COVINGTON, Ga. — Police say a man being held in the Newton County jail on charges related to a Sept. 19 stabbing incident in Covington is also a fugitive that Mexican authorities are seeking on a murder charge.

Emanuel Juanez, whom jail records say is 29 years old and resides on Collins Street, is wanted for a murder in the city of Colonia Gonzalez Ortega in Zacatecas state in central Mexico, said spokesman Capt. Ken Malcom of the Covington Police Department.

The suspect fled from Mexico to Covington because he had family here, Malcom said.

He said detectives with the Covington Police received information recently from federal Immigration Customs and Enforcement (ICE) officials about the suspect's status.

Juanez was arrested after allegedly being involved in a fight Sept. 19 at a residence on Settlers Grove Road in Covington.

Officers responded to a report of an assault with a knife and found a man in the living room of the residence with tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — Covington Police reported drive-by shootings and other violent acts at four separate locations in the city over the past weekend that shook up residents and left a hospital security guard injured.

A 26-year-old man was facing assault charges after a security guard reportedly broke his leg trying to subdue the suspect after he became confrontational with hospital staff at Piedmont Newton Hospital early Monday.

The man, identified as Master Perry, was charged with Aggravated Battery and Possession of Marijuana of less than 1 ounce following the incident which occurred Monday at about 1 a.m. at the hospital in Covington.

A report stated that hospital officials told the officer Perry came into the hospital Sunday about 11 p.m. and asked for blood to be taken for testing because "he wasn't feeling right."

After the suspect asked for more blood to be taken for testing, he "became increasingly agitated" and refused to go with a nurse

Newton County Schools

Eastside student to serve on state superintendent advisory council

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
news@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — Eastside sophomore Abigail Morgan will be among 66 high school students in Georgia selected to serve on the state schools superintendent's 2021-2022 Student Advisory Council.

Throughout the year, the 66 student-member council will meet with Georgia Superintendent of Schools Richard Woods to discuss the impact of state policies in the classroom, a news release stated.

Members of the council were selected from a pool of more than 1,000 applicants from grades 10 through 12.

Morgan said she hoped to get her concerns about lack of internet coverage for all students heard at the state level and hopefully effect a change.

"We live in a 90-family neighborhood near Mansfield but we don't have any internet access so my parents have to pay so much money for us to have not very good internet," Morgan said.

"I was hoping by doing this I could get that to people who make a difference and hopefully put in an infrastructure to we can have internet like everyone else."

Morgan said she was "looking forward to meeting new people as well as being able to get my voice heard."

"It's a big honor and I didn't really expect it. I didn't realize how many people had applied for it. With only 66 out of 1,000 chosen, it's a much bigger deal than I thought it was," she said.

Woods said, "Year after year, my Student Advisory Council is an invaluable resource as I make decisions that impact students across the state.

"Getting to know these students and seeking their feedback and perspectives allows all of us at the Georgia Department of Education to make the best possible policy choices."

Newton County Board of Commissioners

Commission extends ban on new requests for residential construction

By TOM SPIGOLON
tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — County commissioners have voted to extend a ban on new residential rezoning requests and subdivision plans until mid-January while they make changes to what officials say are outdated development rules.

The county Board of Commissioners voted 4-1 to extend the moratorium to Jan. 18, 2022.

Development Services Director Judy Johnson told commissioners Sept. 21 the moratorium would “just prohibit new subdivisions being planned” and new requests for rezoning property for residential development.

Those wanting to purchase building permits for new residential construction can do so if the lot was already approved before the moratorium began in January of this year, she said.

“This does not affect current buildable lots,” Johnson said. “People can still purchase building permits if the lot is already created.”

It also does not affect plans or permits for new commercial or industrial development, she said.

Johnson has said the moratorium was needed for officials to make badly needed development ordinance changes in the wake of heavy demand for new residential construction in unincorporated Newton County.

She said some developers have taken advantage of rules that allow them to build houses on relatively small lots in some areas of a multi-use subdivision while not properly developing areas reserved for recreation in other parts of the same subdivision.

Commissioners also are considering Johnson's Sept. 14 recommendation of a new moratorium on acceptance of new residential building lots of less than two acres each.

Johnson said the planning staff was recommending the action so commissioners could make more sweeping changes to residential development standards before submitting a state-mandated Comprehensive Land Use Plan by 2023.

County planning officials have asked commissioners to consider the changes because of outdated regulations that allow no connectivity between adjacent neighborhoods.

She said lack of connecting roads was not a problem when west Newton County was not as densely populated in the early 1990s.

However, rapid population growth has combined with lack of connecting roads to create heavy traffic volumes on some main roads which generally only contain two lanes, Johnson said.

The land use plan is part of a required overall comprehensive plan that also must include such information as community goals, broadband availability and planned capital improvements.

State law requires local governments statewide to submit the document every five years to maintain qualified local government certification and remain eligible for some state funding and grants.

Also Tuesday, the board approved a variety of changes to the county's development ordinance.

Among the changes were some to effectively stop construction of truck stops in the three overlay zoning districts in unincorporated Newton County.

The Almon, Salem and Brick Store overlay districts add extra requirements for such items as building materials and setbacks from property lines on top of the base zoning requirements for residential, commercial and industrial zones.

Johnson said the change would not affect construction of “travel centers” such as Buc-ee's or the recently approved JP Center.

Such centers are designed for interstate highway travelers and families and do not have fueling facilities or overnight parking for commercial tractor-trailer drivers, Johnson said.

Commissioners voted for the change after recently approving a negotiated settlement of a lawsuit a developer filed after being denied a rezoning for a truck stop at I-20 and Georgia Hwy. 11 in east Newton.

A day in the life of James Madison

It was at a reception on a riverside screened-in patio somewhere in South Georgia, a convivial, countrified place that was be-decked with old pressed-metal advertising signs. Right next to a Coke-bottle-shaped thermometer (in mint condition), I spied one of those old-timey, rusty-on-purpose-nail-up-on-the-wall sayings that read:

What Part Of “SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED” Do You Not Understand?

It looked to be the kind of souvenir you’d find at a roadside fireworks store.

I had been gazing at that wall-mounted objet d’art for a bit too long. My host sidled up to me and inquired, “So, what do you think of that?” He was asking it in a slightly baiting yet cheerful way.

Now, remember, he asked for my opinion.

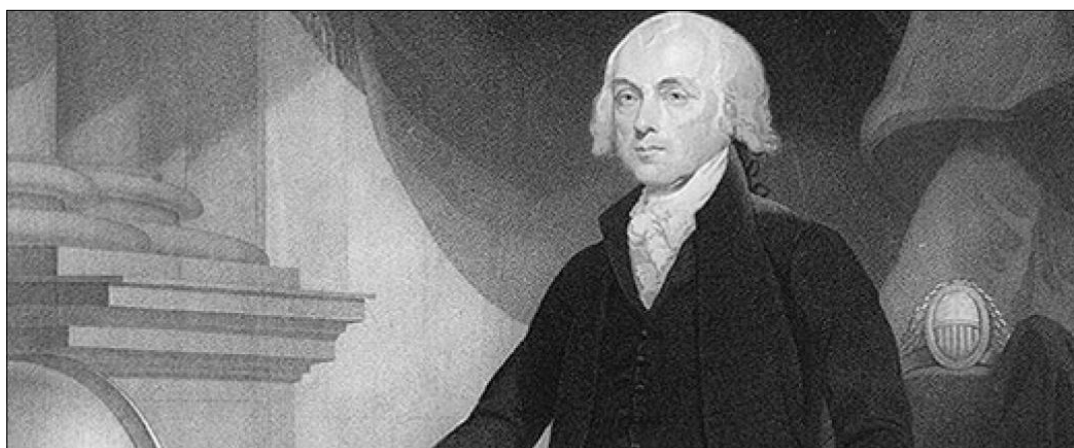

I said, “Well, that’s the last four words of a twenty-seven-word sentence.” (Uh-huh, nerdy that I know that.) He looked puzzled. I continued, “The whole thing is just one sentence. A confusing one, at that. That’s one of the reasons it gets debated so much. But if you hack off the first twenty-three words, you end up with a pretty compelling bumper sticker argument.” I could tell I was messing with my host’s patriotic dogma.

He said, “I just want my God-given right to my guns.” Then he made an assumption. “You don’t own a gun, do you?”

I told him that nobody is suggesting that he give up his guns. Then, I answered his question by telling him that my only firearm is a .410 shotgun that I use during mistletoe season. (All my hunting is vegetarian and ornamental.) My last rifle was a .22-long semi-automatic that I traded with my brother-in-law for a 1940s galvanized steel Coca-Cola ice chest – red with embossed white lettering, complete with a bottle opener on the end. I said, “It’s a cooler that would fit handsomely on this very patio.” I was attempting to change the subject; mayhap I could find détente through our shared appreciation of barbecue-joint decor and The Pause that Refreshes.®

As I lightly debated with my host – again, at his continued invitation – I had the maturity to avoid the question: “What part of ‘a well regulated militia’ do you not understand?” (Georgia’s current governor, in his 2018 political TV ads, took a literal chainsaw to regulations.) Indeed, it seems that the first four words of the Second Amendment can conflict with the last four.

• • •

James Madison, who in his own lifetime was known as the “Father of the Constitution,” is credited with composing the Bill of Rights. He was a prolific political intellect and statesman who wrote and wrote and wrote. That’s why it is curious that the Second Amendment is so short, clipped, and grammatically confusing, with a hazy if not completely unclear antecedent. (C’mon, English teachers; chime in.)

Maybe on the day he wrote it, James Madison got in a hurry because he was hungry and having a sugar crash; he was often distracted by the aroma of his wife Dollie’s baking. (Mrs. Madison, of course, went on to become a successful merchant of those delicious little pre-packaged cakes.) Maybe Mr. Madison, who was famously bashful, had been visited that day by his more bothersome colleagues, Anti-Federalists George Mason and Patrick Henry, who had arrived to pester and look over Madison’s shoulder as he worked. Both men had refused to sign the Constitution of the United States because of its lack of freedoms granted to individuals over the power of the Federal Government. Indeed, much of what was included in the Bill of Rights came from George Mason’s own drafting of the Virginia Constitution. Mr. Henry was in concurrence with Mr. Mason, but the hot-headed gentleman was particularly loud in the home of the shy Mr. Madison. It is fair to say that Patrick Henry did not possess what we would now call an “indoor voice.”

The Republic, of course, was still in the throes of just being born and the Revolutionary War was fresh in the memory of its citizens. Local militias had contributed to fighting the British, and there were still Tories about, loyal to the British Crown.

It is important to note that early on, James Madison was against a standing army in times of peace.

• • •

This brings my thinking to our current age. I would wager that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Mark Milley, is familiar with the writings of this forward-thinking Founding Father. The General might have been thinking of James Madison as he found himself taken down a garden path – as it were – crossing Lafayette Square on the way to St. John’s Church with the President on June 1, 2020.

Gen. Milley might have been thinking of Madison’s words when he made that phone call to China on Jan. 8, 2021, words that James Madison said at the Federal Convention in Philadelphia in 1787:

“A standing military force, with an overgrown Executive will not long be safe companions to liberty. The means of defense against foreign danger, have been always the instruments of tyranny at home.”
And abroad.

Ignore the calls from numbers you don’t recognize

Since our last visit, I have been busier than usual. Life’s parade includes events of joy, like a son’s wedding (exhilarating, but tiring). Life also throws you a curveball, such as the funeral for a beloved brother-in-law (COVID-19 strikes again). Mix in a full-time job, a couple of side gigs, and a rainy September encouraging lush green grass to grow, and I’m that dog chasing his tail, non-stop.

In the midst of it all, I needed a long nap. I left my cellphone in another room, safely out of earshot. My aching bones were quietly rejuvenating, and I was deep into dream land. Then it happened. The obnoxious ringing sound of my landline phone.

Yes, I have yet to cut the cord on the old-timey telephone. My wife and I use our reliable cellphones 99% of the time. We have kept our landline phone for two reasons: first, because it is included in our “bundle” of cable TV and internet service; and second, because our elderly relatives had memorized that phone number, and they preferred to contact us on a “real telephone.”

Those loved ones have since passed on, yet ye olde landline phone still gathers dust on a corner table, like a long-neglected museum exhibit. Anyone under 25 would be flummoxed by the device, searching in vain for the camera button. Most of the time, it sits untouched, a relic of another era.

When we switched cable/telephone providers a few years ago, a new phone number was an unexpected benefit. We shared it only with our sons and a couple of close friends. We soon noticed that annoying robocalls had suddenly disappeared. Our new phone number had not yet reached the scammers, and the landline phone sat silently. But eventually, the crooks found us, and during my aforementioned nap, there was an unwelcome interruption.

I know what you’re saying: “Ignore those calls, and they will go away!” That statement is accurate, and I have often given that advice myself. However, in the midst of a deep sleep, I rushed to answer the phone.

It was some nice lady with “great news” about a free hotel stay. Why me? Why now? Didn’t I just read a few days ago, that robocalls had been eradicated?

I sure did, and you may have too. Most states began enforcing “Anti-Robocall Principles” in 2019. Since then, they say 52 billion spam calls have been blocked. That is impressive, but they have a few billion left to go. And it’s the next part of the report that has me scratching my head.

So far this year, almost 400,000 Americans have filed telemarketer complaints, reporting a total of $356 million in losses. “These numbers underscore the need to continue to fight back against the scourge of robocalls,” according to Michigan Attorney General Dana Nessel.

In that one sentence, we have learned why scammers are still in business: we send them our money. On “Green Acres,” the lovable con man Mr. Haney would put a boat motor in a barrel and call it a washing machine, and sell it to a gullible lawyer-turned-farmer.

Fifty years later, the Mr. Haney’s are far more sophisticated, and even more successful. No matter how many times the Better Business Bureau warns us about holding our Social Security numbers close to our vest, and our credit card numbers closer, many of us hand over the contents of our wallet to a long distance bandit.

The con artists are taking advantage of today’s technology. The calls are inexpensive, and easily programmed. They can contact millions of consumers daily. If only a handful of folks take the bait, the thieves cash in.

A typical opening line is, “Don’t hang up! Your chronic back pain could be a thing of the past!” My first impulse is to yell back, “Nope, I’ve got pain all right, but it’s a few inches below my back, and you’re causing it!”

While that rant should give me immediate relief, it actually causes more grief. The robocallers WANT me to respond. Whether I “press one to speak to a representative,” or “press two to be removed from our list,” I have let them know my phone is being answered by a real person. That means the next time I’m watching the big game, my phone will likely ring again.

Blocking the numbers once seemed like a sure cure, but that doesn’t seem to help. There’s no surefire way to stop the calls, but the less human contact you have with these “bots,” the better. If you’re afraid you may be missing an important call, consider this. People who really know you, or really need you, will leave a message. Otherwise, ignore the calls from numbers you don’t recognize. Tell your family, friends, and neighbors: Don’t answer. Don’t feed the beast.

Fun by the Numbers

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row,

7	3		1	6
	6					9
5					9
4		6						1
			4			5		2
	1		3		8
1	9	4				6	3

Level: Intermediate

column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

PROGRAM RECORD STOLEN

Eastside's Ray now all-time steals leader after 75th stolen base

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
phubbard@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — When Eastside went into its region game against Clarke Central on Friday, there was one particular Lady Eagle on the cusp of making history. Natalie Ray found herself on first base following a single in the bottom of the second inning. A few pitches later, Ray jetted and stole second base. Ray's stolen base against Clarke Central was her 75th career steal, which is now a program record at Eastside.

Just a day prior in Eastside's doubleheader at Jackson County, Ray tied the program record for most stolen bases. So, Ray knew she only needed one to break the record. However, once she was deemed safe at second base, Ray didn't get up thinking about the record at all. "That wasn't on my mind at the time that I broke the record," Ray said. "Then, when they announced it, I was like 'oh...yeah.'" Nevertheless, Ray continuously worked toward accomplishing this goal once she learned it was in sight going into her senior campaign. She's even caught the attention of her head coach.

Heather Wood highlighted the importance of Ray's contributions to the softball program and its overall success. See STOLEN, A7

Lady Panthers avenge early season loss

By PHILLIP B. HUBBARD
phubbard@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — In a match that went the distance, Peachtree Academy won an intense contest against Lanier Christian Academy. Thursday's matchup went down to the wire with the two teams splitting the first four sets. As a result, it became a contest of who was going to record 15 points first to decide the winner. With LCA winning the fourth set, it seemed to come into the final set with all of the momentum. That was evident when it jumped out to a 9-4 lead in the fifth set. However, Lady Panthers head coach Bobby Mitchell called a timeout that motivated Peachtree Academy to not go down without swinging.

Phillip B. Hubbard | The Covington News

Peachtree Academy won an intense contest against Lanier Christian Academy on Thursday to avenge an early season loss.

But it did more than that. One-by-one, the Lady Panthers scored points to slowly eat into the deficit they were facing.

All of a sudden, then, they found themselves tied 12-12 with See AVENGE, A7

Flip out for best results

Studies show turning grilled meats more than once a good idea

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
news@covnews.com

Many people are familiar with the conventional grilling wisdom that, when cooking meats, it’s best to “only flip once.” This has led backyard grillers to resist the urge to flip their foods in the name of flavor. But that conventional wisdom may not actually be that wise.

According to J. Kenji Lopez-Alt, a Serious Eats blogger who has taken it upon himself to test the theory on both burgers and steaks, flipping the meat multiple times produced food that was more evenly cooked (40% less overcooked meat in a burger flipped every 15 seconds versus one flipped once). The meat browned just as well, and the food cooked in about two-thirds of the time.

Serious Eats, which is dedicated to teaching proper food techniques and recipes to food enthusiasts, indicates that some people claim that by flipping a steak or other grilled meats repeatedly, one ends up reducing the amount of browning that occurs, thus reducing flavor. This can be true in some instances, but it’s normally due to moisture on thin, wet steaks rather than constant flipping. To avoid the scenario, choose thicker cuts (at least an inch thick), and be sure the surface of the meat has been dried sufficiently. You can dry steaks by wrapping them in paper towels and giving them a few hard presses; salting them 40 minutes in advance of cooking; or salting and letting them air-dry overnight in the refrigerator.

Food scientist Harold McGee, author of “On Food and Cooking: The Science and Lore of the Kitchen,” says that flipping a steak as often as every 30 seconds can result in a cooking time about 30% faster than flipping once. The theory is that with repeated flips, each surface of the meat is exposed to heat relatively evenly, with very little time for it to cool down as it faces upwards. The faster the flip, the closer one comes to imitating a cooking device that would sear the meat from both sides simultaneously.

For those grillers who are concerned about hash marks on their steaks, burgers and more, careful flipping in the same direction can help retain those marks. However, most foodies would say that evenly cooked, moist food is much more important than a cut of meat that looks pretty.

Those who flip their grilled foods often can rest assured that they are probably doing little damage to the taste of the meat and may actually be improving cooking times and doneness.

Enjoy tasty shooters with lemon-infused twist

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Tart and tangy, lemon-based flavors are hard to pass up. Citrus can help cleanse the palate between courses, but it also can be a refreshing component in beverages.

Anyone who has enjoyed a tall glass of lemonade on a warm day understands how thirst-quenching it can be. Limoncello is a lemon liqueur mainly produced in Southern Italy, particularly in the region around the Gulf of Naples. Limoncello is made from the zest of lemons, which is then steeped in alcohol, like vodka. The lemon-infused liqueur also is mixed with a sugar

Dazzle overnight guests at the breakfast table

news@covnews.com

Welcoming guests for overnight stays is a great way to make loved ones feel welcome. Overnight guests also get time to reconnect with their hosts, making such situations a win-win for all involved.

When hosting overnight guests, hosts can start their mornings off on the right foot by whipping up a special breakfast. Relaxing at the breakfast table over a homecooked meal can be a welcome departure from the sometimes hectic nature of weekday mornings, when families have to hurry off to school and work. The following recipe for “Poached Eggs, Asparagus and Chorizo” from Betty Rosbottom’s “Sunday Brunch” (Chronicle Books) is a simple yet impressive morning entrée that’s sure to please hosts and their overnight guests.

Poached Eggs, Asparagus and Chorizo Serves 4

Ingredients:
1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 cup coarse fresh bread crumbs (see cooking tip)
4 ounces Spanish chorizo, cut into 1/2-inch cubes (use the Spanish-style chorizo in casing, not loose Mexican-style chorizo)
1 1/4 pound medium asparagus
Kosher salt
1 tablespoon unsalted butter, diced
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
2 to 3 tablespoons white or cider vinegar
4 eggs
Freshly ground black pepper
Directions:
1. Heat 1 tablespoon of the olive oil until hot in a medium, heavy frying pan set over medium heat. Add the bread crumbs and cook, tossing constantly, until golden and crisp, 3 to 4 minutes. Remove the crumbs to a plate. (Crumbs can be prepared 1 hour ahead; cover and leave at room temperature.)

2. Heat the remaining 1/2 tablespoon oil in the same frying pan set over medium heat. When hot, add the chorizo and stir until lightly browned, 3 minutes. Remove and set aside. (Chorizo can be prepared 1 hour ahead; leave at room temperature.)

3. Trim and discard 2 to 3 inches of the tough bases of the asparagus spears. Add the asparagus and 1 teaspoon salt to a large frying pan filled halfway with simmering water. Cook until the spears are just tender, 4 minutes. Drain and toss the asparagus in a large bowl with the butter and lemon juice. Season with salt and cover with foil.

4. Bring a large frying pan filled halfway with water to a boil. Add the vinegar and gently break each egg into a saucer and slide it into the water. Swirl the water with a wooden spoon while the eggs are cooking. Cook until the eggs are just set but the yolks are still soft, 3 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and drain well. (If you have an egg poacher, cook according to the manufacturer’s directions until the eggs are set.)

5. Mound some asparagus spears on each of four dinner plates. Top each serving with a poached egg and sprinkle with the chorizo and bread crumbs. Season the eggs with several grinds of pepper and a pinch of salt and serve.

Cooking tip: To make bread crumbs, use a 1- to 2-day-old, good-quality peasant or country bread with crusts removed. Process large chunks of it in a food processor to make coarse crumbs. Sourdough bread works particularly well.
