Judges recuse themselves from Newton County pay dispute

Lawsuit asks court to settle dispute — could cost county thousands

COVINGTON, Ga. – Senior Judge David Sweat of Athens will hear a case asking a court to settle a dispute over thousands in back pay which may be owed to two top Newton County officials.

The Newton County government has filed a lawsuit in Superior Court in Covington against the county commission chairman and Probate Court judge which asks a judge to determine which of two methods should have been used to calculate their pay Developer William B. Jones of Jackson has submitted a rezoning request and a conditional use permit to Newton County Development Services for the project on a 46-acre site at the southeast corner of I-20's exit to Ga. Plans include development of a 24,900-square-foot commercial travel center valued at $15 million.

Developers estimate the project will generate about 11,000 vehicle trips per day and bring about $3 million in annual tax revenue to the county.

A first phase of the project will

Hwy. 142 bridge replacement in Newton County at 'standstill'

By TAYLOR BECK tbeck@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — Replacement of the bridge on Georgia Hwy. 142 over the CSX railroad in Newton County has been prolonged.

In recent weeks, construction crews have been seen busting up the concrete bridge deck. Georgia Department of Transportation District Communications Specialist Kyle Collins said that was because the bridge deck "did not have an acceptable thickness, therefore it must be removed and replaced."

"What's happening now is crews (are) removing the stage 2 portion of the bridge all the way to the beams," he said. "They will have to reform the bridge, reinstall reinforcement in the concrete and re-pour the bridge deck."

But Collins said the project was at a "standstill" as of Wednesday, Oct. 21, due to damage of a beam that occurred during the recent demolition process. He said the GDOT bridge office now awaits the contractor's plan to fix the beam.

"This beam problem pushes back the timeline for other project items," Collins said.

The $14.1 million project officially began in December 2016, Collins said, and included 1.6 miles of widening and reconstruction for additional lanes on Hwy. 142, beginning at Interstate 20 and extending to Alcovy Road, prior to replacing the bridge.

Collins said the project's completion date was set for March 2020 but various bumps in the road have led to several delays.

"The project was (first) delayed due to a utility conflict with a sewer line and the earth wall at the bridge," he said.

Many construction items were finished by the end of spring while the summer was spent developing a plan to repair the bridge, Collins said. Once the bridge deck's thickness is corrected, Collins said the entire project would then be "topped, stripped, signals and shoulders completed."

"Tentatively, the majority of work to open to traffic, except grassing, won't be complete until early/spring 2021, we estimate," he said.

Collins said Southeastern Site Development, Inc. — the prime contractor — would be paying for repairs.

"They currently lose $1,191 each day the project isn't complete and open to traffic," he its living space after a wall was installed to separate male and female residents.

However, the remainder of the building was badly damaged and cannot be entered because of the danger it poses, she said.

Lett said the building's owner, the Covington Housing Authority, has insurance on the building but it will be weeks before the design and bid phases are completed and construction begins on repairs.

She also promised to account for all of the public money pledged to help the nonprofit.

"They will know where every dime goes," Lett said.

Covington City Council was set to vote on a budget amendment Friday night to provide the $30,000 it pledged to donate to the county government to aid the shelter.

It followed the council's narrow approval of giving the money to Newton County for donation to the shelter Monday, Oct. 19, and the Newton County Board of Commissioners' Tuesday, Oct. 20, vote to match the council's donation for a total of $60,000.

Mayor Steve Horton on Monday said County Chairman Marcello Banes reached out to him with the idea of making the donation.

"He was concerned with their ability to be able to fully meet the needs of those who are served right now," Horton said. "It cannot be done right now because they have one building that is significantly damaged."

Councilwoman Hawnethia Williams said a donation would honor the legacy of the late Sam Ramsey.

Ramsey was a former mayor and longtime businessman in Covington who died Aug. 25. He played an instrumental role in the development of Rainbow Community Shelter. "That was his baby, you might say," Williams said. "In honor of him, I would love for us to do that."

But Councilwoman Susie Keck and others voiced concerns about the donation.

"I understand we can't write a check to the homeless shelter," Keck said. "Can we write a check for materials for rehabbing the homeless shelter rather than writing a check to the county?"

Horton said paying for materials would also be a direct payment to the shelter.

City Attorney Frank Turner Jr. suggested either donating funds to the county or to the Covington Housing Authority, which is the shelter's landlord.

"I would just like to know it goes there," Keck said.

Keck's concern was not with the county's handling of the funds, but rather the shelter's officials, she said.

"The person over the shelter isn't going to get the money either," Councilman Kenneth Morgan said.

"(Horton) just said we — he — didn't know how it would be used," Keck said.

"Well, I mean, if we gave it to the county, however the county chooses to disperse it, we should be honored," Morgan said.

"Yeah, but I want to know that it's dispersed for the right cause, because monies that go to some of these shelters do not actually go to the actual people needing it," Keck said. "(There's mishandling of) funds all the time, and I just don't want to be a part of it."

When it came to a vote, council members Anthony Henderson, Morgan and Williams voted in favor of making the donation.

Keck, Councilman Don Floyd and Councilwoman Fleeta Baggett opposed making the donation — with each saying they wanted to be given more information first.

Horton then broke the tie by voting in favor of making the donation.

On Tuesday, Banes led the discussion of the Newton County Board of Commissioners' donation.

Commissioner J.C. Henderson suggested taking the money from Special Purpose Local Option Sales Tax funds.

County attorney Megan Martin said her research of laws governing SPLOST led her to recommend the donation not come from the special sales tax fund unless the county government owned the shelter's building.

Banes suggested the county's contribution come from contingency funds, which typically are reserved for such unforeseen costs as storm damage to public buildings or project cost overruns.

Commissioner Stan Edwards shared similar concerns as some city council members and suggested the county Emergency Management Agency be responsible for approving the shelter's individual expenditures as a "way to feedback to us official accountability" of the money.

Banes said he believed it might place an unfair burden on the small nonprofit as it worked to rebuild and care for its residents.

However, Commissioner Ronnie Cowan said it was "prudent" to seek a record of receipts directly from the shelter "rather than tying them up with the EMA."

County commissioners' unanimous approval included a requirement that shelter officials provide the county with receipts of individual expenditures of the approved funding.

Newton commissioner objects to plan to make future chairman highest paid

By TOM SPIGOLON tspigolon@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — At least one Newton commissioner is objecting to a plan to give the successor to the current chairman the highest salary of any elected county official.

Commissioner Nancy Schulz said she did not believe any person elected in the future as board of commissioners chairman to succeed Chairman Marcello Banes should be paid more than the sheriff who she said has considerably more duties.

The longtime commissioner was objecting to the first draft of legislation presented by county attorney Megan Martin Tuesday, Oct. 20, to revise the way the county is calculating top constitutional officers' salaries.

The plan will only affect the holders of any of the five county offices elected after Jan. 1, 2021. It will not affect elected officials elected before Jan. 1, 2021.

A judge will rule in a lawsuit filed in Newton County Supe-

Chairman Marcello Banes and Probate Court Judge Melanie

Bell say they discovered they are not being paid what state law says they should for constitutional officers in counties similar in population to Newton.

The county government says it backs the method it has used since local legislation was passed in 1994 that does not include cost of living allowances and longevity in calculating pay.

Banes and Bell contend they should be paid according to a calculation in state law that differs from the local legislation which could increase their pay by almost $100,000 each, according to calculations by their attorney, Stephanie Lindsey. On Tuesday, Martin said she needed commissioners' input to determine how the legislation should be written before she submits it to members of Newton County's delegation for introduction during the Georgia General Assembly's 2021 session beginning in January.

The local law now used calculates salaries based on the highest minimum salary of five county officials defined as Newton County officers in 1981 local legislation.

The plan keeps the chairman as one of the five Newton County officers. Others include the sheriff, clerk of courts, tax commissioner and probate court judge — called constitutional officers because the state constitution allows them to operate their offices independently from county government control.

Martin said the draft legislation establishes the chairman as the highest-paid official because

Elections chairman hopes for Election Day results

Data shows daily number of early voters increasing as wait times decline

By TOM SPIGOLON

tspigolon@covnews.com COVINGTON, Ga. — The county's election board chairman believes Newton will defy predictions heard elsewhere and have the local results of the Nov. 3 election the night following the closing of the polls.

Phil Johnson told the Newton County Board of Commissioners Tuesday, Oct. 20, the county elections board has a goal of publishing its election results the same night after the polls close at 7 p.m.

"We're not going to be one of those places where you have to wait days to get a result from," he told commissioners.

Afterward, Johnson said he was making the prediction based on the Elections & Registration Office already having all completed absentee ballots, received since September, scanned and ready to be counted Election

County elections officials began processing absentee ballots Monday, Oct. 19.

The state election board ruled in August that county election workers could begin processing but not counting absentee ballots two weeks and a day before Election Day Nov. 3. in-person at the Newton County Administration Building and an additional 9,883 absentee votes had been received in the elections office at the same location by Thursday, Oct. 22, Johnson said.

He said this year's number could exceed Newton County's 75% turnout seen in both the 2016 and 2012 elections. "This is going to be a turnout election," he told commissioners.

The number of Newton County voters likely will exceed the 2016 total as well because the voter rolls have swelled by 34% compared to four years ago, he said.

The 2016 total of 58,192 registered and active voters in 2016 has increased to 78,388 in 2020, officials said.

owed thousands in back pay.

Banes and Bell maintain they are each owed tens of thousands of dollars in back pay because each official's annual salary is less than what it should have been since they took office, according to current state law.

The chairman and judge said their salaries should have been calculated under a state law that uses the highest minimum annual salary of all constitutional officers in the county.

They contend the law states the highest minimum salary is calculated by adding base pay, local supplements, longevity pay and cost of living increases together. The four are called constitutional officers because the state constitution specifies their duties and minimum salaries — both of which the county government does not directly control.

Local legislation approved for Newton County in 1994 followed state law in how it was to calculate salary for the county's four constitutional officers, including the clerk of courts, sheriff, probate court judge and tax commissioner. It also included the chairman of the Board of Commissioners in its pay calculation.

The county says in its lawsuit its "custom and historical practice" follows the 1994 local law

OPINIONS

The Covington News

Small farming is charming but famine is alarming

f farming were to blow away in a .midwestern dust storm — as happened in the 1930s, the unaffected farmers today — unlike then would be hard put to take up the slack. The diaspora of displaced farm families who packed up everything into rickety old trucks and departed for the still functioning farmland of California where their reception was often less than gracious — is illumined in tome and song. John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" and Sis Cunningham's "How Can You Keep On Moving?" immortalized that time.

Back east many farms still functioned - those not repossessed due to lack of profitability, that is. For a host of reasons, the small family farm has passed into history.

Economics of scale: The business school philosophy that has justified so much financially engineered misery in the American social fabric-not to mention the decline in quality of the end product.

The American economic system has always fostered innovation. Some of the early farming devices the tractor, the cotton gin, the hay baler, the combine – are absolute genius in their utility and complexity. And many are still in use today. Only now a combine will cost upwards of $350,000, and a simple tractor in the $20,000 range. An excellent article on the true costs of farming in America is "The True Financial Cost of Modern Farming" by Jaclyn Krymowski published in Ag Daily's October 2020 issue.

My grandfather, who died in 1939, was, along with being the only doctor in his portion of the largest county in Virginia, a semi-successful small farmer. At its height he owned almost 300 acres that supported his wife and three children, a farm manager and his wife and three children and at any given time a hired hand or two. The latter did most of the heavy lifting while my grandparents hustled around the countryside treating wounds and pneumonia.

One year, according to Grandma, the farm made all of 36 cents.

Yet despite the dawnto-dusk (and beyond, for midnight house calls) nature of life in those benighted times, life was rich.

Their farm — initially a dairy and garden crop operation — sold a wide variety of products and had as unique a collection of buildings for a farm as I've seen anywhere.

At today's prices, they would cost millions.

There was the office, a one-story building with tall ceilings and lapped wood siding that my grandfather, Dr. Emerson, used as a mini-hospital.

There was the pumphouse, a hipped roof, stone affair with a tall metal tower and windmill which drew well water into the office and main house which, even then, had a flushable toilet and bath. Next to it was the lighthouse, where batteries were stored. There was the smokehouse, a small wooden building with fireplace where Grandma created some of the best country hams anywhere. Nearby was the woodshed, an open, tin-roofed structure sheltering logs and kindling for the smokehouse and fireplaces in the main house. Across a small dirt road that circled the farmhouse was the garage. It was a large square, white painted building with heavy oak floors that held one of the first cars in the county.

The land behind the main house sloped gently down to more level pastureland.

At pasture's edge a cluster of buildings: a stone stable where once two mules poked their heads out of round holes to be fed. A two-story feed barn where bales of hay were stored for the livestock.

And across from the stables, a corn house built of huge, slatted logs, ubiquitous tin roof, and bins for the corn to dry.

Behind the corn house and later, next to the stables was a hog pen. These would relocate periodically, but always at a remote due to odor issues.

Another open shed nearby sheltered at various times, hay balers, tractors, and eventually Grandma's 1941 Buick.

At the far edge of the pasture reposed the dairy barn; a long wood structure with stalls for 10 cows.

Next to this was the milk house. Metal siding and roof. Milk was stored for distribution to nearby communities.

A huge pasture beyond the dairy barn descended to a fishpond, where a dammed stream served as watering hole for the livestock and swimming hole for the kids. Later, when cigarettes became a fad, tobacco barns were erected at the edge of large fields for curing what would become the largest cash crop into the '70s. These 300 acres supported two families and a succession of renters who worked in the cotton mills of Danville and the furniture mills of Martinsville. The latter lived in small houses and cab-ins sprinkled about the property. All had The Covington News outhouses. Three had running water and two required fetching water from a nearby spring. The myriad farming operations: raising and canning fruits and vegetables, curing tobacco, smoking ham, milking, collecting eggs and butchering frying sized pullets and preparing a yearly Brunswick Stew in a large oblong iron pot in which beef, chicken, pork and a variety of vegetables were boiled over a slow wood fire, outdoors, for a day and a half. It was then consumed at a backyard gathering with the remainder canned for winter consumption.

Even as her children left for the wide world — my uncle became a doctor in the Air Force, saw the world and settled in Florida, my aunt married a dentist and moved to Danville, my mother married a merchant marine and moved to New York — part of them was anchored in this farm. Grandma continued living there into her 90s until the virtual blindness of macular degeneration limited her activity and sparked a fairly rapid decline. After my grandfather died, she built an identity around operating the farm. It sustained her and many others through lean times.

What if we restructured our economy so that such small farming operations could prosper?

What if pandemic assistance and Chinese tariff money fed into thousands of small farms, helping to recreate a lifestyle of spiritual abundance based on discipline, hard work and connection to the land?

What if such farms were part of a land trust with ownership limited to small acreage, so that a single uber farmer could not buy up other plots, undercut prices on those who wouldn't sell, and ultimately drive everyone off the land except themselves and a crew of hired hands? What if a large segment of our population lived and prospered in such a rich, stable environment? It's all about value. Do we value the rights of large operations to acquire all the property and then rent it out to others? It seems this system, dedicated to and favoring "economies of scale," nurtured and favored by banks, legal systems and the type of people who make deals on golf courses, is all about size success. The large frogs then get to eat the smaller ones; an economic system that favors — let's face it predators. Farmers have traditionally had a tough row to hoe. Weather spikes, insect and bird decimation of crops, banks quick to loan and just as quick to repossess, over-leveraged equipment costs, seed monopolies, fertilizer costs. If we keep as our central tenet that the people who feed us are worth preserving, then the benefits to all will be wondrous. They are, after all, the true American nobility. The DESIGN CON-SUMER: Jeff MacKenzie examines issues of design that citizen consumers use.

What will Election Day outcome bring to divided country?

he event which we'll see millions of Americans than two weeks away.

The 2020 General Election is certainly at hand as early voting has begun with large turnouts in most areas. In Georgia, at least, there have been few reports of any issues with the early voting process which is certainly a positive.

While there are many important races on the general election ballot, the contest which is certainly driving the bus has to be the presidential contest.

Our country is as divided as ever. It can be argued we are more divided now than any time since the Civil War. The Vietnam War split our country as well but what we are seeing in 2020 is somewhat unprecedented.

There is going to be approximately half of the country very upset when election night comes to a conclusion. One can only hope it will all be over by the morning of Nov. 4 but who knows. Even a repeat of what happened in 2000 is going to be more fuel onto an already burning fire. The rhetoric in our country has gotten ugly. It's a "you are either for us or against us" and it goes for those on both sides of the political aisle. Those on one side see their candidate as 100 percent right on every issue. The other side believes the same thing for their candidate. Both sides view the other as 100 percent wrong. Rallies dealing with various issues have become heated and even violent. How in the world did we get to this point? It's dependent upon whom you ask. Ask those on the right and they will quickly tell you it is all the left's fault. Ask those who lean left and they will quickly and loudly respond it is all President Trump's fault. So-called "news" media outlets have also contributed. With talk show hosts giving their opinions on a daily basis many viewers have the wrong impression they are watching a newscast. Those who still have a rational thought process realize the actual fault lies with both sides of the two-headed political monster that dominates this country. Some die-hard supporters of both the major political parties and the candidates representing them have gotten to the point where they are willing to fight you if you disagree.

A4

It's become somewhat dangerous to even express who you are for. Numerous people have reported signs expressing support for the candidate of their choice stolen from their yard. Even when the sign is replaced, it quickly disappeared again.

One person I know said not only was their sign stolen but the thief urinated on their front door to further drive home the point that the wrong candidate was being supported. In reality, it showed that some people are such idiots that they are likely a lost cause.

Which brings us to the outcome on election night. Will this powder keg of an election explode into violence? Typically, this is not the case. Even in the disputed 2000 election the battle was fought mainly by elected supporters of the two candidates and teams of lawyers.

I'm not sure things are going to be as calm post-election this time around. People are angry in this country. They are angry about many things. They firmly believe their side is right and the other side is wrong. There is no middle ground. It's going to take a special president to bring our country back together. In reality, it's unlikely to happen any time soon. Regardless of who wins on Nov. 3, half of our country is going to mad and crying foul over the outcome. The groundwork has already been set by both sides. Yet we are so divided right now that even a health crisis has turned political. People don't take stock in what doctors and scientists are telling us. They would rather believe what the political of their choice says, even if it goes directly against the doctors and scientists. We can only hope that things don't turn violent after the final votes are counted. We've had too much violence in recent months. My advice for the side which loses the presidential race is simple. Just begin working for 2024.

Meeting broadband demand in rural Georgia tough task

By DAVE WILLIAMS

Capitol Beat News Service ATLANTA — Rural Georgians from business owners to teachers to elected officials know one of the region's biggest challenges is inadequate internet connectivity, particularly amid a pandemic that is forcing people to stay home.

But the lack of population density in rural areas and high rates of poverty are combining to make extending high-speed broadband service into rural communities a daunting task. in June to expand its internet services to nearly 8,000 homes and businesses in Haralson and Carroll counties in West Georgia.

Carroll EMC launched broadband after a feasibility study showed that two-thirds of its members didn't have it, said Tim Martin, CEO of Carroll EMC.

"We started looking for partners," he said. "We found a local broadband provider, Global Telecom, that committed to us because they live here and know the need."

many rural communities even at the $20 rate, providers say such a high rate makes it hard for telecom companies to justify investing in broadband service to rural areas.

Michael Power, CEO of the Georgia Cable Association, said the list of states that have adopted the FCC rate for pole attachments includes regional neighbors Louisiana, North Carolina and Virginia.

"We believe if the PSC adopts a true cost-based formula, the EMCs will receive a pole rate that fairly ment rates before the PSC in hearings set for next month.

"We're going to bring a lot of facts and history to the table and evidence to show that a majority of states ... did in fact adopt the FCC formula or something close to it," Power said.

"We're going to show what the cost is to put the pole in the ground and the cost to maintain the pole," Chastain said. "All we want to do is recover the fair cost of [the providers] using our facilities."

The PSC is scheduled

GDOT launches anti-litter campaign

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

news@covnews.com ATLANTA — The average American produces five pounds of trash each day, which plays a part in the nearly $11.5 billion spent on litter clean-up in the U.S. each year.

With more than 50,000 miles of interstates and state routes across Georgia, there are many places litter could pile up and potentially cause damage if not disposed of properly.

The Georgia Department of Transportation (Georgia DOT) recently launched its new anti-litter campaign, "Keep It Clean Georgia." The statewide initiative is focused on preventing and eliminating litter by motivating Georgians and Peach State visitors to not only avoid littering in the first place, but also play an active role in protecting and maintaining the stunning views and rich landscapes that make Georgia the heart of the South.

"We are excited to support Georgia DOT's efforts with the Keep It Clean Georgia campaign and encourage all Georgians to do their part to help the Peach State remain a place we are proud to call home," Gov. Brian Kemp said. "As our state continues to grow and prosper, let's take the necessary steps toward eliminating litter, protecting our environment, and ensuring a bright and beautiful future for Georgia." Keep It Clean Georgia aims to stop the problem before it starts by educating Georgians on the impact litter has on roadway safety and aesthetics, the environment and economy, and encouraging them to take action to ensure that litter finds its rightful place. The campaign creatively further reminds Georgians that littering is inappropriate everywhere, moving beyond the state's roadway system to highlight images of Georgia's natural beauty from the mountains to the coast.

Through Keep It Clean Georgia, Georgia DOT is partnering with individuals, businesses, environmental organizations and state agencies like the Georgia Department of Economic Development and the Keep Georgia Beautiful Foundation to emphasize the importance of litter prevention and highlight the role teamwork plays in maintaining Georgia's natural beauty.

Georgians can join in the fight against litter today by:

• Securing litter in their cars with compact cans or trash bags;

• Bringing reusable bags to the grocery store or farmers market;

• Utilizing refillable water bottles and coffee mugs;

• Ensuring outdoor trashcans have tight-fitting lids to prevent garbage from being spread by weather or animals; and

• Setting a positive example by disposing of trash properly and encouraging others to do so as well.

The General Assembly passed legislation in June aiming to use Georgia's 41 electric membership corporations (EMCs) as the vehicle for addressing the problem.

House Bill 244 is a follow-up to a bill lawmakers enacted last year that authorized EMCs to enter the broadband business for the first time. Under this year's legislation, the state Public Service Commission (PSC) will decide how much EMCs can charge telecom providers for broadband attachments to their utility poles.

A dispute between the EMCs and providers over pole attachment fees has been a key obstacle in the way of delivering broadband to rural communities. It's a standoff policy makers say rural Georgia can no longer afford.

"COVID has shown the vulnerability of these folks who have to stay home from school and the businesses that can't expand," said state Rep. Ron Stephens, R-Savannah, chief sponsor of House Bill 244. "If they don't have broadband, they might as well not have power."

Some progress is being made on the rural broadband front. Comcast announced a $9 million investment Martin said the local schools are particularly anxious to get broadband service because of the pandemic.

"They couldn't even do virtual school," he said. "They had to send packets of work home." Martin said the project wouldn't have been possible without a $12.5 million federal grant, and that's been the rub.

Dennis Chastain, president and CEO of Georgia EMC, the trade association representing the local EMCs, said the sparse populations of rural communities in Georgia make broadband deployment into those areas difficult.

"Our density per mile is around 10 customers on average," he said.

On top of that, many of the people who live in rural areas are poor, Chastain said.

"No matter how bad they might like to have [broadband], they can't afford it," he said.

Another barrier to rural broadband deployment is that the Georgia EMCs are charging telecom providers $20 per pole per year on average for broadband attachments, well above the average of about $7 per pole set by the Federal Communications Commission.

While the EMCs say they can't afford to extend broadband into compensates them," he said. "We think this is the right approach."

Power said the EMCs could lower the pole attachment rates to $7 per pole and make up the difference from what they're charging now by adding only 50 cents to their average customer's monthly bill.

But Chastain said it's not that simple. He said the amount EMCs would have to raise customer bills would vary widely among the 41 individual companies, which face different economic circumstances.

For example, In the area served by Reidsville-based Canoochee EMC, the population density is only eight customers per mile, making extending broadband more expensive than in more densely populated communities.

Annual per-capita income in the area is only $19,000, said Lou Ann Phillips, CEO of Canoochee EMC.

"Our schools and medical services are suffering because we don't have [broadband]," she said. "[But] our [feasibility] study says it's going to cost $53 million. Where's it going to come from?"

The EMCs and telecom companies will get a chance to argue their cases on pole attachto decide pole attachment rates in mid-December. The new rates then would take effect next July 1.

The elections office also had received a total of 9,883 absentee ballots through Thursday, Oct. 22, he said.

said.

If they already had requested absentee ballots and did not bring them, officials were required to cancel the ballots and have voters sign affidavits, he said.

Election officials also must access the Secretary of State's online voter information portal to certify a voter's eligibility. The portal became overwhelmed the first two days as voters statewide poured into their counties' advance voting locations, Johnson said.

Three- and four-hour waits were not uncommon on the first few days, voters said.

Wait times then dropped considerably after Newton County officials increased to five check-in stations and the Secretary of State's office added online capacity to its portal, Johnson said.

He said wait times of about one hour and 45 minutes were the longest seen recently at the beginning of the day when people were already in line for the opening of the polls, Johnson said.

By 1 p.m. each day, wait times typically were about 90 minutes, he said.

"(Monday) by the end of the day our wait time was down to 55 minutes," Johnson said.

Upcoming times and locations for advance voting include:

• Today, Oct. 24, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Newton County Administration Building at 1113 Usher St. in Covington.

• A second advance voting site at Porter Memorial Branch Library at 6191 Hwy. 212 in Covington will be open Monday, Oct. 26, through Friday, Oct. 30, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

• The administration building will continue to be an advance voting site Monday, Oct. 26, through Oct. 30, with new hours of 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Newton County Board of Elections & Registration also is maintaining two secured lockboxes for completed absentee ballots, he noted.

Lockbox locations are:

• The north entrance of the administration building at 1113 Usher St.

• The sheriff's office's Westside Precinct at 3612 Salem Road in the Kroger Shopping Center.

Ballots must be received by 7 p.m. Election Day and must be returned to the issuing county in order to be counted.

Newton jobless rate rises as more county residents enter labor force

STAFF REPORTS news@covnews.com

COVINGTON, Ga. — Newton County's unemployment rate increased slightly in September compared to August as more residents entered the workforce.

More Newton Countians found jobs during the month but more residents also were listed as unemployed.

In addition, fewer residents filed first-time jobless claims.

According to a monthly Georgia Department of Labor report released Thursday, Oct. 22:

• The county's unemployment rate increased from 6.8% in August to 7.0% in September.

• A total of 235 Newton residents found jobs, with employment increasing from 46,695 in August to 46,930 in September.

• The county's labor force — the total of all employed residents and those actively seeking work — increased by 383 residents.

• An additional 148 residents were unemployed increasing from 3,405 in August to 3,553 in September.

• Fewer county residents filed initial unemployment claims. They decreased 15% from 2,497 in August to 2,122 in September.

Metro Creative Services More Newton Countians found jobs during the month of September, but more were also listed as unemployed.

September unemployment rates for counties surrounding Newton ranged from Rockdale at 7.6% to Jasper at 4.6%.

Georgia Labor Commissioner Mark Butler said the 30-county Atlanta metropolitan area — of which Newton is a part — also saw its labor force and employment increase in September.

In metro Atlanta, the unemployment rate increased 0.3 percentage points in September, reaching 6.7%. A year ago, the rate was 2.9%.

The labor force increased in September by 24,526 and ended the month with 3,000,950. That number is down 101,516 when compared to September of 2019.

Metro Atlanta finished the month with 2,798,801 employed residents. That number increased by 14,127 over the month but was down by 214,004 when compared to the same time a year ago.

The Atlanta area ended September with 2,749,700. jobs. That number increased by 15,100 from August to September but was down by 106,300 when compared to this time last year.

The number of unemployment claims went down by 21% in metro Atlanta. When compared to last September, claims were up by about 1,387%.

"Although we saw some negative metrics in certain MSAs, a majority of the areas saw increases in jobs, employed residents, and labor force," Butler said.

Area unemployment rates ranged from 4.0% in the Gainesville area, to 7.4% in the Albany area.

Georgia's overall September unemployment rate was 6.3%, up from 6.0% in August.

"We really need to push the tens of thousands of jobs that we have on our online job listing page Employ-Georgia.com. The more we fill these jobs the more our state can regulate and show positive numbers throughout all MSAs."

and regional planners about impacts on the area before beginning the process of county officials' review.

She said she anticipated the rezoning and conditional use permit being submitted to the county planning commission in January and possibly being considered for final approval by the board of commissioners by February.

Johnson added the River Cove Homeowners Association — representing residents of a residential area across I-20 from the project — already had contacted her office with concerns about the project.

County Commissioner Stan Edwards, whose district includes the site, has said on his Facebook page his concerns include the potential for increased crime, traffic, light pollution and demand on such services as law enforcement.

He did not immediately return a call for comment Friday, Oct. 23.

The Development of Regional Impact submission quoted Johnson as saying traffic improvements will be needed in the area to accommodate the project.

Johnson stated in the submission that a traffic signal will be needed at the exit, and a tree line will need to be cleared south of the project's driveway to provide sight distance, according to the submission.

"The development proposes (construction of) right-turn lanes at both driveways and a left-turn lane at the south driveway," the submission stated.

However, Johnson said today any project would need approval from the Georgia Department of Transportation for signalization and other changes because it is on a state-maintained highway.

A 54,000-square-foot second phase also is planned for "future development" and will include "big box" retail development with nine individual tenant spaces, according to plans.

Completion of the first phase is expected by December 2021, with completion of both phases by the end of 2023.

A total of 19 acres will be developed and covered with impervious surfaces, according to submitted plans.

Developers plan to keep natural buffering already in place along the north side of the project to screen truck parking from I-20 and the project will be set back 100 feet from Hwy. 11, according to a rezoning petition the developer submitted to Newton County.

The site is between the city of Social Circle and Hub Junction, near Georgia State University's Newton Campus. It now has some small convenience stores in the area but nothing of the size Jones Petroleum is planning.

County.

Less than a year later, her dream has come to fruition with The Wildflower Collective.

The Wildflower Collective is a beauty salon that specializes in hair color, customized extensions and spa services. They're Covington's one-stop shop for coloring, cutting, extensions, lashes, facials and much more.

The business officially opened its doors to the public on Sept. 1, just 10 months after its owner's vision was set into motion.

"This whole thing just happened kind of out of the blue," Davenport said. "I knew that it was something I was interested in doing, but never did I imagine it would happen so quickly after leaving my 9-to-5."

Davenport saw a need in Newton County. With no specialized salons to speak of in the area, she wanted to provide locals with a beauty care option that didn't re-who assist with shampooing and answering phones.

One of the unique offerings the business has is a tailored experience. Each stylist is a subcontractor, meaning they all possess the ability to operate individually. Consequently, customers can sift through the salon's social media pages and determine which artist's style matches the vision they have for what they'd like done.

"We're a collective, so we like to look at ourselves as artists. Everybody here kind of specializes in their own thing. We're all different," Davenport said. "None of us are really competitive with each other. We all support one another and it really makes a beautiful experience and an amazing work environment. In this industry, you don't find that very often."

Another pillar of business at The Wildflower Collective is the sale of R + Coproducts. The sustainable,

The first two months have been successful, but the employees of The Wildflower Collective hope to continue cementing themselves as the go-to spot for beauty care in Covington.

"We just want people to feel the energy that we feel when we walk in here," Davenport said. "This is our happy place. I think most of the people that come here feel that way as well."

For announcements, updates and more general information, Davenport encourages people to reach out to The Wildflower Collective on Facebook or on Instagram at @the_wildflowercollective.

"We have some exciting stuff that could be coming here soon that's in the works," Davenport hinted. "I can't go into too much detail about it, but we have some really cool possibilities coming that people should keep an eye out for."

The Wildflower Collective is a collection of local artists, specializing in customized hair coloring, extensions and lashes as well as offering relaxing salon and spa services. We strive to stay on top of new trends and services.

NOTICE OF SUMMONS & EFFECT OF TERMINATION JUDGMENT TO WHOM IT MAY

CONCERN and Lyndy Clark:

GEORGIA LAW provides that you can permanently lose your rights as a parent. A petition to erminate parental rights has been filed requesting the court to terminate your parental rights to your child. A court hearing for your case has been scheduled for the 7th day of December, 2020, at 10:00 a.m., at the Putnam County Courthouse, Eatonton, Georgia. A copy of the petition may be obtained by the parents from the Clerk of the Juvenile Court at Morgan County Courthouse, Monroe, Georgia, during regular business hours, Monday through Friday, 9:00 o'clock am until 5:00 o'clock p.m., exclusive of holidays. A free copy shall be available to the parent. Upon request, the copy will be mailed to the requester - parents or alleged parents only. The allegations concern your failure to comply with your reunification case plan, abandonment, and failure to address dependency issues affecting your child.

IF YOU fail to appear, the court can terminate your rights in your absence. If the court at the trial finds that the facts set out in the petition to terminate parental rights are true and that termination of your rights will serve the best interest of your child, the court can enter a judgment ending the rights to your child. If the judgment terminates your parental rights, you will no longer have any rights to your child. This means that you will not have the right to visit, contact, or have custody of your child or make any decisions affecting your child or your child's earnings of property. Your child will be legally freed to be adopted by someone else. Even if your parental rights are terminated: (1) fou will still be responsible for providing financial support (child support payments) for your child's care unless and until your child is adopted; and (2) Your child can still inherit from you unless and until your child is adopted. THIS IS a very serious matter. You should contact an attorney immediately so that you can be prepared for the court hearing. You have the right to hire an attorney and have him or her represent you. If you cannot afford to hire and attorney, the court will appoint an attorney if the court finds that you are an indigent person. DEVILS GO DOWN

Eastside triumphs over region rival Loganville

By MASON WITTNER mwittner@covnews.com

LOGANVILLE, Ga. — Debt repaid.

On the road against Clarke Central last week, Eastside's offense was called upon to produce enough fireworks to overcome a lackluster performance on the defensive end. The Eagles came up short, but the offensive unit received praise from players, coaches and spectators alike for the effort.

On Friday night, the Eagle defense returned the favor.

Eastside traveled to Red Devil Stadium to rekindle the flames of an old rivalry with Loganville. After taking an early lead, the Eagles leaned on their defense to hold their ground for the next three quarters as they squeaked out a 7-3 region victory.

It wasn't the prettiest of wins, but Eastside head coach Troy Hoff will still gladly take it.

"We challenged the kids

That's it," Hoff said. "We definitely didn't play our best football [Friday night.] Hat's off to Loganville, man. They played their butts off and played a physical football game. We had to earn every inch tonight."

The Eagles (5-2, 3-1 Region 8-AAAAA) were clinging to a seven-point advantage mid-way through the third quarter when a gaffe put the defense in a bind.

Eastside attempted to punt the ball, but miscommunication led to a botched play as Loganville senior Neto Okpala, a Boston College commit, pounced on a fumble. Okpala's recovery set the Red Devils up on the Eastside 34-yard line. Six plays later, freshman kicker Devin Pugh drilled a 29-yard field goal to trim Loganville's deficit to 7-3 with 4:10 left in the quarter.

A special teams miscue allowed the Red Devils (2-4, 1-2) to threaten once again in the fourth quarter. After a punt bounced off an Eastside player, extending its drive, Loganville worked its way into the red zone. But the Eagles bowed up, stuffing a run play on fourth down to force a turnover with less than six minutes to go in regulation.

Even still, the work was not yet done for Eastside's defense.

Loganville's final drive of the night saw the Red Devils take over on their own 36 and begin pounding away on the ground. Appearing to take advantage of a gassed unit, Loganville eventually set itself up with a first down on the Eastside 11 with 56 ticks of the clock remaining.

Once again, Eastside's defense stepped up.

The Eagles stuffed a run before defending three straight passes to thwart the last-minute attack and pull out the victory.

"We've got to take care of us a little better. We've got to coach a little better. But our defense right there in the second half did a hell of a job," Hoff said.

Eastside was gifted favorable field position on each of its first two drives of the night.

The Eagles won the coin toss and elected to receive the opening kickoff. They returned the kick out to near midfield before being aided by a personal foul penalty, which set them up on the

Prep Softball - Playoffs Lady Rams knocked out by Lowndes

STAFF REPORTS news@covnews.com

VALDOSTA, Ga. – Newton's 2020 softball season came to an end Tuesday night.

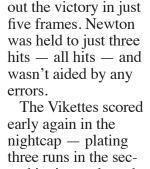

The No. 4 Lady Rams were swept out of the first round of the Class AAAAAAA state playoffs by No. 1 Lowndes in a bestof-three series. The Vikettes took Game 1, 9-0, before finishing the job with an 11-1 victory in Game 2.

The first leg of Tuesday's doubleheader got out of hands almost as quickly as it began.

After retiring Newton's batters in order in the first inning, Lowndes came to the plate ready to swing away. The Vikettes started off the frame with a double from Tori Hedgecock, who later scored on a fielding error. Their biggest blow three at-bats later, when Lexi Metts clobbered a three-run home run to left field to make it 4-0.

three runs in the second inning and another pair in the third —but this time it was a late push that sent them over the top. Sitting on a 6-1 lead in the sixth inning, run-scoring knocks from Katelyn Lane, Auriell Reavis and Hedgecock effectively put the game out of reach.

Newton finished the year at 17-12 overall. Among key moments from the campaign were victories over county rival Eastside and defending state champions Locust Grove and Banks County, as well a thrilling extra-inning affair against Mountain View.

Redskins slip at Lincoln County

By GARRETT PITTS Correspondent

LINCOLNTON, Ga. — A fourth quarter safety doomed the Social Circle Redskins as they fell to Lincoln County in an A Public Region 8 matchup Friday night by a score of 36-20.

After losing their region opener the week before, Social Circle was looking to get back on track and pick up their first region win as they took the long trip east to play the Lincoln County Red Devils who were 4-2 going into the game.

Through majority of the first half, the Red Devils' secondary shut down the Redskins wideouts, making it hard for Social Circle to generate anything offensively early on.

The stout defensive play allowed Lincoln County to get on the board first by scoring on a nine-yard touchdown rush by Red Devils running back CJ Zellars, which put Social Circle down 6-0 after a missed extra point.

After being held to a fourth down by the Red Devils' defense, the Social Circle snap went over the punter's head and the ball was downed inside the Redskins' 20-yard line giving Lincoln County excellent field position to start their next drive.

The Red Devils' offense did not let the good field position go to waste as they marched down the field and get in for the score on a quarterback sneak by Keenon Lampkin to extend the Lincoln County lead to 13-0 going into the second quarter.

Following another Social Circle punt, the Red Devils put the ball in the air for one of the few times in the first two quarters as Lampkin found wideout Johnny Loganville 39. They were ultimately unable to capitalize, however, as the drive ended with a missed field goal from 33 yards out.

Loganville's first possession of the night ended with a botched punt, allowing the Eagles to take over on the Red Devil 30. This time, the Eagles made the most of their short field.

After sneaking inside the the red zone on just two plays, Eastside capped off a six-play drive as senior running back Sincere Johnson took the snap in wildcat formation and powered his way into the end zone for the four-yard rushing touchdown. The score gave the Eagles a 7-0 lead with 4:42 left in the quarter.

From that point on, offense remained at a premium. The teams goal apiece.

After back-to-back nail-biting finishes, Eastside's bye week couldn't come at a more opportune time. The Eagles will return to the gridiron on Thursday, Nov. 5, when they welcome Jackson County to Sharp Stadium.

Social Circle quarterback Logan Cross threw two touchdown passes in the Redskins' loss against region foe Lincoln County on Friday.

Wise deep for the 69-yard touchdown pass to extend the Lincoln County lead by a score of 20-0.

After capitalizing on a Social Circle punt miscue earlier in the game, Lincoln County had one of their own as they mishandled the snap of a punt and gave the ball back to the Redskins inside of the Red Devils' five-yard line.

The Redskins answered at the goal line with a one-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Logan Cross to Mason Moore as the two sophomores helped cut the Lincoln County lead to 20-7 at halftime.

Going into the locker room down by two scores, the Redskins looked to feed off momentum from the late first half touchdown and start chipping at Lincoln County's lead in the second half.

Social Circle got a much-needed turnover on the Red Devils' first offensive drive of the second half when Lampkin's pass was tipped and intercepted by Tucker Clearly to start the Redskins' next possession in Lincoln County territory.

Cross wasted no time as two plays later he found senior wideout Eric Taylor deep in the corner of the endzone for a 35-yard touchdown pass to bring the Redskins closer by a score of 20-14.

After holding the Red Devils to a quick three-and-out on their next drive, Taylor came through on special teams to block the punt and recover it in the endzone for a Social Circle touchdown. After the missed extra point attempt, both teams were tied at 20 going into the final quarter.

After holding the Red Devils to a turnover on downs inside the Redskins five-yard line, the bad starting field position for Social Circle bit them as Cross was sacked for a safety to give two points and the ball back to Lincoln County, trailing 22-20 with eight minutes left in regulation.

With the ball and the lead, the Red Devils kept the football on the ground and milked the clock down to just over two minutes before scoring on a one-yard rush by Colton Willis to extend the lead to 29-20.

Before the final seconds would tick off the clock, Lincoln County added another score on a 67-yard run by Tevin Gartrell to seal the victory.

With the loss, Social Circle drops to 2-5 on the season and 0-2 in region play.

After dropping their second straight game, the Redskins will have a week off to recharge before hosting another region matchup against the Commerce Tigers on Friday, Nov. 6.

A loyal dog Smart backs Bennett despite

Smart backs Bennett despite shaky play against Alabama

By CHARLES ODUM The Associated Press

An unexpected open week would be the perfect opportunity to consider changes following

No. 4 Georgia's ugly loss to Alabama.

was no indication from coach Kirby Smart on Tuesday that a change is coming at quarterback.

Asked if Stetson Bennett is still Georgia's starter, Smart said "Like I have talked about before, I feel great about Stetson. He's done a good job of managing the situations we have put him in."

Bennett threw three interceptions while completing only 18 of 40 passes for 269 yards with two touchdowns in the Bulldogs' 41-24 loss to No. 2 Alabama on Saturday.

Smart stuck with Bennett even as Georgia failed to score in the second half.

Georgia's game at Kentucky, originally scheduled for this week, was pushed back to Oct. 31 as the Southeastern Conference adjusted to the coronavirus pandemic. That gives the Bulldogs (3-1) a week off to regroup. D'Wan Mathis and JT Daniels could see more practice snaps with the No. 1 offense this week. Smart said off weeks are a time to change the normal routine of giving starters 78% of snaps with the firstteam offense. "This week, we will get to get a lot of guys reps," Smart said. "JT will get reps, D'Wan will get reps, Stetson will continue to get reps. We try to develop our roster. ... It just gives a chance to give more guys work and see where they are in their progress. That's true at every position and true at quarterback."

by his recovery from a knee injury following his transfer to Georgia. Daniels has yet to make his Georgia debut.

Mathis started Georgia's opener against Arkansas before Bennett led the team to a comeback win and kept the job.

Bennett drew positive reviews for his early season play, including in Georgia's win over then-No. 14 Tennessee, but he struggled against the Crimson Tide. Though he remained supportive of Bennett, Smart also said the former walk-on must do a better job of stepping up in the pocket and avoiding passes into coverages.

The 5-foot-11 Bennett had some passes deflected at the line, possibly leading him to scramble on other plays when he should have remained in the pocket. Smart said the tipped passes may have affected Bennett's decisions.

"But it's one of those things every good quarterback finds," Smart said. "You look all across the league, in the NFL, in college football, height is not the greatest indicator of batted balls. The ability to use the pocket is, and a lot of that comes from experience." Smart said former Georgia quarterback Jake Fromm "was really good" at knowing when to step up in the pocket to avoid pressure. "He could feel the pocket opening and step up in the pocket and either run or make a throw," Smart said. "We continue to work with Stetson on that. He's shown the ability to do that. He didn't always trust it Saturday. He's got good pass protectors around him." The three interceptions thrown by Bennett were his first of the season. "I just didn't play well enough," Bennett said after the game. "I have to figure out how to not give bad balls, have to figure out how to not throw interceptions and how to score points in the second half."

Tide overpowers Georgia

Dawgs have extra week to bounce back against Kentucky

By JOHN ZENOR The Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — A positive COVID-19 test couldn't keep Nick Saban from the sideline, and Georgia's heralded defense had scant hope of keeping Alabama's playmakers out of the end zone.

Mac Jones passed for 417 yards and four touchdowns and the No. 2 Crimson Tide picked apart No. 3 Georgia in the second half of a 41-24 victory Saturday night. It ended up being a decisive 'Bama victory in a collision of the Southeastern Conference's last remaining unbeaten teams.

The Crimson Tide (4-0), with Saban stalking the sideline after all, rallied with three touchdowns in a 10-minute span starting late in the third quarter. The nation's top scoring offense ultimately got the emphatic upper hand in a battle with the Bulldogs (3-1) and one of the nation's best defenses. "This was an obvious great win against a very, very good football team," said Saban, who was cleared early in the day after a false COVID positive. "I was very proud of the way our guys fought in the game. "I sort of knew it was going to be a 15-round fight and we wouldn't be winning until the late rounds." Georgia had no answer for Jones and star receivers Jaylen Waddle and DeVonta Smith, especially with Alabama's own beleaguered defense grabbing two second-half interceptions and three overall. Freshman Malachi Moore had one at the goal line and returned it 42 yards. Smith caught 11 passes for 167 yards and two touchdowns, including one in the fourth quarter that effectively put it out of reach.

Waddle caught a 90-yard touchdown pass and gained 161 yards on six catches. Jones completed 24 of 32 passes and was strong after an interception on the opening play.

"The goal was just to win the game," Jones said. "You can look at their defense. They have good players in the secondary, they have good linebackers, they have good defensive linemen but so do we."

Then there was some oldschool ground and pound, too. Najee Harris gained 152 yards on 31 carries carries with a touchdown during that game-clinching span. He did it against the nation's top run defense, which came in allowing 38 rushing yards and 12.3 points per game.

Stetson Bennett completed 18 of 40 passes for 269 yards and two touchdowns, including an 82-yarder to James Cook. But he threw three interceptions. Bennett was angry with himself over his mistakes, especially that final interception throwing across his body, calling it "just stupid." SEC championship game the following season.

This was the first one that didn't go down to the wire. Georgia's defense allowed 564 yards.

"Just frustrated we couldn't get anything going in the second half, especially that opening drive," Smart said. "I thought we were going to be able to run the ball and we stalled out and lost momentum after that point, especially after they hit the big long bomb to Waddle."

REMATCH, PLEASE?

The Bulldogs left hoping for a rematch in the SEC championship game, certainly a strong possibility.

"That's what everybody was saying in the locker room," Bennett said. "Our destiny is still controlled by us. We win out, we'll be in the SEC championship. Everything is still ahead of us."

"I was frustrated with myself," the former walk-on said.

Alabama got a boost about seven hours before the game when the SEC cleared coach Saban to return to business of usual, determining a Wednesday COVID test was a false positive. He tested negative Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"That was very emotional," he said.

"It was very crazy," Jones said. "We were in our little quarterback meeting and he just showed up."

A maskless Saban was yelling at a referee after an intentional grounding call in the second quarter.

The Tide has won the last six meetings with Georgia, including a 3-0 record against Saban's former defensive coordinator, Kirby Smart. The first two came in the January 2018 national championship game and the

THE TAKEAWAY

Alabama: The defense remains more generous than is standard in Tuscaloosa, but it did deliver some big plays. The offense just continues to roll along, and those receivers just appear unstoppable. Saban is now 22-0 against his former assistants.

Georgia: Led 24-20 deep into the third quarter and gained a solid 410 yards. But the defense that had been so suffocating more than met its match.

POLL IMPLICATION

Clemson hasn't done anything to weaken its claim to the top spot, but perhaps Alabama's decisive win will close the gap some. Georgia probably won't fall much past the Top 10.

UP NEXT

Georgia visits Kentucky on Oct. 31, which is fresh from a big win over Tennessee.

Alabama visits traditional rival Tennessee.

It could be an important week for Daniels, the former USC starter who was at first limited

Morris making most of interim opportunity

By PAUL NEWBERRY Associated Press

ATLANTA – Raheem Morris would prefer that everyone stay away from the "I" word.

Sure, he's officially the interim head coach of the Atlanta Falcons, a caretaker role handed to him by a team that fired Dan Quinn after losing its first five games.

But Morris refuses to look at himself in a temporary sort of way. "I don't correct you guys every day because I'm angry at anybody," he said Wednesday on a conference call with reporters. "If you're in the moment of being an interim head coach, then you'll be an interim head coach. ... I'm focused on being the head coach of the Atlanta Falcons." Morris' second chance at a top job is off to a promising start. The Falcons finally picked up their first win of the season, romping past the Minnesota Vikings 40-23. If Morris can conjure a few more performances like that one out of his team, he might earn serious consideration at keeping the job beyond this season.

The Falcons (1-5) will go for their second straight victory when Atlanta picked up its first win of the season one week after firing Dan Quinn and moving forward with Raheem Morris (pictured) as interim head coach.

they host the Detroit Lions (2-3) on Sunday.

"I'm being in the moment of going 1-0 this week," Morris said.

He got his first head coaching gig more a decade ago, surprisingly taking over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers at age 33 after Jon Gruden was fired.

Even though the Bucs posted a promising 10-6 mark in Morris' second season, just missing the playoffs, he went 3-13 and 4-12 his other two years. He was fired after Tampa Bay ended 2011 with a 10-game losing streak.

When he allows himself a reflective moment, Morris knows he's better prepared to handle the job this time around.

He points to all the head coaches he's worked with over the years, from Gruden to Quinn to Mike Shanahan. He brings up his longstanding relationship with Pittsburgh Steelers coach Mike Tomlin, "one of my better friends in life." He lists all the fellow assistants who went on to become head coaches, from Sean McVay to Kyle Shanahan to Matt LaFleur. He's even provided advice to coaches-in-waiting such as Eric Bieniemy, who could very well could be in the running to take over the Falcons when the season is done.

"I think the development over the last couple of years has been really beneficial to me," Morris said. "It really helped me."

While the 44-yearold Morris is hardly a new face — he was on Quinn's staff from the beginning in 2015 and most of the Falcons assistants remain the same, there is an attempt to change the mindset of a team that became the first in NFL history to lose backto-back games when leading by at least 15 points in the fourth quarter.

"When we go out to practice, I want to make the game come to life," Morris said. "Everything we do has to simulate a game-like atmosphere."

When a player messes up, he can expect to get called out.

Right on the spot. "I want to make them uncomfortable," he said. "I want them getting used to that. Things are going to happen in the game. You're going to get tired, things aren't going to go your way, the other team is going to score a touchdown. You want to bounce back, get comfortable being uncomfortable, and find a way to force your will on the opponent."

It worked in Morris' first game. It remains to be seen if the Falcons can maintain that sort of urgency on a consistent basis, especially when playing better teams than the one-win Vikings.

"Raheem is a guy who connects with everybody, for sure," quarterback Matt Ryan said. "He's blunt, matter of fact, and gets to the point. That's his personality type, that's his style. You've got to buy into what the head coach is preaching."

Morris is considered a long shot to keep the job beyond this season.

Clearly joking but with an element of truth, owner Arthur Blank set a pretty high bar for Morris to have any chance of being considered in the coaching search.

"If Raheem ends up 11-0," Blank said with a sly smile, "he'll certainly be a candidate."

Morris' first win as the head coach don't say interim merely left him hungry for more. He didn't even take time to savor a game ball the players presented to him after beating the Vikings.

"You hate looking at it until you can get another one," he said. "You grow and look for the next moment."

AMONG THE TOP 5 BREAST CANCER PROGRAMS IN THE U.S.

Megan McKee, MD

Jonae Perrin, PA-C

Atlanta Cancer Care (ACC) is affiliated with Northside Hospital Cancer Institute (NHCI). NHCI diagnoses and treats more breast cancer cases than any other hospital in the Southeast and is one of the nation's leading providers of breast cancer diagnostic and treatment services. NHCI's Breast Cancer Program is accredited by the National Accreditation Program for Breast Centers.

ACC provides hope through compassionate, personalized and evidence-based cancer care, right here in our local community.

Dr. McKee is passionate about women's health issues. She remains up-to-date on cutting-edge treatments through attendance at the international San Antonio Breast Cancer Symposium each year and multidisciplinary breast tumor conferences each month. Dr. McKee has been involved with breast cancer research since 2010 and has published on topics such as factors affecting adherence to endocrine therapy, and transitional work relating to a tumor's microenvironment and potential response to immunotherapy.

ACC utilizes an empowerment approach.

Navigating complex treatment options in this new era of cancer care may seem daunting. However, Dr. McKee and Jonae believe in utilizing an empowerment approach to engage and support cancer survivors in making decisions that fit best for their own personal situation, values and goals. They believe that a key to success in the shared decision-making and treatment planning process is establishing a trusting relationship, offering a supportive care team and clinic environment, and providing comprehensive education about the diagnosis and available treatment options.
