lifetime member. Hazel became a member at age 6.

“If anyone, unknowingly, takes a seat in Hazel’s ‘spot’ on Sunday morning, she has been known to graciously inform them that is where SHE sits and, of course, they always graciously move,” according to the brochure.

Her father, Jessie Lewis Dobbs, suffered with Parkinson’s disease for many years. Her mother, Clara, died when Stowe was 14 after being struck by a car and killed in 1935.

After graduating Palmer Stone School, Hazel attended Monroe A&M School in Walton County where young adults were paid to learn a trade through a federal program called the New Youth Administration.

Stowe then met husband Nathan “Sam” Stowe in 1941 while she worked at a clothing store called The Leader on the Covington Square.

However, her husband entered the military during World War II and battled alcoholism the rest of his life before leaving her a widow in 1962.

Stowe retired in the mid-1980s after working more than 30 years at Oxford Manufacturing Co., better known as “The Shirt Plant,” on Brown Bridge Road in Covington, Slaughter said.

According to the brochure, Stowe “advanced into the highest paying position of ‘setting pockets’ on shirts” at Oxford Manufacturing.

“Pocket setters were paid by production. The more pockets you sewed in a day, the more money you were paid.

“That and pinching pennies and ‘taking in sewing’ for other people ... is how she raised her four children and paid off the mortgage ... three years in advance.”

Suspect arraigned on charges of murdering 5-month-old

Alcovy Judicial Circuit

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — A Covington woman was formally arraigned on murder charges in Superior Court on March 31 in the September death of her baby.

Lakristy Jdeon White, 22, was formally arraigned on a series of charges related to the murder of her 5-month-old daughter in September 2020. White has been held in the Newton County Jail since Sept. 21 on charges of Felony Murder and Cruelty to Children following the death of Aryan White Sept. 13.

The case stems from White’s arrest on charges she had punched Aryan in the stomach and pushed the 5-month-old, causing her to hit her head on the floor and die, a warrant stated.

She died after suffering a subdural hemorrhage and head trauma when she hit the floor, it stated.

Charges include Malice Murder and Felony Murder, two counts of felony Aggravated Battery, and three counts of felony Cruelty to Children in the First Degree.

However, Judge Ken

Wynne also delayed a hearing on her request for setting a bond so she could be released from the Newton County Jail.

In October, Judge Layla Zon denied White’s request for setting bond after saying she believed White posed a risk for committing more felonies if released, and for possibly intimidating witnesses.

Also March 31, Wynne sentenced Melissa Arnetta Johnson of Lithonia to 12 years in confinement after she pleaded guilty to vehicular homicide and other charges.

The charges were related to the death of a passenger in an F-150 truck Johnson was driving on Salem Road after she led deputies on a chase and wrecked in February 2020.

Testimony showed Johnson, 32, shoplifted items from Walmart on Salem Road, put them in the bad of the truck and drove onto Salem Road with Otis James as a passenger.

The truck was traveling “recklessly” before it struck a tree and James was killed, said Chief Assistant District Attorney Amber Dally.

In emotional testimony, James’ widow, Gloria, said she had not known her husband had been involved in criminal acts involving Johnson before his February 2020 death.

Gloria James told Wynne that she had been “tearing up inside since her husband’s death.

“He had a different life over there and a different life over here,” she said.

James then told Johnson she did not hate her because of the incident.

“I just want you to get help,” she said.

Johnson, who appeared by Zoom from the Newton County Jail, told Wynne she was sorry about the harm it caused the victim’s family and said she did not know James had a family before his death. She said she believed James was homeless and they had shoplifted items to buy illegal drugs.

Johnson pleaded guilty to Homicide by Vehicle in the First Degree, Fleeing or Attempting to Elude a Police Officer, Theft by Shoplifting and other charges.

Wynne sentenced her to 25 years on probation with the first 12 years in confinement.

Weapons-carry bill delay allows Newton County time to reload

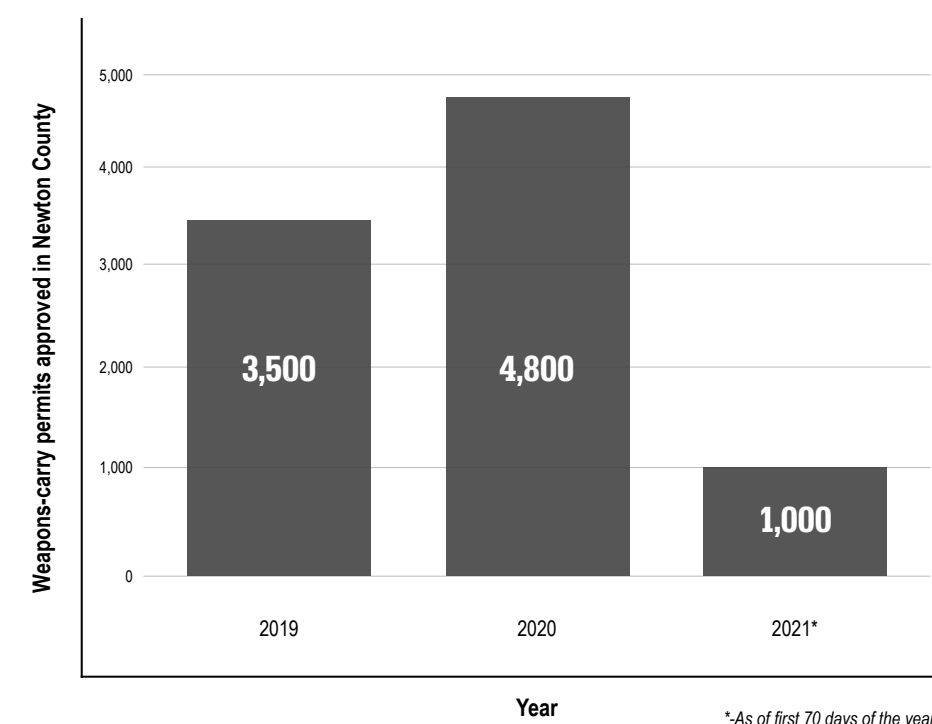

Georgia law-makers wisely chose to wait to approve one piece of legislation in the recently completed session. The Republican-led General Assembly was set to approve a bill to allow Georgia to recognize weapons-carry permits for gun owners living in other states.

House Bill 218, sponsored by State Rep. Mandi Ballinger, R-Canton, would have allowed those licensed to carry weapons in other states to bring guns legally into Georgia and have their concealed-carry permits recognized.

It would also let Georgia probate judges create online application portals for weapons-carry license requests and renewals, as well as prohibit state officials from halting weapons and ammunition sales during officially declared emergencies.

Because of its timing so soon after mass shootings in Metro Atlanta and Colorado, House Speaker David Ralston said he felt it was better to delay its passage.

But there also was a part of the bill that did not exactly have Newton County's probate judge singing its praises.

Currently, residents of any Georgia county could travel to Newton to get a wedding license or vital records such as birth or death certificates — but not weapons-carry permits.

HB 218 would have knocked down any barriers between counties for residents wanting to legally tote guns in Georgia.

Judge Bell estimated she would need a $200,000 increase in the Court's operating budget as soon as the governor signs the legislation.

That does not include the money needed for the additional space to serve the extra traffic that is not available in the Judge Horace Johnson Jr. Judicial Center, Bell wrote in an email to county commissioners.

It would require her office to add between two and five additional clerks and more fingerprinting equipment to accommodate those who don't want to deal with long lines in Fulton or DeKalb.

The Probate Court staff already is stressed from processing 130 weapons-carry licenses every week — almost double the amount it was issuing per week before March 2020.

Last year's total of 4,800 applications was a 37% increase from the 3,500 that Newton County Probate Court saw in 2019. With 1,000 filed through the first 70 days of 2021, her office is on a similar pace — from Newton Countians alone.

The county's location on I-20 gives DeKalb and Fulton residents relatively easy access to downtown Covington.

Outlier counties like Newton would see people travel here because it's easier than dealing with Fulton, DeKalb and their metro counterparts, Bell said.

Gun owners from DeKalb, Fulton or Gwinnett possibly may drop some money into the cash registers of restaurants or retailers while they're here.

But whatever small amount of sales tax we'd likely get from out-of-towners would be more than offset by the money our Probate Court would need to add more staff and equipment and possibly find space in another building to accommodate the increased traffic.

People confounded by the long lines they likely would see in DeKalb or Gwinnett could take a short ride to Covington to enjoy our relatively more plentiful free parking — leading to long lines at the probate office in downtown Covington for purchase of weapons-carry permits.

Probate courts statewide also have been processing license applications so applicants can observe social distancing requirements.

However, Newton's Probate Court could see 100 applicants per day and the legislation requires they be served the same day or face lawsuits — even if another pandemic strikes. The Probate Court now requires those from Newton County wanting a permit to make an appointment and observe social distancing rules.

Bell said the bill — which is still alive and awaiting action in the 2022 session — would require approval on the same day.

The Newton County Probate Court hears cases involving such issues as disputes over estates, in addition to issuing WCLs. It also serves as the county's Magistrate Court — forcing the court staff to “drop everything at all times to process a (weapons-carry license) for someone who doesn't even live in our county.”

And though the bill eases the requirements for online applications, the applicant still must go to the office to be fingerprinted, Bell said.

If this legislation has the support it needs — and it appears it does — a delay until 2022 at least gives Newton County's leadership time to prepare its Probate Court for what likely will be a lot of new visitors.

Hooked on television classics during pandemic

From the time I got a job in broadcasting, until a year ago, I had a daily routine. I would spend around 10 hours a day at work, and then come home. In spring and summer, I would do yard work for an hour or two, or watch the Atlanta Braves. In the fall and winter, I would watch a little TV, collapse into bed, and repeat those steps the next day. Sound familiar?

My schedule has changed in the COVID-19 era. My employers prefer that most of us stay home as much as possible, in the interest of everyone's health. So, I work for awhile at home, and then head to the studio to read the news for a couple of hours.

At home, I can track down news stories, help out my colleagues via phone or Zoom, and write and edit scripts. But there are also distractions. The various screens at home offer too many choices of entertainment, and if you're not careful, you can go down a rabbit hole of reruns.

I was a child of television, which was my escape from the family store. At a too-early age, I would often retreat to our living quarters, and immerse myself into a world of game shows, westerns, and sitcoms. I was imitating Bob Barker long before he became an icon to the youth of America. The under-40 crowd knows him from “Happy Gilmore” and the sick-day delights of “The Price is Right.” I knew him as the “Truth or Consequences” guy.

Many of us think we were born too early, or too late. Not me. I was right on time. Sure, we had only three channels, but I never complained. Well, except maybe when “Gilligan's Island” and “The Monkees” were on at the same time. Scheduling conflicts like that are why video cassette recorders (and their descendants) were invented.

Compare that with today. In many homes, your cable package includes 400 channels. If you have a Smart TV, it comes equipped with free streaming services, and if you want to keep up with the office chatter, you must subscribe to Netflix, Amazon Prime, HBO, Showtime, Peacock, Hulu, Vudu, Tutu and Mumu. OK, I made those last two up, but I'm sure they're on the way.

On top of all that, you can add YouTube. What began as a modest video clip collection now includes pretty much every moving image ever filmed. I have found TV shows from my youth that I never thought I could see again. Ancient Red Skelton clips, Jackie Gleason before he was famous, and Bob Hope entertaining the troops from 14 wars ago. I'm afraid to check, but there may be home movies of me dancing at my high school prom on YouTube. For the sake of humanity, I hope not.

I am a wee bit concerned with the endless streams of video available to kids of all ages. Let's be honest. Most parents of the TV era have used TV as a babysitter. “Maybe if we plant Brandon in front of the set, Barney (whether it be the deputy or the dinosaur) will get his attention and we can actually digest our food for 15 minutes.”

Most of the shows I gorged upon proved to be harmless. Yes, I saw Moe poke Larry and Curly in the eyes. I witnessed Batman climbing up the side of a 20-story building to do battle with the Riddler, and I saw professional wrestlers draw “blood” by slamming their opponents into chairs, tables, and ladies in the ringside seats.

Thankfully, I never imitated any of those behaviors. I didn't have brothers, my parents would not allow chairs to be used as weapons, and there were no 20-story buildings to climb in Bryant, Alabama. However, I now wish I had spent less time in front of the “boob tube” and more time watching my father repair sinks, toilets and automobiles.

When I became a parent, I pledged to be more attentive to the viewing habits of my kids. During most of their childhood, they learned from Mr. Rogers and other good PBS influences. Then one night, they attended someone's sleep-over, and saw the movies and shows they had been missing. I haven't heard from them since. I hope today's moms and dads are keeping a close eye on their kids' pandemic TV diet.

As for me, I'm spending too much time exploring the unanswered questions of my TV-obsessed life. If the professor on Gilligan's Island was so smart, why couldn't he patch a hole in the S.S. Minnow? Why didn't Jerry Seinfeld ever lock the door to his apartment? And why did it take 12 years to fix the elevator in “The Big Bang Theory?”

Come on folks, let's all get vaccinated. Obviously, I need to return to work.

Council OKs permits for dance school, auto repair shop, private school

By TAYLOR BECK
tbeck@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — Adhering to recommendations from the city’s Planning and Development staff, members of the Covington City Council unanimously approved the issuance of special-use permits allowing a dance school, an auto body repair shop and a private school to locate within city limits.

The unnamed dance school said to be relocating from Rockdale County will be located in the same shopping center as Ingles and Roses on Turner Lake Road. The property owner was listed as KNA Family LLC. The special-use permit applicant’s name was listed as Shalay Terrel.

The dance school fits the city’s future land-use plan, according to city staff.

No one spoke for or against the special-use permit issuance during a public hearing.

After the hearing was closed, Councilwoman Fleeta Baggett spoke enthusiastically of the dance school.

“This will be asset to the community and will be a great thing to have on that side of town,” she said.

The unnamed automotive repair facility to soon set up shop in Covington will be located at 8425 Hazelbrand Road. The property owner was listed as STP Holdings. The applicant was listed as Shane Steele.

Similar to the dance school, city staff said the shop would fit the future land-use plan and would be surrounded by comparable uses, including automotive repair.

No one spoke for or against the special-use permit issuance during a public hearing.

Councilman Kenneth Morgan asked if the applicant planned to sublease portions of the building, since it had office space. City staff believed it would not “based on what was applied for.”

After the permit issuance’s passage, Morgan suggested city staff take note of all future applicants’ plans for potentially subleasing their space.

A new private preparatory school for grades K-8 will be located at 7188 Turner Lake Circle.

Property owner Ricky Mock spoke in favor of issuing the school a special-use permit during a public hearing. He said the school had operated in Conyers since 2011 and was locating to Covington to pick up more students. Mock said it was a Christian school that “seemed to be a good outfit” and could also be “beneficial to the community.”

“They seem to be good folks, and they know what they’re doing, and they’re financially strong and we would appreciate it if y’all could approve them for the building,” Mock said.

The school was unnamed on the application, however the applicant was listed as Georgia Preparatory Schools/Denise White. Mock said the school would be assuming a building that had been home to two schools before — most recently a K-12 private school.

No one spoke against the issuance.

City staff said the school’s plans fit the city’s future land-use plan and approval was recommended by all parties.

Morgan raised questions about the schools security, because it is in close proximity to a local homeless shelter. City staff said the school would install its own security system, but also held a rule where no child is left alone outside.

The hours of operation would mainly be from approximately 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Mock said. But when factoring in before- and after-school programs, students and teachers could be on site from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

City staff reported that the school planned to stagger release times to maintain positive traffic flow.

Feit Electric to open first east coast distribution facility in Georgia

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
news@covnews.com

ATLANTA — Gov. Brian P. Kemp announced March 30 that Feit Electric, a leading smart home and energy-efficient lighting brand, will invest more than $25 million in opening a distribution center in Henry County. This will mark the company’s first distribution center on the East Coast of the U.S. and create 120 jobs in McDonough.

“I’m grateful to Feit Electric for their commitment to invest in Georgia and create jobs for the hardworking Georgians of Henry County,” Kemp said. “From our ports system to our trained workforce, Georgia is the premier place to do business, especially for companies with rapidly growing distribution needs.”

For more than 40 years, Feit Electric has been a leading lighting and smart home brand that sells to major retailers including Georgia-based The Home Depot, and Lowe’s, Ace Hardware, Costco, and Menards. An early pioneer in energy-efficient lighting, Feit Electric was one of the first to bring compact fluorescent lamps (CFL) and LED technologies to market. With customers all over the world, the company plans to utilize Georgia’s extensive port system and ship 5,000 TEUs through the Port of Savannah annually.

“Continuing to invest in our supply chain and distribution capabilities is required to support our expanding smart home and LED lighting business,” said President Alan Feit of Feit Electric. “We will be bringing inventory through the Port of Savannah and selected the location based on proximity to the Port of Savannah and convenience to metro Atlanta. Establishing a new distribution presence helps us support the growing demand for flexible customer delivery options in this dynamic retail market.”

Feit Electric has purchased an existing 268,940-square-foot facility, located at 255 Declaration Drive in McDonough. The company will bring 120 jobs to Henry County, including positions in material handling, management, and administration. Individuals interested in careers with Feit Electric are encouraged to visit feit.com/careers for additional information.

“We are excited that Feit Electric has selected Henry County as the location for their new facility,” said Henry County Board of Commissioners Chair Carlotta Harrell. “As a global lighting manufacturer, Feit’s decision provides further evidence of Henry County’s growing role in global commerce.”

“The fact that a company as innovative and forward thinking as Feit Electric has chosen to locate in Henry County is a testament to the quality of our workforce and business climate,” said Henry County Development Authority Chairman Pierre Clements. “We look forward to our partnership with this outstanding company and to the jobs and investment they will bring to the community.”

Project Manager Alex Jones represented the Georgia Department of Economic Development’s (GDEd) Global Commerce division on this competitive project in partnership with the Henry County Development Authority, the Metro Atlanta Chamber, Georgia Ports Authority, and Georgia Power.

“We’re pleased to welcome Feit Electric to our thriving region as they move into their new home in Henry County,” said Katie Kirkpatrick, president and CEO of the Metro Atlanta Chamber.

“As a global leader in logistics, distribution, and supply chain, metro Atlanta has all the resources to help drive the success of businesses like Feit Electric. Congratulations to the team at Feit Electric and all of our partners who were a part of this important project.”

“We’re excited the governor and his economic development team have won this project for Georgia, which will fuel the local economy and trade through our deep water ports,” said Griff Lynch, executive director of the Georgia Ports Authority.

“Feit Electric’s decision to establish its East Coast distribution hub in McDonough is a testament to the efficiency of moving cargo through Georgia to serve the eastern U.S.”

Feit Electric is headquartered in California. For more information, visit www.feit.com.

Local clubs stare down playoff spots

Alcovy, Eastside, Newton, Social Circle all in hunt for postseason berths

Mason Wittner | The Covington News

Cade Mitchell (pictured) and the Eastside Eagles have positioned themselves in third place in Region 8-AAAAA with just two weeks remaining in the regular season. They're among the other three local baseball teams as contenders for a spot in the 2021 state playoffs.

By MASON WITTNER
mwittner@covnews.com

The home stretch is on the horizon. Just three weeks remain in the 2021 GHSA baseball season. And, thanks to a mixture of prime positioning and an abundance of remaining region games, each of our four local prep baseball teams remain in contention to earn a spot in the postseason.

In Class AAAAAA, the Newton Rams all but locked up a playoff spot in the opening week of region play by sweeping their three-game series with South Gwinnett.

They'll be aiming to take a few games from state powers Parkview and Brookwood in the coming weeks, which could help them sneak into a No. 2 or No. 3 seed. Regardless of the outcome of those games, however, it's unlikely they'll fall from the No. 4 spot after handling their business against the Comets.

Alcovy, meanwhile, is in the hunt for its first state playoff berth since 2013.

The Tigers recently capped off a season sweep of Rockdale County — the program's first sweep of a region opponent since 2016 — before stumbling in back-to-back losses to Heritage. With one game remaining against each of the four teams currently ahead of them in Region 3-AAAAAA, there's still plenty of time to make up ground.

Eastside is holding its own in its new classification as a member of one of the state's strongest regions in 8-AAAAA.

The Eagles' only league setbacks came at the hands of Greenbrier, which also took a game from three-time defending state champion Loganville. If they can get past Walnut Grove and Jackson County in decent shape, the season-ending series with the Red Devils could be enourmous for both squads.

Social Circle has stormed out to a red-hot start in Region 8-A Public, winning 10 of its first 11 league games.

As long as they avoid slipping up against Washington-Wilkes, the Redskins should find themselves playing in a de facto region championship series against Commerce in two weeks.

Lady Eagles take down Johnson, secure playoff spot

By MIKE HARRISON
Correspondent

GAINESVILLE, Ga. — The Eastside girls' soccer team played its final Region 8-AAAAA match of the season Friday night on the road against Johnson-Gainesville.

The Lady Eagles established a formidable lead in the first half before holding on for a 4-2 victory. With the win, Eastside (11-2-1, 6-1-0 8-AAAAA) secured at least the runner-up spot in 8-AAAAA.

The Lady Eagles built a 3-0 halftime advantage behind a first-half brace from Lizzie Teasley and a Mia Mostek chip shot goal over the Lady Knights keeper off a ball provided by Teasley. Teasley's first goal was off a double assist from Karissa Aldridge and Lauren Davis while her second goal was off a corner kick by Bailey Love, one of 15 corners taken by Eastside in the match.

Johnson scored off a corner kick eight minutes into the second half to cut the Lady Eagles' lead to 3-1.

After the match Eastside Coach Joel Singleton remarked: "We played a solid first half but we got sloppy in the second. We haven't played in 10 days and it showed. Johnson's record does not indicate the type of team they are. They are well coached and play very hard".

Singleton offered high praise for the Lady Eagles' offensive attack.

"Mia Mostek played very well tonight and really kept us balanced with possession. Lizzie (Teasley) and the offense really did a nice job on capitalizing on our scoring opportunities," he said. "I wish we could have maximized some of our corners but I credit Johnson. They did a great job of keeping us boxed in and not letting us get clean looks."

Regarding Aralyn Everett's milestone, Singleton noted: "Aralyn scored her 100th career goal in the second half and that was exciting. I am so proud of what she has been able to accomplish."

Region frontrunner Greenbrier still has region games against Clarke Central and Loganville. The Lady Wolfpack must beat both opponents to win the region title outright. As Greenbrier owns the head-to-head tie breaker over Eastside, it must lose both games for the Lady Eagles to win the first ever region championship in their 25-year program history.

Food waste has been deemed a global issue, but with education, it's a problem that can be fixed.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

news@covnews.com

Perhaps nothing can spoil an appetite more than a crisper drawer full of fresh vegetables that have taken a turn for the worse. Spoiled food is not just unsafe to eat, but it is also very costly.

The Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics Foundation and the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimate that the average family of four throws out nearly $1,500 worth of food and beverages each year. That means that, within seven years, the average family has spent more than $10,000 on food they did not eat.

In recognition of the problems posed by food waste, the National Grange, the oldest farm and food advocacy organization in the United States, aims to create a cultural shift that reduces food waste. Individual consumers can do their part in supporting that shift by taking various steps to reduce food waste in their homes.

- Take inventory before going to the grocery store. An inventory of the refrigerator and pantry can help shoppers avoid buying items they already have. This is especially valuable at reducing food waste in regard to perishable items that can spoil before shoppers have a chance to eat them.

- Make a meal plan and grocery list. The Environmental Protection Agency notes that meal plans and accompanying grocery lists help consumers reduce food waste and save money by decreasing the likelihood that they will buy items they won't need for the meals they plan to eat in the week ahead.

The average family of four throws out nearly $1,500 worth of food and beverages each year.

- Purchase frozen foods. Organic, fresh vegetables eaten when they are most ripe may be the healthiest way to eat vegetables. However, frozen vegetables still have ample nutritional value, and may even boast a higher nutritional value than off-season, fresh vegetables sold at the grocery store. That's because frozen fruits and vegetables are picked when they're ripe and then immersed in boiling water to kill bacteria and prevent enzyme activity that can spoil food. They're then immediately flash frozen, a process that typically preserves nutrients. The long shelf life of frozen fruits and vegetables reduces the likelihood that shoppers will throw them out before eating them. That's not the case with fresh vegetables, which the ANDF and the USDA note account for more than 30% of food waste each year.

- Wash berries only as you eat them. When eating fresh berries, wait to wash them until you eat them. The risk of mold forming increases when washing an entire container all at once, whereas only washing the berries as they're eaten increases the likelihood that they won't spoil before they're all eaten.

Food waste is a global problem that can be fixed. And that solution can start in the kitchens of consumers willing to do their part.

Quick, tasty way to prepare tomatoes

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

news@covnews.com

Tomatoes are a versatile ingredient in many meals that are just as delicious in a garden salad as they are stewed and simmered in a favorite sauce.

Tomatoes are a major source of the antioxidant lycopene, which can reduce one's risk of heart disease and cancer. Tomatoes also are a great source of vitamin C, potassium, folate, and vitamin K.

It's easy to include more tomatoes into one's diet with tasty fixings like this light and versatile recipe for "Bruschetta" from "Vegan Cooking for Beginners" (Publications International, Ltd.) by the PIL editors. Use it when serving cocktails and snacks, or as the prelude to a larger meal.

Enjoy safe backyard barbecues this summer

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Backyard barbecues are synonymous with warm weather. And why wouldn't they be? Grilling over an open flame when the weather is warm embodies the relaxing spirit of spring and summer, prompting many people to leave their oven ranges behind in favor of charcoal and gas grills.

As relaxing as backyard barbecues can be, they can quickly take a turn for the worse if cooks don't emphasize safety when grilling out. According to the National Fire Protection Association, an average of 9,600 home fires are started by grills each year. In fact, the Consumer Product Safety Commission notes that, between 2012 and 2016, an average of 16,600 patients went to the emergency room each year because of injuries involving grills.

Such statistics only highlight the need to balance the fun of grilling with safety when hosting a backyard barbecue or cooking for the family. The following are some steps people can take to ensure their backyard

Metro Creative Services

barbecues are safe.
• Recognize that gas grills pose a threat as well. It's easy to assume gas grills don't pose as great a threat as charcoal grills, which produce soaring flames once the charcoal is lit. But the NFPA notes that gas grills are involved in 7,900 home fires per year. No grill is completely safe, and cooks must emphasize safety whether they're using gas grills, charcoal grills or smokers.
• Only use grills outdoors. Grills should never be used indoors. Even if rain unexpectedly arrives during a backyard barbecue, keep the grill outside. If unexpected rain is accompanied by lightning and thunder, extinguish the fire in the grill and go indoors.

• Place the grill in a safe location. Grills should be placed well away from the home. Avoid locating grills near deck railings or beneath eaves and overhanging branches. Cut overgrown branches before lighting a grill fire if they are in close proximity to the grill.

- Keep your grill clean. The buildup of grease and fat, both on the grill grate and in trays below the grill, increases the risk of fire. Clean the grill routinely.

- Properly light the grill. Lighting gas and charcoal grills requires caution. Before lighting a gas grill, make sure the lid is open. If you must use starter fluid to light a charcoal grill, the NFPA advises using only charcoal starter fluid. Never add any fluids to the fire after it has been lit.

- Do not leave a grill unattended. Cooks should never leave a lit grill unattended. If you must leave the grill, only do so if another adult can stand in your stead. Lit grills pose a threat to children and pets, and unattended grills can be blown over by gusts of wind or tipped by wild animals, such as squirrels. Standing by a lit grill at all times can protect against such accidents and injuries.

Grilling is a favorite summertime activity. For more information about grilling safety, visit www.nfpa.org.
