Newton County Republican Party hosts Covington City Council candidate forum

COVINGTON, Ga. — Three of five candidates vying for seats on the Covington City Council in the Nov. 2 municipal election recently participated in a candidate forum hosted by the Newton County Republican Party.

Anthony Henderson, Susie Keck and Scotty Scoggins were welcomed to The Reserve at Hendricks on Tuesday, Oct. 19, to answer a variety of questions from residents and the local newspaper.

Henderson is seeking reelection to Post 3, representing the West Ward. Unless a write-in candidate emerges, he is unopposed.

During his opening remarks, Henderson described himself as Covington guy, born and raised in the Nelson Heights community, and someone who had “lived a life of service.”

After graduating from Eastside High School and briefly attending college, Henderson took a position with the Newton County Sheriff’s Office as a detention officer. He later became a code enforcement officer until his resignation in June.

“As a kid, not seeing many resources, not seeing many parks, [and] not seeing many programs that could actually help build myself actually inspired me to run for office,” Henderson said. “Since being in office, I’ve made it my job and my duty to create opportunities for not only my side of the city, but the entire city.” Henderson said he helped initiate two successful job fairs that created more than 200 jobs for people from the West Ward. He also helped organize the first-ever record expunging event in Covington to allow individuals with misdemeanors, or “small criminal charges” the ability to have their records expunged, Henderson said.

Like Henderson, Keck is also seeking reelection to keep her seat in Post 1 representing the East Ward. However, Keck is being challenged by newcomer Carla Ferry. Ferry was not present for the forum.

Rather than talk much about herself, Keck used her opening remarks as a time to speak about a range of issues she said she’s heard concerns about while on the campaign trail.

“What I’m hearing is the No. 1 concern is growth,” Keck said. “I’ve checked some data, and we have grown 1.36% a year over the last 10 years. There’s a good side of growth, such as a rising tax digest, which helps us hold our property tax; our rising per capita income; new jobs; attention from the state Department of Economic Development. We are the envy of most towns across the state with our film and television industry. Ballooning tourism, which keeps our hotels full and we have more hotels

Decatur man found guilty of 2019 murder

Killer was 18 years old at time of area resident’s slaying following home invasion, armed robbery

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — A Newton County jury has found a Decatur man guilty of a murder during a home invasion and armed robbery in Covington in 2019.

Keyondre Bernard Preston, 20, was found guilty of the April 2019 murder of Shelvis Hillman and other crimes, according to information from the Newton County District Attorney’s office.

The jury in Newton County Superior Court Thursday, Oct. 21, found Preston guilty of Malice Murder, Felony Murder, three counts of Armed Robbery, three counts of Aggravated Assault, two counts of Burglary, and three counts of Possession of a Firearm During the Commission of a Crime.

Preston, at the time of the murder and other crimes, was out on bond from two separate armed robbery arrests in DeKalb County. The jury heard from the armed robbery victims and

Andrews says city’s homeless population at highest in recent history

Taylor Beck | The Covington News

City Manager Scott Andrews speaks to the Covington City Council on Monday, Oct. 18, about the increasing homeless population in the city.

Changes requested at Rainbow Community Shelter

By TAYLOR BECK
tbeck@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — City Manager Scott Andrews says the area’s homeless population is at its highest in recent history, and the issue is only intensifying.

At the conclusion of the Covington City Council’s meeting Monday, Oct. 18, Andrews shared a prepared statement about the growing issue of area homelessness and the city’s request for changes at its local shelter.

“After one-on-one meetings with the police department over the past year, I learned first-hand of the strain homelessness is placing on our law enforcement officers,” he said. “This caused us to dig deeper and ask some difficult questions.”

Since 2010, Andrews said, crimes related to homelessness have increased by a staggering 267%, from 34 to 125 crimes in 11 years.

Board OKs sewer service plan near new Eastside campus

Commissioner objects to high-density development it could encourage

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — County commissioners have approved a long-delayed plan by Covington to provide sewer service near the future Eastside High School campus despite objections to the increased residential density it could encourage.

The Newton County Board of Commissioners voted 3-2 to allow Covington to provide sewer service to the unincorporated Deerfield area along U.S. Hwy. 278 as part of an agreement between Newton County Water and Sewerage Authority (NCWSA) and the city.

The area is already in the city's water service area but is not designated for any entity's sewer service area.

Deerfield is near the new Eastside campus on Georgia Hwy. 142 near U.S. Hwy. 278.

The Board has delayed action on the request twice since June. Last week, District 1 Commissioner Stan Edwards sought to kill the plan.

Discussion at the Oct. 19 meeting centered on sewer service encouraging more dense residential development in undeveloped areas than if no service was available in the same areas.

Current county development regulations allow building lots in areas zoned for single-family construction and served by sewers to be 3,000 to 10,000 square feet smaller than in areas served only by septic tanks — meaning more homes could be built on the same amount of land.

Edwards said there was “no practical reason for” approving the plan other than to “take sewer into places that aren't intended to go right now” because the city had no plans to expand its sewer system in the area.

Deerfield and another subdivision, Beacon Hill, also are established subdivisions and will not connect to sewer lines, he said.

However, there also is undeveloped land along highways 142 and 278 that could be served with sewer in the affected area, Edwards said.

“What it will do is, it will enable density,” he said.

The city plans to provide sewer service to the new Eastside High School facility by building a line from its existing Eastside main sewer line — which it plans to expand — to connect to a sewer line the school system was building to serve Eastside.

A letter to commissioners from city and sewer authority officials said the new sewer line for the school will run alongside Hwy. 278.

It was originally planned to discharge into the NCWSA's Alcovy River lift station but the station does not have enough capacity because it already has

Solar plant will help power Facebook

Massive facility in Lee County will supply green energy for Newton Data Center

By DAVID CLEMONS
The Walton Tribune

One of the nation's largest independent producers of solar power broke ground Wednesday on a multimillion-dollar facility in southwest Georgia that will help power the Facebook data center in Newton County.

The first phase of the DeSoto Solar Farm in Lee County will provide electricity to Walton Electric Membership Corp., which is the provider to the Facebook Newton Data Center in Stanton Springs.

In all, Silicon Ranch Corp. is making a $220 million investment in a facility that will produce 220 megawatts of power.

“Our important work with Facebook and Silicon Ranch has already generated more than half a billion dollars in capital investment across half a dozen counties throughout Georgia, and we are pleased to expand this legacy to Lee County today,” CEO Ronnie Lee of Walton EMC said.

“We are pleased to be working together again to help meet Facebook's goal of supporting its Georgia operations with 100% renewable power.”

Then-Gov. Nathan Deal in 2018 announced Facebook's plans to build a $42 billion data center at Stanton Springs, the high-tech business park owned by Jasper, Morgan, Newton and Walton counties.

One of the key factors in Facebook choosing the area was Walton EMC pledging to power the data center with renewable energy.

Gov. Brian Kemp attended the groundbreaking ceremony in DeSoto on Wednesday and said the facility is an example of trying to bring job growth to rural Georgia.

State officials said the project will be delivered in three phases over the next two to three years, with Silicon Ranch owning, operating and maintaining the facility for the long term.

Construction of the first phase will begin soon and the company plans to hire more than 400 craft workers over the next year.

In addition to the Facebook use, a renewable energy provider owned by 38 Georgia EMCs is also purchasing a portion of the power output from the DeSoto facility to provide to participating co-ops. That is known as Green Power EMC, and Lee is a member of its board of directors.

Board delays action on plan for new subdivision, park overlooking river

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — A local developer is asking county commissioners to take the first step toward allowing him to convert 51 acres along Crowell Road into a subdivision and new county park.

Denny Dobbs is asking for a change in what is allowed to be developed within the Almon Overlay zoning district on the 51.02-acre site at the corner of Crowell and Harold Dobbs roads.

The Newton County Board of Commissioners voted to delay action until Dec. 7 on designating the land entirely within Tier 2 of the Almon Overlay at the request of District 2 Commissioner Alana Sanders because further study is needed, she said.

Gee Harvey, who is working with Dobbs to develop the site, told commissioners Oct. 19 that plans include a 300-lot subdivision on part of the site west of Crowell Road and south of Harold Dobbs Road — with entrances planned from both roads.

A separate, northeast part of the site borders the Yellow River. It will be developed for recreational uses and be given to the county government for operation as a public park, Harvey said.

“We hope to have it done in two years,” he said.

Harvey showed commissioners a site plan that included a subdivision with three lots per acre in four separate areas connected by roads within the site.

Three areas of the subdivision in the central and south part promised it to industries in the Stanton Springs business park, the letter stated.

“Additionally, growth is expected in the Deerfield area once public sewer is available but with capacity already allocated by NCWSA, Covington should be the sewer service provider,” officials stated in the letter.

As part of the agreement, the city also will move undeveloped areas south and east of the new high school into its sewer service area because it also plans to expand a lift station that could serve the area. The area already is in the city’s water service area.

In return, NCWSA would receive a city of Covington water tank and the city’s current customers in the Melody Farms subdivision, the letter stated.

District 5 Commissioner Ronnie Cowan asked Chairman Marcello Banes to consider a delay to allow him and Edwards to meet with Covington and NCWSA officials to “see what the impacts might be.”

Banes said the board already had tabled — delayed action — the request twice. He said of the site contain 241 single-family homes and surround a planned lake.

A fourth section on the north edge backs up to Harold Dobbs Road and contains 59 townhomes.

The land is now undeveloped and is surrounded by single-family residential uses on the south and west, Riverside Estates mobile home park across the Yellow River on the east, and churches and Salem Cemetery on the north.

Dobbs requested a change from Tier 1 and 2 of the overlay district to entirely Tier 2 on the land — which county commissioners would be required to approve.

A change to Tier 2 would allow construction of a mixed-use development on the site rather than all residential because part of it is in the floodplain of the Yellow River, zoning officials said.

Development Services Director Judy Johnson said the park is planned to be almost 300 feet from the river and be partly outside the floodplain.

She detailed staff conditions for the park, including daily hours of 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.; a 25-space parking area; and installation of a metal gate, security lights, storage building, picnic pavilion, a minimum of five picnic tables, a dog park, walking trail and a “tot lot” for ages 3 to 8. Camping and barbecue grills would be prohibited, she said.

Harvey said developers agreed to all the conditions except for installation of sidewalks along part of Crowell Road because it has sharp drop-offs and would be difficult to build.

He said developers did not plan to create any direct access points to the river across an existing buffer area for those wanting to partake in such activities as kayaking.

The tier change request is the first step in the process. Developers will still be required to submit a preliminary plat for Newton County Planning Commission approval and pass other administrative requirements before construction could begin.

The county’s Almon, Salem and Brick Store overlay districts add extra requirements to the base zoning requirements for new construction within their boundaries.

It controls such items as construction materials and the length of building setbacks from property lines.

The Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend approval of the plan with staff conditions Sept. 28.

It is the final subdivision that was submitted to the Development Services department before a moratorium on new residential development plats was approved in January of this year, Johnson said.

In other action at the Oct. 19 meeting, the Board of Commissioners approved:

- Letter of support for AT&T’s grant application on behalf of Newton County for money from the State Fiscal Recovery Fund for extension of broadband service in the county.
- Newton County is requesting to use $8 million from the state Fund — which is comprised of federal American Rescue Plan funds — to extend wired service to provide 97% coverage, said County Manager Lloyd Kerr.
- Cornish Creek Water Treatment Facility’s request to apply for unspecified amounts in American Rescue Plan funds and an Economic Development Agencies grant, both from the state government, with proceeds to be spent in collaboration with municipalities and authorities of Covington for water and wastewater system improvements.

Projects include an expansion of the county’s Cornish Creek Water Treatment Plant and the city of Covington’s Eastside Pump Station; new water lines and a water storage tank for the Newton County Water and Sewer Authority to serve the Stanton Springs business park area; and expansion of the Emmons Water Reclamation facility.

Matching funds could come from current Georgia Environmental Finance Authority loans and those gaining from the grants.

- Request from the IT and Purchasing departments for approval of Ascension Program Management LLC to oversee the project to provide an emergency power system for the county government Administration Building at a cost of $32,750.
- A list of appointees to the SPLOST advisory committee, including two new members.

The committee for 2021-22 will include the chairman’s appointment, Jeff Terrell; District 1 appointment, Kenneth Williams; District 2 appointment, Baxter Bouchillon; District 3 appointment, Dana Herring; District 4 appointment, Bobbie Shepard; District 5 appointment Dan Elmore; and county manager appointment, Sally Budd.

Herring and Shepard are new appointees.

Braves again reach Promised Land

October 27, 1999. That was the last time the Atlanta Braves played in a World Series game. They faced the New York Yankees and lost the series 4-0.

I was 2 years and 117 days old when that occurred.

Obviously, I didn't know what my name was then, much less what a baseball game was.

Fast forward to the present day.

It was one day shy of being exactly 22 years since the Braves returned to World Series action on Tuesday for Game 1 in Houston.

Here I am, now 24 years old, and couldn't help but get emotional when Dansby Swanson threw to Freddie Freeman to down the Dodgers in the National League Championship Series on Saturday. When the celebration took place at Truist Park, my mind flooded with all of the obstacles the Braves have had in the past 22 years. From an infield fly rule to blowing a 3-1 lead, almost everything has derailed the Braves' quest for a World Series championship.

I vividly remember debris and trash being thrown onto Turner Field after the Braves lost to the St. Louis Cardinals in the 2012 Wild Card game.

Let's not forget the rebuilding years that included BJ Upton, Bartolo Colon, Matt Kemp, Fredi Gonzales and others who didn't pan out to have much success.

From 2013-2017 seemed to be the toughest stretch in recent memory to be a Braves fan.

Then, finally, Atlanta returned to the playoffs, but more bumps in the road popped up.

First, the formidable Los Angeles Dodgers eliminated the Braves 3-1 in the 2018 Division Series. Then, those pesky Cardinals showed up again to kick out the Braves in the 2019 Division Series 3-2.

Last year, the Braves seemed to be stamping their ticket to the World Series. That was until they blew a 3-1 lead to the Dodgers and were eliminated yet again.

Even this season, the Braves have been dealt a few bad hands.

It started with Marcell Ozuna being placed on administrative leave after being charged with family violence battery and simple assault.

Just before the All-Star Break, one of the Atlanta Braves manager Brian Snitker hugs Freddie Freeman after winning Game 6 of baseball's National League Championship Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers Sunday, Oct. 24, 2021, in Atlanta. The Braves defeated the Dodgers 4-2 to win the series.

Brynn Anderson | Associated Press

key pieces on Atlanta's roster sustained a season-ending injury.

Ronald Acuña Jr. exited July 11's game vs. the Miami Marlins with a torn ACL.

When that transpired, the Braves were 44-44. As a matter of fact, Atlanta didn't climb above .500 until Aug. 6.

But, through it all, Atlanta has persevered.

In this year's playoffs, the Braves have beaten a 95-win Milwaukee Brewers and got their revenge by bouncing a 106-win Dodgers from the playoffs.

Now comes the biggest obstacle of all: winning the World Series.

Atlanta will face a 95-win Houston Astros in a best-of-7 series for all the marbles (or pearls). The Braves have a chance to win it all.

Do I think they'll win it? Honestly, no. But they have a chance, because, while it is not the most talented team, it is arguably the most tenacious.

It's been a long road to get here, though. That long road, however, did propel the Braves to finally reach the Promised Land of baseball. Maybe it'll assist them in shocking the sports world. Who knows?

Anything is possible.

The World Series matchup began Tuesday, Oct. 26, at Houston, and Game 2 will be tonight. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the series comes to Atlanta at Truist Park.

I'll be at home watching every second I can of all the action. Will you?

Worker shortage means fast food is no longer that I witnessed a rare sight while enjoying my fast food lunch. The manager was at the next table interviewing a job applicant. They were chatting before I started, and the conversation continued after I left. I got the impression the manager didn't want to let the person go.

I couldn't hear every word, but I imagined it sounding like this: "We will start you at twelve dollars an hour, but if you show up on time, put in your hours, and do your job well, we may eventually raise it to fifteen."

"That sounds nice, but you'll have to allow me to stare at my phone at least ten minutes per hour. It's for my sanity."

"Well, let's negotiate. Can we bump that down to five minutes per hour?"

"Oh, I guess I could compromise. I'll settle for eight."

"You've got the job! Let me set you up for a drug test, it's just a formality...."

"Wait...did you say drug test? Uh, let me get back to you...."

Welcome to America, 2021. The supply chain has snapped because ports are clogged. Automobiles aren't being produced due to a semiconductor chip shortage, and even when there's something to buy, you may not find anyone to take your money.

My local amusement park canceled its annual Halloween house; they can't hire enough spooks. My reliable Sunday morning breakfast biscuit place has a "CLOSED DUE TO LACK OF STAFF" sign in the window. No one wants to make the dough, literally.

A popular family owned bakery dating back to 1948 is on the ropes, and the owner will soon decide whether to stay open after the holidays. This is what it has come to. If no one is willing to make (or buy) cakes and doughnuts, something has gone terribly wrong.

In my own industry, TV news, we used to take hours sifting through applications, resumes and audition tapes. We would carefully review each one in search of America's next great journalist. These days, we are thrilled to get ONE response to a job opening. It reminds me of the old radio contests: "Caller #1 wins!"

When the pandemic began, we had no idea where it would lead us. Heck, on March 24, 2020 one powerful guy said that he expected the coronavirus would be gone by Easter, which was April 12. Yet here we are, eighteen months later. The loss of lives has been staggering, and our daily routine has been changed in ways that we could not have imagined. Are we in the home stretch? After watching stadium-filled football and baseball games, I would say yes. But as colder weather and indoor holiday gatherings approach, no one knows for sure.

As for the employment crisis, it continues to be fueled by a number of pandemic-related factors. Those in the retail sector tell me their workers are tired of being underpaid, overworked, and more recently, abused by angry, impatient customers. Evidently, substantial increases in starting pay are not offsetting the allure of being their own boss. They'd rather drive an Uber, babysit or do yardwork than be yelled at because the guy in the kitchen forgot to leave onions off the burger. (Helpful hint: you can remove them yourself.)

For a while, jobless benefits kept much of our former workforce at home, but those have been discontinued. Much to employers' surprise, this has not resulted in an increase in applications. People still don't want those jobs. They have gotten used to spending more time at home, and being with their family. No unpredictable hours, no more covering someone else's shift, no working on Sundays. A few who are at, or nearing retirement age, have decided to "call it a career."

Many have found a new employer willing to let them work from home, via computer or phone. Teens, once the heart of the supermarket/restaurant entry-level workforce, are no longer desperate to earn money to buy gas, games and shoes. Parents say, with a tone of surprise in their voice, that their teens are in no hurry to have a car. When I was 16, that was the only thing I wanted.

The aforementioned bakery owner has watched her number of employees shrink from a pre-pandemic 12 to a current three, including herself and her son.

"I've had a help-wanted sign up all year," she said. "But I've only had two responses, and neither was willing to do the work."

A neighboring TVA office building which once supplied her with a steady stream of customers now sits largely empty, as workers do their jobs from home.

If you have the solution to the employment crisis, send me an email for use in a future column. Until then, business owners simply say life has changed. In their words, "Get used to it."

being built.

“But there’s a downside of growth,” she continued, “and most is based on fear of change and unknown. That is human nature. Traffic becomes more difficult. We’re afraid people who live in apartments aren’t going to care about the community. We’re afraid of the impact on our school system, when actually single-family homes have a large impact on our school system.”

Keck said there wasn’t much that could be done with former farm land that had been zoned for multi-family use more than 30 years ago. What could be done is “hold everyone to a high standard.” She said the city council was currently looking at how growth could be controlled moving forward while a moratorium is in place until February, which allows city planning and zoning specialists to see how other communities are handling similar growth and determine what changes need to be made to the city’s zoning and planning requirements.

Scoggins was the only political newcomer to participate in the forum. He is seeking to replace longtime Councilwoman Hawthethia Williams in Post 2 representing the West Ward.

Scoggins is not only a political newcomer, but he’s also fairly new to Covington, having moved to the area just three years ago.

Scoggins described himself as “very transparent and honest” person who has spent several years working for “corporate America,” handling multi-million dollar budgets for companies such as Home Depot and BellSouth. Scoggins currently lives in Clark’s Grove and serves as the subdivision’s homeowner association president.

“I tell people I don’t really need to be running for city council,” Scoggins said during his opening remarks, “but when we moved here, it became pretty clear to me ... that city seems to end at Emory Street — at least that’s the opinion of a lot of people in the West Ward. Since that time, I decided I’m not going to complain about it anymore. Instead I’m going to see what I can do about it.”

Scoggins said he had personally visited nearly 900 homes in the West Ward while on the campaign trail, and after speaking to “hundreds and hundreds” of people, he made a discovery.

“It doesn’t matter if you’re rich, poor, Black, white, old, young, local and grew up here forever or newcomer,” he said. “If you live in the West Ward, you don’t feel part of the city.”

While visiting these homes, Scoggins said he encountered several people living in terrible conditions.

“You know, we spend a lot of times talking about apartments and growth,” he said, “all of which are fantastic. I’m an accountant so I understand finances. We have a $142 million dollar budget here — a growing budget. You need people on here that understand how to handle [that] and everything that comes along with it ... [That] doesn’t scare me.

What does scare me is that overshadows the humanity of the people that are living right next door to us ... You can manage the growth of the city and take care of your neighbors at the same time.”

Charika Davis is also vying for Williams’ seat, but she was not present for the forum.

Brendan Cherry, chairman of the Newton County Republican Party, said all candidates were invited to attend the forum. Taylor Beck, editor and publisher of The Covington News, served as moderator for the event.

Candidates each were given up to 10 minutes to make opening remarks before answering a series of questions. Questions from audience members, the local newspaper and residents unable to attend in person each addressed a myriad of issues such as growth, the influx of apartments, ways to attract more retail and restaurant options and homelessness. Candidates were given up to three minutes to respond to each question.

One of the first questions lodged at the candidates was centered on apartments. Simply put, they were asked to defend the need for more apartments despite an already high number of existing units and many more on track to be constructed.

“There’s a couple of answers to this question,” Keck said. “One, we have a whole lot of people that work in our area that don’t live here, because we don’t have the type of housing they want to live in. These young people that are working at Takeda and General Mills and Bridgestone ... they’re driving to Atlanta and they’re living ... in different places. They’re not buying homes. Young people are not buying homes.

“Young people want amenities,” she added. “So apartments are the trend right now, for the young people, and we have to attract the young people. I know we have a lot of people who have lived here for generations, but if we don’t retain the people that are working here to spend their money here ... we’re just spinning our wheels.

“How do we increase ownership? We bring them here, we get them loving it here, and they build houses,” Keck concluded. “The days of spec homes are gone.”

Henderson responded in agreement with Keck and said he was one of those young professionals who currently lives in an apartment.

“I think a lot of times we see 60% rental and 40% [homeowners], it’s not because people can’t [buy a home],” Henderson said. “It’s a lot of times people don’t want to or just haven’t decided if [home ownership is right for them] and their future here.

“I’ll never be in favor of just any type of housing,” Henderson continued. “It has to make sense. It has to fit that community, the zoning, etc. ...”

Scoggins answered by speaking about Covington’s potential to become a “livable city” by offering a large quantity of various housing options.

“I’ve been reading for the past couple of years this concept of livable cities,” Scoggins said. “It might scare you at first, if you’re a conservative like me, but as you read into it, it makes a lot of sense.

“So, forget about whether things are rented or owned for a minute,” he said. “What you want is a community where someone is born into and they grow up there and there is all kinds of housing that is available to them as they go through their life, and they just stay.

“But livable cities — Covington has the bones to be an amazing city, probably the best city in the state of Georgia, because how many cities our size have a trail system? How many cities our size have a square that you can walk to?”

As for creating more home ownership, Scoggins suggested opportunities could be made if action were taken against the numerous homes in poor condition on the West Side that are currently being leased.

When asked how candidates would “curb” the number of apartments being built within Covington, of if they would even commit to doing so, each candidate said that would be difficult to do.

“What you can do is make sure that they are the highest possible quality that you can get,” Scoggins said.

“You can’t just say, ‘I don’t want apartments in the community,’” Henderson said. “If the lands fits the zoning and it’s appropriate to be built, we can just say it can’t be built. You have to legally give a reason why it can’t be built.”

Henderson echoed Scoggins in saying it would be left up to city leaders to raise the standards of what types of apartments can built in the area.

“If it’s legal, and it’s right and it’s met all the criteria, then how can I say no?” Henderson said. “I can’t just say I’m against apartments.”

Keck, again, said apartments could be served as a way to attract young people and garner them to become life-long residents.

“One thing that I know is that we’ve got plenty of apartments coming out of the ground, and we’re going to have more apartments want to come here, because we are on the map,” Keck said. “It’s a wonderful place to live. And we’ve got to figure out how to get people to buy more homes. One way to get people to buy more homes is let them live in a nice apartment, learn what a beautiful community we have, and we’ll have developers want to build homes. If you wanted to buy a home today and you were being transferred into Covington, I would dare say you can’t find a home. In my neighborhood, if there’s a for sale sign in a yard, the house gets sold that week.

“It’s easy to say, ‘No apartments,’” Keck continued. “I would never campaign and say, ‘No apartments’ ... You can’t say, ‘No apartments,’ unless you like to be in the courts the rest of your life.”

Candidates were later asked how they would work to avoid overgrowth within the city.

Henderson echoed his response to previously related questions, saying controlling growth could be addressed through stricter ordinances on new developments to bring in higher quality apartments.

Keck said that the city was currently addressing overgrowth in various ways, including conducting traffic studies, extending those studies to be conducted annually. The city council has also asked city planning and zoning specialists to look at how other cities are doing and learn from their mistakes, she said. Keck said the council was also checking to see what things can legally be requested of developers. For example, could they be asked to build a fire station or police precinct, or at least cover the cost?

“I don’t want to stop growth,” Keck said. “I want to get good growth, and I want developers to help pay for the services we need.”

Scoggins said the issue of growth was part of the reason why he decided to run for office.

“How many of you drive around the city and see empty shopping centers and buildings? Why not use what’s already here? There’s an example of how you manage growth. You can’t stop the growth. It’s going to happen, because this is a fantastic place to be ... One of the ways to manage growth is to build a protection around the Square about half a mile out and really focus on what happens within that little area. Because I think when people say, ‘manage the growth,’ I think they’re worried about the Square being overrun and the traffic.”

When asked how candidates would attract more retail and restaurant options to the area, Keck said it would take what it seems most people don’t want — more housing and more people. She revealed that developers who sealed the deal to bring Publix to anchor the Town Center project said the national supermarket chain would not come to the area without rooftops.

“Growth brings those things,” she said.

law enforcement that investigated the crimes, said District Attorney Randy McGinley.

Deputy Chief Assistant District Attorney Jillian Hall, Senior Assistant District Attorney Alex Stone, Investigator Lisa Brown, Victim Advocate Shay Payne, and Legal Assistant Sheila Cornelius prosecuted the case, McGinley said.

The Covington Police Department led the investigation with assistance from the Crisp County Sheriff’s Office, Cordele Police Department, DeKalb County Police Department, and the GBI Crime Lab, McGinley said.

His conviction follows an incident that began April 3, 2019, when Preston fired a shot at Stanley Hillman’s dog. Hillman’s son, Shelvis Hillman, 40, confronted Preston about the shooting, Fox5 News reported.

Later that day, Hillman, who was 18 at the time, and two other suspects forced their way into Shelvis Hillman’s home and tried to rob him and the other residents. During that robbery, police said Preston shot Hillman in the abdomen.

A BOLO (be on the lookout) was issued and a $4,000 reward announced by Covington Police for information about the suspect following the incident at 4177 Washington St. in Covington.

A Covington Police Department Facebook posting said Preston was known to have gang affiliations and had the nicknames “Peanut” and “Nephew.”

Covington Police worked with the Crisp County Sheriff’s Department to track down Preston for more than a week before Crisp County deputies said they received a tip that Preston was at the Ashburn Inn motel in Cordele, Fox5 reported.

A tri-county SWAT team assisted CPD detectives in making the arrest, Covington Police spokesman Capt. Ken Malcom told the news station. Preston was found traveling with an unnamed female and juvenile, authorities said.

Sentencing was set for Tuesday, Oct. 26, in Newton County Superior Court. Preston faced a minimum of life in prison, the DA said.

Half of all Georgians now fully vaccinated against COVID, state health officials say

By TIM DARNELL
Capitol Beat News Service

ATLANTA — State health officials said Monday that 50% of all Georgians, or 5,154,793, are now fully vaccinated against COVID-19.

The Atlanta-based

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention considers individuals have been fully vaccinated two weeks after their second dose of a two-dose series (Moderna or Pfizer) and two weeks after a single-dose vaccine

(Johnson & Johnson). More than 56% of Georgians have received at least one dose of COVID vaccine, according to the state Department of Public Health.

“Having 50% of Georgians fully vacinated is a positive step toward ending the COVID-19 pandemic in the state,” Commissioner of Public Health Dr. Kathleen Toomey said.

“However, COVID-19 continues to spread in Georgia, particularly in areas of low vaccination rates, causing severe illness and death — deaths that are preventable.”

As of last week, all three COVID vaccines — Pfizer, J&J and Moderna — have been given Emergency Use Authorization for booster doses for some individuals. Third doses and booster doses of COVID-19 vaccine have been administered to nearly 120,000 Georgians.

HOMELESS:

“These are from numbers of crimes that were solved that we know the homeless were involved with,” he added. “There are unsolved crimes that they are tied to as well, so the 267% is likely much higher.”

Andrews shared that at least five dead bodies of homeless individuals had been found in tents in the woods, and, in 2017, a homeless man murdered another homeless man and set his body on fire.

Just two weeks ago, there was a homeless fatality on Old Atlanta Highway, he said.

Andrews said the Covington Police Department has confirmed at least 87 documented homeless individuals in Covington over the last year. Despite having Rainbow Community Shelter located in Covington, a large number of homeless people were still living in wooded areas within the city — something many residents might not realize, he said.

“The actual [homeless] population could be as high as double today,” Andrews said. “Unfortunately, that number is growing weekly, as are the crimes in Covington, Newton County, tied to those that are displaced.”

While collecting this information, Andrews said he and city staff members joined forces with local nonprofit and faith leaders to address the issue. About nine months ago, he said, the Spirit of Covington group was formed to discuss various opportunities. The group has identified “resources for those in need” and is involved in initial discussions to open a warming shelter this winter.

“I say all this because the city of Covington has a heart for aiding those in need,” Andrews said. “We have no desire to close the homeless shelter. Today, we have the largest population of homeless people in recent city history. We need a shelter. However, through our fact finding and diligence we have learned that a heavy majority of the beds at the shelter are going to those coming from the prison system.”

There are 57 total beds according to the Covington Fire Department’s inspection numbers. Per an open records request, Andrews later learned the shelter had 45 of those beds assigned to the state Department of Corrections — 28 male and 17 female.

“That equals 79% of the beds going to the [Department of Corrections],” he said. “That leaves only 12 beds for our local residents.”

Andrews said the goal was not to close the shelter. In fact, he understands the need. Since 2009, there have been more than 1,200 calls to the shelter, he said.

“While many of us in this room have enormous hearts, earlier this month the city communicated to the [Covington] Housing Authority, who has the lease with the local shelter, that the city does not wish to see the shelter participate in any prison rehabilitation or jail transition-based programs,” Andrews said. “We would like to see the shelter help those that are already displaced in Newton County, not add to the ongoing stream of released prisoners.

“Again, we are not advocating for a closure of the shelter,” he concluded. “The city simply wants to decrease the strain on our police force, keep our community safe and better care for those that are already displaced in Newton County.”

Councilman Kenneth Morgan agreed that changes needed to be made but said it would take all parties involved coming together in order to make necessary changes that would be a “win-win” for the city and its residents.

“We all realize there are some things that need to be done,” he said. “But I think the biggest thing is that we, as a council, along with Pastor [Clara] Lett at the homeless shelter, and the community, need to come together and decide, if there is no transitional program, how we can continue to move forward with it.

“I feel there’s a lot of different options and things we can look at moving forward to make sure that we can still be effective and it be a win-win for the community,” Morgan added.

Rainbow Community Shelter was rocked by an EF-1 tornado just more than one year ago, on Oct. 10, 2020. Wind gusts up to 112 mph ripped much of the building’s roofing away and caused significant damage to the shelter.

Shortly after the storm, the Newton County Board of Commissioners and city of Covington donated $30,000 apiece to aid in the shelter’s recovery.

Councilwoman Fleeta Baggett said she has requested on several occasions to see how that money was spent, asking for receipts and associated spending documents, but to no avail.

“Back when we gave the county $30,000, and the county was to give the money to [the shelter], I requested at that time — I was a ‘no’ vote — that they give us the receipts and tell us exactly how they spent the $30,000,” she said. “For over six months, I have been requesting to see how that money was spent, and I still have not gotten it. What is the status of that, [City Clerk] Audra [Gutierrez], with the county? ... The last time they just sent you a copy of the check for $30,000. Have you received anything else?”

“I have not,” Gutierrez replied.

“Thank you,” Baggett said definitively.

Rainbow Community Shelter, located at 7154 Turner Lake Circle SW, is operated under the direction of Lett, a local minister.

Lady Panthers win 4th volleyball title in a row

Lady Cougars win second straight softball title

The Peachtree Academy Lady Panthers defeated Rock Springs Christian Academy to capture their fourth straight high school state championship on Saturday, Oct. 16.

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD

COVINGTON, Ga. — State championships have become the norm for the Peachtree Lady Panthers volleyball team. For the past three years, the Lady Panthers have captured the ultimate trophy.

In 2018, 2019 and 2020, Peachtree Academy won state championships.

Now, the Lady Panthers will add another trophy to their case here in Covington.

On Saturday, Oct. 16, Peachtree swept Rock Springs Christian Academy in the final round 3-0 to capture the 2021 GAPPS 1-AA State Volleyball Championship.

When the match reached game point, head coach Bobby Mitchell couldn't help but be overcome with emotion.

"It's like a Disney movie," Mitchell said. "I'm standing there when it's 24 to 13 and thinking, 'I cannot believe they've done this. Five in a row.' It was just surreal."

The championship round was closely contested.

Game 1 went to Peachtree Academy 25-16. In Game 2, the Lady Panthers won 25-17 and finished Rock Springs off in Game 3. That was after Peachtree Academy defeated Calvary Christian School in the state semifinals earlier that day.

The postgame ceremony and celebration capped an impressive 11-1 overall record for Peachtree Academy which includes a 6-1 region record. Winning a fourth straight region championship, too, just adds to an impressive 2021 season.

In addition to the high school state championships, this year's senior class also obtained the ultimate prize during their eighth grade seasons. For the seven seniors, this year's triumph makes it five straight.

So, it's safe to say that it's been quite the journey for this Lady Panthers team — a journey that Mitchell doesn't want the players to take for granted.

"It's been the best five years of my life," Mitchell said. "It's the little things you're going to miss. I took in those little moments and I'm grateful for being with these kids."

All in all, the Lady Panthers conclude a stretch of seasons that may never be duplicated again.

Throughout the past five seasons, multiple people have contributed to the volleyball program's success, too, which makes it all much sweeter for everyone to enjoy.

However, knowing this would be the last celebration for the historic 2022 senior class, made the scene after the match a bit more emotional than in years

The Piedmont Academy Lady Cougars are still the King of the Mountain for GISA Class AA fast-pitch softball.

Or perhaps that should be the Queen of the Mountain.

Piedmont rallied in its best-of-three series against Southwest Georgia last week to win another state championship trophy.

The Lady Cougars lost game one last Thursday 5-2 but then swept the Lady Warriors 7-3 and 11-9 on Saturday.

"As a senior, there was no better way to end my softball career than with a state title," said Maddie Waddleton. "I'm so thankful for my team, coaches and fans for making my last softball season the best yet. It's an honor to win a state championship, and doing it back-to-back is something special. along with a winning a state championship, my awesome teammates definitely made my senior season one to remember."

The championship will be one players and coaches remember for a long time.

"What a roller coast ride," Coach Joe Johnson said. "We had been fighting for our lives since game one in the first round. I've said it a few times this year but this team finds a way to win. They don't know how to give up. I am extremely proud of the girls and the coaches for all the work that was put in to get here."

In the third and deciding game of the championship series, Piedmont pounded out 15 hits to survive Southwest Georgia.

The Lady Cougars scored one run in the second, two in the fourth, two in the fifth, one in the sixth and then five more runs in the top of the seventh.

The Lady Warriors scored their first run in the bottom of the first followed by two in the fifth, three more in the sixth and three in the bottom of the seventh but would finish two runs short.

Marissa Holder and Fleming Sealy helped lead a solid offensive attack with three hits each while Emily McEwen drove in four runs. Sealy also had three RBI including a key one late in the contest.

Teagan Satterfield, MaKayla Arnold and Holder each drew walks.

Averi Camp worked 5-2/3 innings before Ewing closed out the contest. Camp had two strikeouts while McEwen had one.

Johnson's team tied the series with a 7-3 win in game two Saturday evening. Holder, McEwing and Kylee Keck had multiple hits while Holder drove in two runs.

Teagan Hinson, Arnold and McEwen each drew walks.

COVINGTON, Ga. — Recently, the Newton and Eastside High School volleyball teams received some exciting news.

For the Lady Rams, four of their players received recognition on the All-Region team that is voted on by all coaches in Region 4-AAAAAAA.

Makenzie Joseph earned a spot on the Second Team All-Region team.

Three of Joseph's teammates were also recognized.

Adrianna Lewis, Jewel Harper and Sanaya March all receiving Honorable Mention from the region coaches, too.

A volleyball player from Eastside received recognition, too, on the All-Region Team.

Madison Cluff was voted onto the Second Team All-Region team in Region 8-AAAAA.

Phil's Pregame Points – Week 11

Tigers must bring 'A' game against Heritage-Conyers

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
phubbard@covnews.com

[Editor's Note: To preview this week's football games, Sports Editor, Phillip B. Hubbard introduces a brand new series called "Phil's Pregame Points." For each game, he briefly breaks down what he believes each team needs to do to better their chances at a win.]

Alcovy @ Heritage
954 N. Main St.
Conyers, Ga 3012
Kickoff at 7:30 p.m.
Last matchup:
2019 Heritage won 19-0

• Focus on here and now
— Alcovy is currently in the hunt to win the Region 3-AAAAAA championship for the first time in school history. Should the Tigers win out, they'll claim that title. However, they should keep their focus on this week's game. Although Heritage has only won one game this season doesn't mean it's not a notable opponent. The Tigers need to bring their A game on Friday night.

• Make history
— History is not on the Tigers' side heading into Friday night. In the six matchups between these two schools, Heritage has won all of them. Heritage has defeated the Tigers every time by an average of two touchdowns per contest. And, while the Tigers seem to be the favorites heading into Friday, they'll need to note that they'll need to make history if they come out on top.

Eastside @ Walnut Grove
4863 Guthrie Cemetery Rd.
Loganville, Ga 30052
Kickoff at 7:30 p.m.
Last Matchup:
2020 Eastside won 31-0

• Playoff mindset
— The Eagles are currently in a three-way tie for second place in Region 8-AAAAA. With that being the case, head coach Jay Cawthon told me after last Friday's win that his team needs to play each week like it's a playoff game. Should Eastside's players listen to their head ball coach, then the Eagles should come out fired up to play. And, that'll also go a long way as the game progresses on Friday night.

• Keep Warriors' streak alive
— Currently, Walnut Grove is on a two-game winning streak.

COUGARS:

In the pitcher's circle, Camp went all seven innings with four strikeouts. Southwest Georgia opened the series with a 5-2 victory last Thursday. Four runs in the bottom of the sixth inning proved to be the difference. Keck had two hits while McKayla Arnold and Abby Arnold each drew walks. McEwen pitched six solid innings for the Lady Cougars. Piedmont (18-5 overall) is now a repeat champion. The Lady Warriors of Southwest Georgia finished the season 21-3 overall with all three defeats coming to the Lady Cougars. "Looking at the stats, the teams were pretty even on paper," Johnson said. "We had to see who would make the least amount of mistakes. The opening game was 1-1 until the sixth inning. They were able to get a few hits and we couldn't get out of that inning. By the time the smoke cleared we were down 5-1. We were only able to get one back in the seventh." Southwest Georgia entered the tournament as the number one seed despite losing a head-to-head matchup with Piedmont. The Lady Cougars were determined to be the number two seeded team for the state tournament. "Winning the state title back-to-back for the first time in Piedmont softball history is the greatest honor," said McEwen. "I am so proud of my team because of all of our hard work. I am also so glad our team could give our seniors a season to remember. After losing the first state championship game I was upset, but deep down I had faith in my team and knew we still had a chance and Saturday afternoon we did just that. We worked together and played with all of our hearts and won the state title. I couldn't be prouder and would not wish to do it with any other group of girls. I love my team so much and the family that we have made." The Lady Cougars made the necessary adjustments for Saturday. "By the time the third game of the series began, we had a lot of tired kids," Johnson said. "But they gave everything they had to win another state title. There was some great defense by both teams. For us to get our second state championship in a row, I couldn't be happier to be a part of this program. We have received a lot of support from the school and our players' families. We look forward to doing it again next year." Johnson is assisted with the program by Lamar Bradford, Ron Holder and Matt Britt.

past. "It was over," Mitchell said. "It was a fun, five-year journey of year-around volleyball for these [senior] girls. Then that was it. Afterward during the celebration, all the girls were sad and crying.

I told them, 'This one door is closing, but we'll have about 5,000 more doors that will open for us in our lives.' I wanted them to celebrate, because I don't think I'll ever see this done again."

File | Garrett Pitts | The Covington News

Alcovy has the opportunity to make history this week against Heritage in Conyers, as the Tigers have never defeated the Patriots. Last time the two teams met, Alcovy lost 19-0 in 2019.

So, the Warriors will be looking early and often for a spark to get things going early. Eastside should really hone in on the first quarter and a half to limit any mistakes or avoid any big plays that could hurt them in the long run. If the Eagles can come out, like they did at Jackson County, and establish the run game and play solid defense, then they should be able to give Walnut Grove its third straight loss.

Newton vs. Grayson
Sharp Stadium
Kickoff at 7:30 p.m.
Last matchup:
2020 Grayson won 37-0

• Be mistake free
— Last week, the Newton Rams did a better job at cleaning up their mistakes. But they made one that ultimately cost them a win against Mill Creek. It was a pick-6 by Jevarra Martin that gave Mill Creek the definitive 17-14 lead in the first half. Now, this is a huge improvement from the earlier season games for the Rams. But, it's region play now. One mistake is just as important as 12 mistakes in non-region play. Newton needs to continue to work at being mistake free to give itself a chance in the final weeks of 2021.

• Run the ball; play defense
— This recipe has proven to work for the Rams all season long. When they've gotten away from running the ball and playing dominant defense, that's when Newton has gotten itself in trouble. It should come out, pound the ball with Rontravious

Perry and company to gradually move down the field. Then depend on its defense to constantly make stops like the Rams have done all season long. Should they stay the course, the Rams will have a better chance to get back in the win column.

Social Circle vs. Towns County
Redskins Stadium
Kickoff at 7:30 p.m.
Last matchup:
2020 Social Circle won 34-27

• Don't rest on Commerce W
— It is super easy for any team to stay focused on last week's results when they beat a team like Commerce on the road. The Redskins don't need to fall into that trap. Even though Towns County is coming off a lopsided, 63-28 loss against Greene County, doesn't mean it's going to just lay down against the Redskins. If Social Circle doesn't refocus following its huge upset last week, then it could find itself being upset this week.

• Senior Motivation
— Friday's game will serve as senior night for the Redskins. So, it should be easy for Social Circle players to find extra motivation to send their seniors home with a win. This game should also be extra important for all the seniors to come and play smart and aggressive. If they can harness that motivation and play for a full, four quarters, the Redskins should have no problem getting back to .500 in region play this week.

THE COVINGTON NEWS CELEBRATES SURVIVORS,
HONORS LIVES LOST TO BREAST CANCER

Routine check-up led to early detection for Relay for Life leader

By MEGAN NEUNAN
Piedmont Newton Hospital

COVINGTON, Ga. — Melissa Thompson, a 46-year-old school bus driver, admits she had fallen behind on annual mammograms. Life happened, then COVID-19 happened. But in March 2021, she got back on track at the Women’s Diagnostic Center at Piedmont Newton Hospital.

“I just went in for a regular, routine mammogram,” she said.

It was good she did. Ultimately, Thompson learned she had stage 2B breast cancer. She hadn’t felt a lump or experienced any other symptoms.

She and her husband digested the news before telling their three daughters, ages 25, 22 and 20.

“We just locked arms and began to pray,” Thompson recalled. “It is my faith that has gotten me through this journey.”

Thompson added that her infant granddaughter, Magnolia Jean, has been a huge help too—whether she knows it or not. “It is her cuddles and kisses that have gotten me through the worst of my days,” she said.

Thompson said one of the hardest things was all of the appointments she had to make right away—with an oncologist, with a breast surgeon and for chemotherapy—while

Local real estate broker shares her life-altering experience with breast cancer

COVINGTON, Ga. — Darlene Smallwood knew something was wrong — she could sense it.

In February 2020, after visiting her doctors and undergoing several tests and X-rays, the owner and broker of Hometown Realty Consultants, Inc. in Covington was diagnosed with breast cancer.

“I don’t know how many years I had been having problems,” Smallwood said. “Well, I went to the doctors ... and I did everything they told me to. And they said, ‘You’re going to be OK.’”

Doctors’ initial diagnosis was that she simply had a cyst, and that it needed to be drained of fluid. But after further examination, results from a biopsy showed to be cancerous.

“They said, ‘We’ve got good news and we’ve got bad news,’” Smallwood recalled. “I told them, ‘Well, give me the good news first.’ And they said, ‘We can do surgery, but you do have cancer.’”

“Cancer was the word that was scary,” she continued. “Cancer is the word you hear and you automatically think of dying.

“It was during the time of the shock of having the cancer — it’s like in [running this] real estate: here’s the problem. What are we going to do to fix it? How am I going to get rid of it? Because I’m not ready to leave this world yet,” Smallwood said.

Smallwood went to Atlanta for her surgery and follow-up treatment. Seeking a second opinion, it was discovered that Smallwood had developed cancer in both breasts.

After a successful surgery, Smallwood returned home to Covington just as COVID-19 began to take its toll on the area. She was forced to stay at home, both due to having cancer and also to avoid contracting the novel coronavirus.

Smallwood returned to work the week of July 4, solely working from her office. Due to the risk of COVID-19, she left the duty of showing homes to her family of real estate agents.

“We just kept going,” she said. “It’s like, where there’s a will, there’s a way ... I wasn’t never worried about the business having to close or anything like that, because I could count on them. I knew I had good agents taking care of their stuff, and I knew that if I needed something taken care of, they’d do that as well. That’s the things you never forget.”

Smallwood said cancer has changed her life in an unexplainable way.

“Having cancer, you can go into a depression,” Smallwood said. “Having cancer, it can change you. I can’t explain how, really, but it does change you ... It does something mentally and physically.”

That why she said it’s important to talk to people and accept the help

Fight the good fight for loved ones lost, those still with us

Patrick Graham owner

I’ve written before about my mother, Anna Graham, and her battle with cancer.

This time of year always brings back memories of mom’s last days. She finally succumbed to the ravages of this terrible disease on Monday, Nov. 6, 2006. She was 74.

With that dreaded anniversary just over a month away now, and with October being Breast Cancer Awareness Month, it gives me pause to remember Mom and her struggle.

Four years prior to her death, Mom had been diagnosed with both breast and uterine cancer, and she had a double mastectomy and a hysterectomy to try and end the threat.

We thought she had been successful. Just four months before she died, she had been given a clean bill of health during her regular doctor’s visit. But in the interim, the cancer came back with a vengeance, infiltrating “the three L’s,” her lungs, liver and lymph nodes. We didn’t know how bad it was, and I’m not sure she did either, until she passed out at her Catholic church in Huntsville, Alabama, and had to be taken to the hospital by some of her friends.

This was during my first stint in Monroe, and I remember driving to Huntsville to try and determine exactly was going on with her health. I knew this wasn’t good, but I didn’t know how bad it was. I checked in with her every week and she never let on that she was having any difficulty at all.

After finally making it to her room I asked her how she was feeling. She told me, “I’m dying,” very matter-of-factly. If you knew my mother you knew this was her style. I remember saying, “Let’s see what the doctors have to say,” but the doctors, unfortunately, confirmed what my mother already knew.

They gave mom up to six months to live after discovering the cancer had reoccurred. She only made it 10 days.

Those last days were spent at Abbey Hospice in Social Circle. I had her moved locally so that my wife, Allison, and I could help look after her, however long that was going to be, along with my brothers and sisters. Although I cherish being able to spend those last few days with her, it really wasn’t enough time. I still miss her terribly, and I always will.

Cancer must be a six-letter word because not even a four-letter word would do justice to the truly awful nature of this insidious disease.

All of us have a loved one who has been impacted by cancer. This disease in all of its myriad forms has stolen mothers, fathers, daughters, sons, family and friends from all of us.

We also all still have loved ones who are struggling with it. In today’s edition and in the past we have shared stories of survivors who, with the advancements made in medicine today and the grace of the good Lord, have been able to beat back the cancer trying to invade their bodies.

Which is why it is incumbent upon all of

Never forget our pink warriors

Listed on this page are the names of 125 courageous local women who have fought breast cancer, who are currently fighting the disease and those who have passed away. Some of their battles date back to as early as 1984, according to Piedmont Newton Hospital — where each of these warriors went for diagnosis and/or treatment.

Chances are, readers will know one or more of these ladies. Chances are, one or more of these ladies are a family member, friend or neighbor. And without a doubt, there are many other locals who’ve battled this disease that are not listed. May we never forget the strength and resolve these women, as well as millions of others around the world.

of others. She said the support of her family and work family were instrumental in battle with breast cancer.

Smallwood recently went for a check-up in Atlanta, and she said everything looked fine.

For anyone who thinks they might have a health issues, especially with signs or symptoms of breast cancer, Smallwood advised to seek out their doctor and get help.

“It doesn’t matter if you think it’s not cancer,” Smallwood said. “But if there’s something suspicious, go and get it checked. Because what you’re doing is putting off something that could add years to your life. So, whether you want to hear it or not, you need to know. Never put it off, because you’re taking days away from your life, and those days could be memories that you’re making with your loved ones.”

she was still trying to process the diagnosis. She said the Women’s Diagnostic Center made everything easier.

“They were absolutely wonderful because they...directed me where to go next and what to do next,” she explained.

Thompson’s treatment plan includes 20 weeks of chemotherapy and a double mastectomy.

“I’ve stayed within the Piedmont system and that has been wonderful. Everybody has access to my records and can work together.

And, so, I’ve got a really strong team,” Thompson said.

Cancer awareness was an important cause to Thompson and her husband, even before her diagnosis, since female cancers run in her family. So, the Thompsons have participated in Relay for Life events with the American Cancer Society in Newton County for years. Two years ago, they even took on formal leadership roles with the organization.

“We believe in the cause and we believe in the cure, and now I’m reaping the benefits of that,” she said.

Now, during Breast Cancer Awareness Month, Thompson has one message she wants to spread: “Get your mammogram. If there is any woman in your life that you love, tell her, remind her. Because if I had not gone in for a mammogram, then it [the cancer] could have been a lot further progressed before it was ever discovered.”

Hope Boutique at Piedmont Newton receives $12,500 donation from Central Church Pink Glow Out Run

By MEGAN NEUNAN
Piedmont Newton Hospital

COVINGTON, Ga. — The Hope Boutique at Piedmont Newton Hospital received a $12,500 donation recently from the proceeds of the Pink Glow Out 5K sponsored by Central Church in Covington.

“I am incredibly grateful to Central Church and all of the participants in the Pink Glow Out 5K for their support of Piedmont Newton and the Hope Boutique,” said David Kent, chief executive officer of Piedmont Newton. “I am honored to accept their generous donation on behalf of the Women’s Diagnostic Center.”

Maree Cronan, one of the event organizers, said the Oct. 2 fundraiser was the first night-time run in Covington and will become an annual event to mark Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The more than 200 participants wore pink and glow-in-the-dark necklaces.

“We wanted to glow for the ladies,” Cronan said.

The Hope Boutique, located in the Women’s Diagnostic Center (WDC) at Piedmont

Newton, supports women battling breast cancer with scarves, wigs, and other resources. Cronan said she and other church leaders chose the boutique as the beneficiary because they love the story behind it. In 2006, a volunteer with the WDC, Kay Goff, was diagnosed with breast cancer and quickly realized the need for a program to help families with the extra expenses that can occur with a cancer diagnosis; her idea became the Hope Boutique.

“We have a lot of events at the church just for fun, but to do something for such a good cause, that was the real blessing of it,” said Donna Allen, a pastor at Central Church.

Not only did the Pink Glow Out 5k benefit women with breast cancer, a breast cancer survivor, Susan “Sissy” Skipper, and her daughter actually won the race in their respective age groups. Skipper was an avid runner before her diagnosis, even running a marathon 20 years ago, but the Pink Glow Out 5k was the first race she had run since her 2018 breast cancer battle.

Skipper was diagnosed with breast cancer through a routine mammogram at the Women’s Diagnostic Center at Piedmont Newton. She remembered panicking during a biopsy and said Wendy Hankins, the cancer navigator, held her hand.

“I just thought if I had to go through all that, this is the place to do it,” Skipper said.

Last weekend, she ran to give back to the place that made her experience with breast cancer as positive as possible.

“I was proud when it was announced that I was a survivor and did that [won],” Skipper said. “It lets people know that just because you have something like that and go through something, you can still go on with your life and do things like you always did.”

If you would like to donate to the Hope Boutique, the Women’s Diagnostic Center or to Piedmont Newton, please contact the Piedmont Foundation by visiting www.piedmont.org or calling 404-605-2130.

Piedmont Newton now offers breast biopsies guided by 3D mammograms

By MEGAN NEUNAN
Piedmont Newton Hospital

COVINGTON, Ga. — Piedmont Newton Hospital has purchased a half-million-dollar biopsy attachment that will enable doctors to perform biopsies at the Women’s Diagnostic Center based on 3-D, as opposed to 2-D, mammograms, while the patient sits upright for the procedure.

Biopsies guided by mammograms are called stereotactic biopsies. A patient would typically receive this type of biopsy if her mammogram showed calcifications (calcium spots) or distortions, which are abnormalities in the architecture of the breast without a visible mass.

3-D mammograms, specifically, allow doctors to look at breast tissue one layer at a time, and sometimes a calcification or distortion only appears on one layer. In this circumstance, before the center received the attachment in July, the patient would have had to go to another facility that had the tool for a biopsy of that area of concern.

“With our old unit, we had to see things on two views, in order to be able to target them [for biopsy]. With this unit, if we only see it on one view, we can still target it, which is really important,” said Michelle Ross, M.D., breast radiologist at Piedmont Newton Hospital. “I like to work my patients up

Women should be mindful of signs, symptoms of breast cancer

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Breast cancer is a formidable foe. According to the World Health Organization, an estimated 627,000 women lost their lives to breast cancer in 2018. But women are not helpless in the fight against breast cancer, as the WHO notes early detection is critical and could potentially save thousands of lives each year.

A proactive approach is a key component of protecting oneself against breast cancer. While the National Breast Cancer Foundation, Inc.® notes that many breast cancer symptoms are invisible and not noticeable without a professional cancer screening, women can keep an eye out for certain signs of breast cancer they might be able to detect on their own. Monthly self-exams can help women more easily identify changes in their breasts. During such self-exams, women can look for the following signs and symptoms and are advised to report any abnormalities they discover to their physicians immediately.

- Changes in how the breast or nipple feels: The NBCF says nipple tenderness or a lump or thickening in or near the breast or underarm could indicate the presence of breast cancer. Some women may notice changes in the skin texture or an enlargement of the pores in the skin of their breast. In many instances, skin texture has been described as being similar to the texture of an orange peel. Lumps in the breast also may indicate breast cancer, though not all lumps are cancerous.

- Change in appearance of the breast or nipple: Unexplained changes in the size or shape of the breast; dimpling anywhere on the breast; unexplained swelling or shrinking of the breast, particularly when the shrinking or swelling is exclusive to one side only; and a nipple that is turned slightly inward or inverted are some signs and symptoms of breast cancer that can affect the appearance of the breast or nipple. It is common for women’s breasts to be asymmetrical, but sudden asymmetry should be brought to the attention of a physician.

Doctors say there are only three common breast cancer types

Metro Creative Service
The American Cancer Society notes that there are many types of breast cancer, though some are more common than others.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Millions of women across the globe are diagnosed with breast cancer every year. The World Cancer Research Fund and the American Institute for Cancer Research notes that more than 2 million new cases of breast cancer were diagnosed in 2018, making the disease one of the most commonly occurring cancers in the world.

Upon receiving a breast cancer diagnosis, patients typically have a number of questions, including which type of breast cancer they have. The American Cancer Society notes that there are many types of breast cancer, though some are more common than others. Learning to distinguish between the more common types of breast cancer, which include invasive ductal carcinoma, ductal carcinoma in situ and invasive lobular carcinoma, can help patients and their support teams better understand this difficult, yet beatable disease.

WHAT ARE CARCINOMAS?

The ACS reports that most breast cancers are carcinomas. Carcinomas are tumors that start in the epithelial cells that line organs and tissue throughout the body. Carcinomas can spread to other parts of the body, even though they do not always do so.

INVASIVE DUCTAL CARCINOMA

Sometimes referred to as “IDC,” invasive ductal carcinoma accounts for between 70 and 80 percent of all breast cancers, making it the most common type of the disease, according to the National Breast Cancer Foundation, Inc.®. Invasive means the cancer has spread from the milk ducts, where IDC originates, to the surrounding breast tissues.

DUCTAL CARCINOMA IN SITU

Ductal carcinoma in situ, or DCIS, is a non-invasive breast cancer that starts inside the milk ducts. BreastCancer.org notes that “in situ” means the cancer is still in its original place, not having spread beyond the milk duct to any surrounding breast tissue. That’s helpful to know, as it calms patients’ fears knowing the cancer has been caught before it could metastasize, or spread. One out of every five new breast cancer cases is DCIS. While that might sound alarming, BreastCancer.org notes that DCIS incidence rates are possibly so high because people are living longer than they used to (a person’s risk for breast cancer increases with age) and education about breast cancer screening appears to be working, compelling more women to get mammograms.

INVASIVE LOBULAR CARCINOMA

The ACS notes that roughly 10 percent of all invasive breast cancers are invasive lobular carcinomas, or ILC. The word “lobular” means that the cancer began in the lobules, from start to diagnosis, so it’s good to not have to send them out to get the diagnosis.”

The new unit also makes it possible to access abnormalities that are located close to the chest wall. When a patient lies face down on the prone table, which has a hole for the breast, the thickness of the table itself can block calcifications, for example, that are further back.

“We can now target practically anything all the way up to the chest wall because we have so many options with positioning,” said Dr. Ross.

Sitting upright instead of lying down for a breast biopsy is also more comfortable for some women.

“Sometimes patients have a hard time laying on their stomach or getting up on the table, so there’s an advantage to that,” said Shona Fincher, a supervisor at the Women’s Diagnostic Center.

So far, Fincher reported that about 10 patients have benefitted from the upright stereotactic biopsy accessory.

The Women’s Diagnostic Center at

Piedmont Newton also performs ultrasound-guided and MRI-guided biopsies to diagnose breast cancer. For more information, visit piedmont.org.

The National Cancer Institute notes that stage refers to the extent of the cancer, including how large the tumor is and whether or not it has spread, or metastasized.

Role of staging when diagnosing breast cancer

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

news@covnews.com

A cancer diagnosis can be overwhelming, and people who receive such news may be flooded with a wide range of emotions. When delivering such a diagnosis, doctors share vital information about their patients' disease. Those details can go a long way toward easing patients' concerns.

Staging is an important component of cancer treatment. The National Cancer Institute notes that stage refers to the extent of the cancer, including how large the tumor is and whether or not it has spread, or metastasized. Learning the stage of the cancer, which is typically expressed on a scale of 0 through IV, helps doctors understand how serious the cancer is and the patient's chances of survival. Staging also is used to plan treatments and potentially identify clinical trials that may serve as treatment options.

The American Joint Committee on Cancer oversees the breast cancer staging system and utilizes the TNM system. Breastcancer.org notes that three clinical characteristics, referred to as "T, N, and M," are used to calculate the stage of the cancer:

- the size of the tumor and whether or not is has grown into nearby tissue (T)

- whether the cancer is in the lymph nodes (N)

- whether the cancer has spread, or metastasized, into other parts of the body beyond the breast (M)

Additional characteristics were added to the AJCC's TNM breast cancer staging system in 2018. Though this has made determining the stage of breast cancer more complex, Breastcancer.org notes that it's also made staging more accurate. That improved accuracy increases the likelihood that doctors will choose the most effective treatment plan for their patients, which should ease those patients' concerns as they begin treatment.

Staging is complex, and patients should know that staging alone does not dictate prognosis. The following breakdown, courtesy of the NCI, is a brief description of the five stages of cancer (stages 0 through IV). A more detailed description of breast cancer stages can be found at <https://www.breastcancer.org/symptoms/diagnosis/staging>.

- Stage 0: This is diagnosed when abnormal cells are present but have not spread to nearby tissue. Stage 0 is also called carcinoma in situ, or CIS. CIS is not cancer, but it may become cancer.

- Stages I through III: Cancer is present in these stages. The higher the number, the larger the tumor is and the more it has spread into nearby tissues.

- Stage IV: The cancer has spread into distant parts of the body.

Staging plays an important role in treating cancer. Recognizing the role of staging can help patients better understand their disease and the direction of their treatments. More information about staging is available at www.cancer.gov.

which produce milk and empty out into the ducts that carry milk to the nipple. When a person is diagnosed with ILC, that means the cancer has broken through the wall of the lobule and has started invading the tissues of the breast. Over time, ILC can spread to the lymph nodes and possibly even other areas of the body.

The type of breast cancer a person has will affect his or her treatment. As prevalent as breast cancer may seem, it is beatable, and many people overcome the disease and go on to live happy, full lives.

The American Cancer Society reports that the five-year survival rate for all cancers combined that were diagnosed between 2009 and 2015 was 67 percent. That's a noteworthy and encouraging statistic, though global figures compiled by Ourworldindata.org indicate that five-year survival rates following diagnosis are significantly lower in poorer countries. In addition, the road to recovery for cancer patients typically does not end when treatments are completed. The National Cancer Institute notes that many cancer survivors have indicated that information and support was abundant during their treatment. However, once treatment stopped, a new wave of questions and uncertainty soon emerged. For example, the NCI points out that many cancer survivors recognize that life after treatment is less about "getting back to normal" than it is about discovering the new normal. In fact, the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center reports that most people indicate it takes between six and 12 months after they complete chemotherapy before they truly feel like themselves again. Follow-up care is a vital part of recovering from cancer. The NCI notes that cancer survivors typically return to the doctor every three to four months during the first two to three years after treatment. After that, survivors may see their doctors once or twice a year. Follow-up care is vital for cancer survivors, as it provides their doctors an opportunity to determine if patients are experiencing any side effects from treatment. These appointments also allow doctors to determine if the cancer has returned or spread to other parts of the body. In addition, follow-up visits provide an opportunity for cancer survivors to bring up any symptoms or questions they might have. Patients can ask about ways to reduce their risk of cancer recurrence and seek advice on getting back to normal, including how quickly they can begin exercising and how to approach new fitness regimens if they were inactive prior to diagnosis. The road to recovery from cancer may be filled with uncertainty. But cancer survivors should recognize that millions before them have survived the disease and gone on to live full, happy lives. A patient approach to recovery can help cancer survivors overcome any obstacles they may encounter along the way.

Survivors can reduce risk of breast cancer recurrence

news@covnews.com

A breast cancer diagnosis can change patients' lives in ways they never imagined. That's especially so in the rare instances when women under 40 are diagnosed with the disease. According to the American Cancer Society, it's uncommon for women under 40 to receive a breast cancer diagnosis. In fact, data from the ACS indicates that only about 4% of all women diagnosed with breast cancer in the United States are under age 40. But 4% is nothing to brush aside, especially when the ACS estimates that more than 300,000 women in the United States are diagnosed with breast cancer each year. That means roughly 12,000 women under 40 in the U.S. will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year, and many of those women will understandably express concerns about cancer recurrence in the years to come. The medical experts at Johns Hopkins Medicine note that learning to cope with fears of breast cancer recurrence is an important part of the recovery process. Those same experts note that various lifestyle changes can help women regain their health, strength and optimism and quell any fears they have about cancer recurrence. • Take care of yourself, both emotionally and physically. Johns Hopkins Medicine urges breast cancer survivors to put their own needs first sometimes. That can be difficult for younger breast cancer survivors with children at home, but prioritizing their own emotional well-being can help women overcome their fears of recurrence. Support groups can connect women with fellow breast cancer survivors, and women should not hesitate to discuss any fears or concerns with their doctors. It's also vital that women prioritize their physical well-being. Routine exercise and a healthy diet can help women reduce stress and maintain a healthy weight, which can reduce risk for recurrence. • Stay on top of screenings and vaccinations. Another way to reduce the risk of cancer recurrence is to stay up-to-date on screenings, flu shots and vaccinations. Annual physicals and screenings for cardiovascular conditions like high cholesterol and diabetes can help women stay on a healthy path forward. • Monitor vitamin D levels. Johns Hopkins Medicine notes that the Nurses Health Study found a link between low levels of vitamin D and breast cancer incidence. It remains unknown if vitamin D supplements can lower risk of breast cancer recurrence, but maintaining sufficient levels of vitamin D can promote overall health. Women can speak with their physicians about vitamin D and which supplements to consider. In addition, spending 20 minutes per day in the sunshine while wearing sunscreen with a minimum SPF of 30 can help women reach recommended levels of vitamin D. Cancer recurrence is a significant concern for survivors. However, various strategies can help women reduce their risk for recurrence and help them regain their optimism for the future.

Test regularly: Breast cancer most treatable in early stages

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
news@covnews.com

Cancer is most treatable and beatable during its earliest stages. But how does a person detect cancer early, when he or she may not even realize cancer is present? There are a few steps to take.

SCREENING TESTS

Scheduling screening tests for common cancers, even if there are no symptoms present, is an effective way to detect cancer in its early stages. The American Cancer Society recommends the following tests.

- Breast cancer: Women between the ages of 40 and 44 can begin to schedule annual breast cancer screenings if they so choose. The ACS recommends women between the ages of 45 and 54 schedule annual screenings, after which mammograms can occur every two years.
- Colorectal cancer: Regular screenings for colorectal cancers can begin at age 45 with stool-based or visual exams that look for signs of cancer.
- Cervical cancer: This cancer screening should begin at age 25 and continue until women are 65. Pap tests and human papillomavirus tests are recommended at various intervals, typically between three and five years for healthy women.

Metro Creative Services

Scheduling screening tests for common cancers, even if there are no symptoms present, is an effective way to detect cancer in its early stages.

- Skin cancer: All people regardless of age are advised to check their skin regularly for any changes that may indicate the presence of skin cancer. Screenings for prostate cancer, lung cancer, endometrial cancer, and some others may be important for those with a family history of these cancers or those who are at higher risk due to various behaviors. People are urged to speak with their physicians about cancer screenings and any additional steps they can take to lower their risk for cancer.

LOOKING FOR MICROVESTICLES

To detect cancers earlier, doctors may employ blood tests that examine the presence of microvesticles in the blood. Harvard Medical School says cells shed microvesticles, but the amount shed by tumors is substantial. However, finding these very small particles requires a powerful device and complicated lab process. Newer innovations at the Center for Systems Biology at Massachusetts General Hospital have led to the development of a handheld device that uses a nanotechnology sensor to detect tumor microvesticles in a drop of blood in roughly two hours. This technology has the potential to diagnose cancer much earlier, according to Dr. Ralph Weissleder, director of the center and developer of the technology.

FEELING “OFF”

Individuals are their best advocates for early cancer detection. Any symptom that is out of the ordinary and persists should be treated as a red flag. Lumps, pains, the presence of blood in stool or urine, persistent coughs, fatigue, abnormal vaginal discharge, sores that do not heal, and a loss of appetite all could be early signs of cancer. People are urged to schedule appointments with their primary care doctors to discuss any abnormalities.

As cancer spreads, it can affect the effectiveness of treatment. This also may affect chances of survival. The earlier one detects cancer, the greater his or her chances of surviving the disease.

Support groups, resources can make difference in breast cancer battle

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
news@covnews.com

A strong support network can help breast cancer patients navigate their treatments and all of the uncertainty that can arise after a cancer diagnosis.

Many women undergoing treatment for breast cancer lean on friends and family for everything from emotional support to help with household tasks and much more.

Though family and friends are often invaluable to women during their battles with breast cancer, sometimes a little support from women going through the same ups and downs can be just what patients need to stay the course and overcome their disease.

According to the World Cancer Research Fund, breast cancer is the most common cancer in women across the globe. The WCRF estimates that breast cancer accounts for roughly 25% of all cancers in women. The World Health Organization reports that 2.3 million women were diagnosed with breast cancer in 2020. Those figures are significant, but it's important that women recognize that five-year survival rates have improved dramatically in recent decades.

In fact, the American Cancer Society notes that the five-year survival rate for localized breast cancers is 99%, while the rate for breast cancers that has spread outside the breast to nearby structures or lymph nodes is 86%.

Rising survival rates for breast cancer mean that millions of women across the globe have already survived the disease, and many such women play vital roles in support groups that help women every day.

CancerCare® is a national organization in the United States that is dedicated to providing free, professional support services to anyone affected by cancer. All CancerCare® services are provided by oncology social workers and renowned cancer experts. The following are just a few of the support groups cancer patients can access through www.cancer-care.org.

- Breast Cancer Patient Support Group: This free, 15-week online support group is for people diagnosed with breast cancer who are currently receiving treatment. Access the group at https://www.cancercare.org/support_groups/43-breast_cancer_patient_support_group.
- African American Triple Negative Breast Cancer Patient Support Group: This group is for African Americans diagnosed with triple negative breast cancer who are currently receiving treatment. The group is free and continues for 15 weeks. Access the group at https://www.cancercare.org/support_groups/197-african_american_triple_negative_breast_cancer_patient_support_group.

- Metastatic Breast Cancer Patient Support Group: This free, 15-week support group is for people diagnosed with stage IV metastatic breast cancer who are currently receiving treatment. Access the group at https://www.cancercare.org/support_ groups/44-metastatic_breast_cancer_patient_support_group.

- Breast Cancer Post-Treatment Survivorship Support Group: Patients who have completed their breast cancer treatment within the past 18 months are eligible for this free, 15-week support group. Access the group at https://www.cancercare.org/support_groups/180-breast_cancer_post-treatment_survivorship_support_group.

Each CancerCare® online support group is available exclusively to residents of the United States, including people in Puerto Rico and U.S. territories. The Canadian Cancer Society has a database that cancer patients in Canada can use to find local support services in their area. That can be accessed via the CCS Community Services Locator at www.csl.cancer.ca.

Support groups can be invaluable resources for women as they navigate breast cancer treatment.

Common symptoms of male breast cancer

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
news@covnews.com

Breast cancer is one of the most common forms of cancer diagnosed among the female population. Though breast cancer may seem like a disease that's exclusive to women, breast cancer can affect men as well.

While they have a smaller concentration than women, men have breast tissue, which means it's possible for them to develop breast cancer. Male breast cancer is most common in older men, but it is important that men recognize that the disease can strike them at any age.

SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

Men with breast cancer experience symptoms that are similar to those experienced by women. Possible signs to be aware of include:

- skin dimpling or puckering
- a lump or swelling, which is typically (but not always) painless
- nipple retraction
- redness or scaling of the nipple or breast skin

- discharge from the nipple, which may be clear or blood-tinged

The American Cancer Society advises that sometimes breast cancer can spread to the lymph nodes under the arm or around the collar bone and cause a lump or swelling in these locations. The protrusion may be noticeable even before the original tumor in the breast is large enough to be felt.

Men should realize that enlargements or issues affecting both breasts (not on just one side) typically is not cancer. Enlargement or changes to both breasts in men can be caused by weight gain, medications or heavy alcohol consumption.

TYPES OF MALE BREAST CANCER

Various types of breast cancer can affect men, according to the Mayo Clinic:

- Ductal carcinoma: Cancer that begins in the milk ducts. Nearly all male breast cancer is ductal carcinoma.
- Lobular carcinoma:

Cancer that begins in the milk-producing glands. This type is rare in men because they have few lobules in their breast tissue.

Especially rare types of breast cancer that can occur in men include Paget's disease of the nipple and inflammatory breast cancer.

DIAGNOSIS

BreastCancer.org says that a small study of breast cancer in men found that the average time between first symptoms and diagnosis was about 19 months. This can be startling because early diagnosis can be vital to survival. Through the realization that breast cancer can happen to men and more education and awareness, men can feel more comfortable about discussing changes to breast tissue with their doctors.

Male breast cancer is a very real occurrence, albeit a rare one. It is important that men take any abnormalities in their chests seriously.

The Diviner (voiced by John Noble) is among the characters in the animated “Star Trek: Prodigy,” premiering Thursday on Paramount+.

‘Star Trek: Prodigy’ sends the franchise back into the animation universe

“Star Trek” has had its younger fans, but rarely has the direct appeal of “Star Trek: Prodigy” been made to them.

The enduring sci-fi franchise goes where it hasn’t often gone before with the debut of the animated series Thursday, Oct. 28, on Paramount+. Produced by the animation arms of Nickelodeon (which will run the program later) and CBS Studios, the saga brings back Kate Mulgrew to voice a hologram version of her “Star Trek: Voyager” character Capt. Kathryn Janeway. However, the show centers around her new trainees, six young aliens who learn about working together – and the workings of Starfleet – while traveling aboard an abandoned ship.

“Janeway defined an era for me and, as it turns out, the rest of my life,” Mulgrew reflects. “To play a hologram is probably the most clever way to introduce this character to children. To introduce ‘Hologram Janeway’ to 10-year-olds, 15-year-olds is an exciting approach, and very smart. From there, of course, the sky is the limit ... but I am delighted to be back playing her. I love her. When a character defines a part of your life, you are in turn deeply grateful, which I am. And she has never left me.”

“Star Trek: Prodigy” executive producer Alex Kurtzman has been a major keeper of the flame, having co-created and overseen the Paramount+ series “Star Trek:

Discovery” and “Star Trek: Picard,” and also having a hand in the streaming service’s animated but more-adult “Star Trek: Lower Decks.” He maintains “Star Trek” has “always been a family show, the show that parents watched with their children – and those children become parents, and they pass it on to their children. I think that legacy is important.”

“Star Trek” also yielded a 1973-74 Saturday-morning NBC cartoon show (with the voices of the original series’ cast), but Kurtzman credits sibling “Star Trek: Prodigy” creators Dan and Kevin Hageman with bringing “such a wonderful objectivity, just based on their own experience doing kids’ shows (‘Trollhunters,’ etc.), about an area in ‘Star Trek’ that felt like a really wonderful place to look at. It was great. And obviously, having Kate back to play Janeway is everything, because that blessing allowed us to tell this story in a way that I think we otherwise would not have been able to tell.”

With a second season already ordered, “Star Trek: Prodigy” also features in its voice cast Brett Gray, Jason Mantzoukas, Ella Purnell and – as the tyrannical Diviner and his enforcer Drednok – John Noble (“Fringe”) and Jimmi Simpson (“Westworld”). “The ‘Star Trek’ world has been pervasive for a lot of my life, and I’m 73,” Noble notes. “I’m really thrilled to do (this).”

How 'The Lost Kitchen' chef Erin French learned to roll with the COVID-19 blows

Viewers of Season 1 of "The Lost Kitchen" on discovery+ got to bear witness to an entrepreneur's mind in action, as restaurateur Erin French brainstormed ways to keep her Freedom, Maine, eatery The Lost Kitchen afloat amid the lockdown conditions of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Among her solutions was to create an online farmers' market, where she could peddle the meats, seafood, cheeses, produce and other locally sourced ingredients that would normally go into her menu items to retail customers, a venture that turned out to be quite successful.

Needless to say her vendors, who were also feeling the financial stresses of quarantine, loved her for it. But it also underscored to her an important point about the industry she's in: That it's not just a group of buyers and sellers but a financial ecosystem, where if one piece falters, the community feels it.

"To be able to support people and small makers in a place you call home, I think there's no greater way (than) to eat the food that's grown in the place you live ...," French reasons. "I had this black box of the most amazing farmers who were making the most food and it was like my Rolodex of the best makers around. And I got to share that through COVID with my customers and saying, 'I'm going to get this food straight to you because I can't cook it for you right now.' And that was a really nice piece of joy to be able to share all of those secret ingredients and to introduce people to those farmers in this place because that's how you thrive in the place you call home."

"The Lost Kitchen" returns for its second season Friday, Oct. 29, continuing to follow the day-to-day machinations of French and her staff at the rural Maine eatery about 30 miles northeast of Augusta, where she has a long waiting list of diners from around the country and world waiting to feast on dishes created from the best of locally sourced ingredients.

"If I had to tell you (one of the) things that made this place successful, it would be sourcing local food," she says. "I mean, part of it is that I believe that vegetables feel jet lag and the closer (to harvest) you get them, the fresher they're going to taste. And even as a cook, it's shaped me because I never make a grocery list and go shopping. I look at what there is available and then it's my job to figure out what to do with it."

Michael Keaton

OF 'DOPESICK' ON HULU

You've been doing a lot of true-story projects in film and television lately. Is there something especially fulfilling about portraying these relatively recent true stories and these characters who feel the moral obligation to do the right thing?

Well, sure. I mean, I guess personally there is but ego-wise, to be honest, I guess there is. I haven't thought of it like that. But it's satisfying because I'm in a fortunate position where what I do for a living affords me an opportunity to possibly change things or affect people in some way. And if you're talking about "Spotlight" or "Worth" or

"9/11" or this or some other things that I've done, yeah, I'm fortunate in that regard, I think. I look at it as just a perk to what I've chosen to do for a living. I'm not necessarily seeking these things out, but they certainly get my attention.

You played an addict in "Clean and Sober" back in 1988. How do you see this in terms of portraying addiction now? What are the changes over the years that you've seen as far as being able to just tell stories more freely about the actual depths of addiction and what it does to people?

Well ... addiction's been around since forever, opium addicts and heroin addicts ... and alcoholism and all that. And so ... the awareness is much greater and what we know about it. And also the ... stigma has changed about addiction in general. And I kind of thought, well, I played that one time and I did something on that subject. And then this came up. So, sometimes I think, well, do I really want to read this and anything, because I tend to not want to read just anything? Do I really want to? But this is societal and has a much larger canvas or bigger story to tell, I think. And what people know, the information that's out there now is greater.

tonight's PICKS

Elisha "EJ" Williams

Moonshiners

8 p.m. on DISC

Fan favorite characters including Steven Ray Tickle, Tim Smith, Josh Owens, Mark Ramsey and Eric "Digger" Manes return for Season 11 as the backwoods economy that drives their old-school way of life resumes thriving. Unfortunately, law enforcement officials likewise are back on their game. As the series resumes, Mark and Digger get raided by cops, forcing them to flee across state lines. Meanwhile, Tickle and the Law cousins assemble a new operation, as Josh heads their way with a truckload of fruit.

The Wonder Years

8:30 p.m. on WSB

When Coach Long and Bill (Allen Maldonado, Dulé Hill) take the boys camping as part of their newly formed scouting troop, the two men's starkly different approaches to the wild outdoors make for an eye-opening experience for Dean (Elisha "EJ" Williams), who realizes there are some things his infallible dad doesn't do well in the new episode "Be Prepared." As a thunderstorm threatens the group's trek through some spooky woods, however, Bill leans into the moment in an effective way.

Houses With History

9 p.m. on HGTV

In the new episode "The One With the Double Staircase," Mike, Rich and Jenn prepare for a big job as they consider purchasing two homes in dramatically different states of disrepair. One is a 1696 home that is literally leaning, while the other is an 1800 home with a solid exterior that covers up the first stage of an abandoned demolition.

Dracula

9:45 p.m. on TCM

Screen history certainly has not lacked for its share of Draculas, but the tastiest arguably remains Bela Lugosi, who plays the Transylvanian count in this 1931 classic.

tonight's PICKS

Jared Padalecki
Walker
8 p.m. on WUPA
Realizing his life is at risk, Walker (Jared Padalecki) confronts Captain James (Coby Bell), who confesses to Walker the real reason Micki (Lindsey Morgan) went undercover, in the Season 2 premiere, “They Started It.” Meanwhile, the Davidson family returns home, setting Walker family matriarch Abeline (Molly Hagan) on edge because of a dark history that stretches between the two clans. Elsewhere, Trey (Jeff Pierre) comes perilously close to blowing Micki’s cover.

Million Dollar Listing Los Angeles
8 p.m. on BRAVO
Tracy Tutor swaps her broker hat for a buyer hat when she starts searching for a home in Beverly Hills and is shocked when she realizes Josh Flagg is listing what looks a lot like her dream house in the new episode “Have a Cookie and Relax.” Meanwhile, Fredrik Eklund pushes to set a record price in Upper Bel Air.

Zombieland: Double Tap
8 p.m. on FX
Lightning struck twice with this 2019 sequel to the 2009 apocalyptic comedy hit “Zombieland,” with Woody Harrelson, Jesse Eisenberg, Emma Stone and Abigail Breslin all reprising their roles from that film. Set 10 years after the events in the original, the story finds their respective characters — Tallahassee, Columbus, Wichita and Little Rock — living together in the now-abandoned White House. Cast newcomers Rosario Dawson, Zoey Deutch, Avan Jogia, Luke Wilson and Thomas Middleditch also are featured.

B Positive
9:30 p.m. on WGCL
On Gina’s (Annaleigh Ashford) first day as the retirement home’s new owner, she asks Drew (Thomas Middleditch) to help her handle a short-tempered resident with a sick wife in the new episode “Bagels, Billiards and a Magic Show.” Linda Lavin also stars.

Ashleigh Murray and Luke James

Goosebumps

6 p.m. on FX

While there have been other projects based on R.L. Stine’s popular book series of thrillers for young readers, this fanciful tale makes Stine himself a character, as played by Jack Black. He becomes involved in the effort to contain monstrous characters he created when they’re accidentally released into the world by a town new-comer (Dylan Minnette) who has befriended Stine’s daughter (Odeya Rush). The script is by Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski, who also wrote the imaginative “Big Eyes.”

Christmas in Harmony

8 p.m. on HALL

After losing her record company job in a corporate merger, Harmony Matthews (Ashleigh Murray) retreats to her hometown to review her options in this 2021 holiday romance. Her mother (Loretta Devine) is sympathetic, but also thrilled that Harmony is back home in time to help her with their church’s annual Holiday Hallelujah Concert. When plans to showcase one of Harmony’s celebrity clients go south, Harmony auditions for the choral lead herself, directed by her old flame (Luke James) from high school, with whom she ended things badly. Michelle Williams stars.

Eli Roth’s History of Horror

10 p.m. on AMC

He’s probably best known for helming the perennial yuletide favorite “A Christmas Story,” but earlier in his career, filmmaker Bob Clark “went there” and smashed some taboos with his 1974 slasher flick “Black Christ-mas,” in which sorority girls are stalked by a maniac during the holiday season. In the new episode “Holiday Horror,” host Eli Roth examines why horror films set against a happy holiday backdrop have become popular. Examples include “Krampus,” “Silent Night, Deadly Night” and “My Bloody Valentine.” Guests include Jamie Lee Curtis and writer Bryan Fuller.

What's Available NOW On

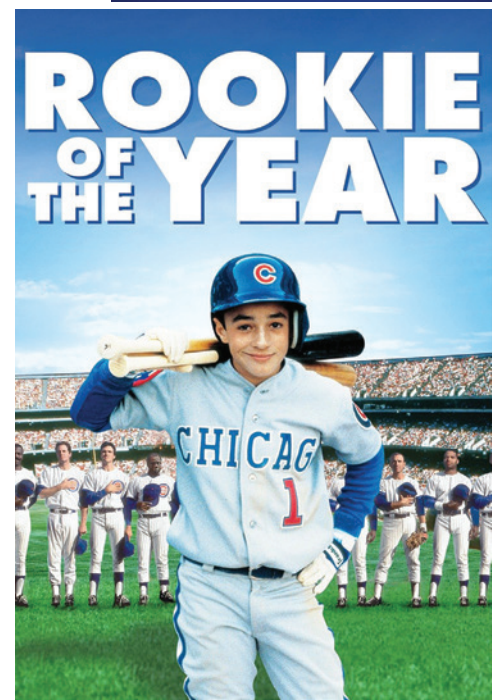

“Bob Ballard: An Explorer’s Life” (Oct. 29)
The oceanographer credited with the discoveries of numerous notorious shipwrecks including the Titanic, the Bismarck and the USS Yorktown reveals the inside stories behind his most exciting finds, while sharing the personal triumphs, challenges and tragedies that led him to them in this 2020 documentary from National Geographic

“McFarland, USA” (Oct. 29)
Kevin Costner heads the cast of this 2015 drama as a high school football coach who lost his last job because he was too rough on his entitled charges. He finds his calling when he lands at a rural California school and turns seven disappointing students into one of the best cross-country track teams in the country. Maria Bello and Morgan Saylor also star.

“Impact With Gal Gadot” (Available now)
The “Wonder Woman” star hosts this short-form documentary series from National Geographic that spotlights six women working to improve their communities around the world. Among the women featured are a 20-year-old Detroit figure-skating coach who trains young girls of color and helps empower them on and off the ice, and a woman who uses “surf therapy” to help others recover from loss.

“Rookie of the Year” (Available now)
A 12-year-old boy (Thomas Ian Nicholas) becomes a major-league sensation when an accident renders him a phenomenal pitching arm. Naturally, he helps hurl baseball’s hapless Chicago Cubs into the playoffs. Gary Busey, Dan Hedaya and Daniel Stern also star in this 1993 comedy that was Stern’s rookie effort as a director.

Torn From Her Arms

8 p.m. on LIFE
Based on a harrowing true story that played out against the backdrop of the crisis at the U.S.-Mexican border, this taut 2021 docudrama stars Judy Reyes (“Scrubs”) as Thelma Garcia, a Texas immigration lawyer fighting desperately to reunite loved ones separated in the midst of politically-motivated chaos. Fátima Molina plays Cindy Madrid, who fled violence in El Salvador with her six-year-old daughter, only to be forced apart by U.S. immigration officers. Gloria Reuben stars as the journalist who broke the story.

In the Heights

8 p.m. on HBO
It underperformed at the box office, but filmmaker Jon M. Chu’s 2021 feature film adaptation of the Tony Award-winning Broadway musical co-created by Lin-Manuel Miranda was one of the most critically acclaimed movies of its release year. An explosion of infectious melodies and high-energy performances, the film follows the daily life of Usnavi (Anthony Ramos), a bodega owner in New York’s predominantly Dominican neighborhood of Washington Heights. The huge cast also includes Jimmy Smits, Olga Merediz, Stephanie Beatriz, Daphne Rubin-Vega and Melissa Barrera. Watch for Miranda’s cameo as a street vendor.

tonight's PICKS

Nathan Fillion and Melissa O'Neil

The Witches

8 p.m. on TBS

British director Nicolas Roeg's 1990 film adaptation of a Roald Dahl book — about a boy and his grandmother who stumble upon a convention of child-eating witches — has drawn a cult following in the years since its release, but this somewhat radically revised 2020 remake from Robert Zemeckis saw its theatrical release hexed by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Halloween Wars

9 p.m. on FOOD

"Dueling Monsters," the spine-tingling Season 11 finale, finds the last two teams facing off in a deciding challenge that tasks them with crafting cakes that vividly show what happens when two formidable monsters engage in a fight to the finish. Host Zak Bagans shares his paranormal expertise, then judges Eddie Jackson, Shinmin Li and Aarti Sequeira crown the winners of the $25,000 prize.

Buried

9 p.m. on SHOW

This four-part docuseries about repressed memories and the thorny implications this notion raises reaches its conclusion as women across the country begin to recall their own repressed memories of forgotten trauma. Meanwhile Eileen Franklin becomes convinced her father was involved in other murders. Subsequently, the district attorney receives a surprising phone call as detectives investigate a new lead.

The Rookie

10 p.m. on WSB

A deadly new designer drug hits the streets of Los Angeles, turning users into "zombies," in the new episode "A.C.H." As the drug-fueled misbehavior spreads, Office Nolan (Nathan Fillion) and his team find themselves in the middle of a Halloween they are not likely to forget. Back on the homefront, Lucy (Melissa O'Neil) begins to suspect that her apartment building might actually be haunted. Pete Davidson, Enver Gjokaj and Dylan Conrique guest star; Alyssa Diaz and Eric Winter also star.

tonight's PICKS

Sean Murray

NCIS

9 p.m. on WGCL

McGee (Sean Murray) and the rest of the NCIS team investigate the death of a widely beloved Navy commander whose legacy includes training some of the top athletes in the United States in the new episode "False Start." Joshua Brockington, Randy J. Goodwin and Kelly Stables guest star, and David McCallum appears in his recurring role as Dr. "Ducky" Mallard; Wilmer Valderrama, Brian Dietzen and Diana Reasonover also star.

Wakefield

9 p.m. on SHOW

Confusion and pressure mount for Nik (Rudi Dharmalingam) as he finds himself under investigation for the accidental injury of a patient in the new "Episode 3." On top of that, Renuka (Monica Kumar), his soon-to-be-married sister, asks him to find a precious family heirloom for her nuptials. Elsewhere, Linda (Mandy McElhinney), the acting manager of the nursing unit, struggles to avoid criminal charges for her previous road rage incident.

NCIS: Hawai'i

10 p.m. on WGCL

After a globe-trotting social media star is kidnapped, the subsequent search by Tennant (Vanessa Lachey) and her team reveals that the missing woman is not the person her followers — or even her husband — believe her to be in the new episode "The Tourist." Meanwhile, tension grows between the other team members and Whistler (Tori Anderson), who is pursuing her own agenda. Julie White, Chloe Lanier and Titus Makin guest star; Alex Tarrant, Noah Mills and Yasmine Al-Bustami also star.

POV

10 p.m. on WGTV

Making its broadcast debut after an acclaimed run at international film festivals, the documentary "North By Current" from filmmaker and artist Angelo Madsen Minax is a deeply personal work that traces the contours of his life s a trans man, with his story juxtaposed against that of his parents' Michigan childhoods.

tonight's PICKS

Zeeko Zaki and Missy Peregrym

FBI

8 p.m. on WGCL

After a suburban woman is kidnapped from her own home, Maggie (Missy Peregrym) and her FBI teammates investigate the multiple trysts that apparently were taking place on both sides of the victim's seemingly idyllic marriage in the new episode "Charlotte's Web." Elsewhere, OA (Zeeko Zaki) feels pressured by Mona (recurring guest star Yasmine Aker) to make some changes in the career path he has chosen at the Bureau. David T. Patterson and Anni Krueger guest star; Jeremy Sisto, John Boyd and Alana De La Garza also star.

DC's Stargirl

8 p.m. on WUPA

Courtney, Pat (Brec Bassinger, Luke Wilson) and the JSA unite their forces to take down Eclipso (Nick Tarabay) once and for all as the villain unleashes the final part of his master plan in "Summer School: Chapter Thirteen," the Season 2 finale. Cameron Gellman, Yvette Monreal, Anjelika Washington, Amy Smart, Trae Romano and Hunter Sansone also star. Season 3 already has been greenlit by the network.

My Big Fat Fabulous Life

9 p.m. on TLC

Over the concerned protests of friends and family, the new episode "Bon Voyage, Whitney" finds Whitney with a one-way ticket to Paris. Having decided to put a higher priority on love than business, she's finally ready to meet her French man. Understandably, she frets that this decision may cause friction between her and Jessica. As her departure date nears, she starts to wonder whether her loved ones support her or expect the worst.

FBI: Most Wanted

10 p.m. on WGCL

In the aftermath of a deadly fire that sweeps through a busy arcade, Jess (Julian McMahon) and his team discovers that this devastating blaze was just the first step in a diabolically intricate revenge scheme against one of the victims in the new episode "Unhinged."

The game has ended for Katie Nolan at ESPN

Q: I was sorry to see that Katie Nolan has left ESPN. Why did she? – Brett Kahn, via email

A: A big “get” when that sports network hired her away from Fox Sports in 2017 as a fresh voice in coverage of all things athletic, Nolan suggested from her recent social-media posts that her exit from ESPN (where she largely was consigned to the digital world) may have been in the works for a while. Her show “Always Late With Katie Nolan” was canceled last year, and though she continued to do the podcast “Sports? With Katie Nolan,” co-host a SnapChat version of “SportsCenter” and appear on other programs, she indicated that one major problem spot for her had been the network’s dismissal last year of her producer and “Sports?” co-host, Ashley Braband.

With the unique place she made for herself – even leading to her being hired for commercial endorsements, as with the ads she did for an airline at one time – we suspect Nolan will be back, somewhere. She hinted that she might stay in the podcast space, but she noted that first, she might take “a vacation.”

celebrity quotes

“I did read it, and until you’re kind of not busy doing things in your life in a busy world, you don’t really grasp it. I think in the last year-and-a-half, it was easier to grasp, because we’re all sitting still.” – Heather Locklear, seen recently in “Don’t Sweat the Small Stuff: The Kristine Carlson Story” on Lifetime, on the book that inspired the movie

“We still share that sense of, ‘It’s work, and you do the best that you can do,’ but watching him as my dad when I was growing up, all the stuff he did was pretty amazing. He’s a lot of fun to sit and have a glass of wine with, that’s for sure.” – David Boreanaz of “SEAL Team” on CBS, on his father, a now-retired broadcaster of the Philadelphia and Buffalo markets
